Dulles Insists Anti-Red PoW Must Be Freed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dulles declared today that all anti-Communist prisoners of war held by the neutral nations' repatriation commission in Korea should be given their freedom and civilian status on Jan. 22.

Indian Prime Minister Nehru had recently suggested that the question of release of the PoWs should be considered anew by both sides in the Korean controversy if the proposed political conference does not take place.

Dulles made clear in a statement that the United States rejects this Nehru suggestion and feels that provisions of the Korean armistice agreement covering PoWs must be carried out to the letter.

Mayor Says Bylaw on Curbs Will Not Be Enforced in 1953

TRENTON (Special) — Curbs on McColl Street are still standing today and according to Mayor and Council will still be standing for an indefinite period or until a future Mayor and Council decide to enforce Bylaw 952L, dealing with obstructions built on town property and road allowances.

Bylaw 952L was authorized by four to three vote a week ago last night when Mayor R. E. Whitley was called on to cast the deciding vote and Senator W. A. Fraser insisted that view of the property be considered by the various sections of the ruling.

Those now affected are Gerald Weaver, F. J. Aziz and J. Vanderdeist, all residing on McColl Street in the west part of Trenton.

In a surprise announcement today Mayor R. E. Whitley, a supporter of Bylaw 952L, said: "Bylaw 952L was passed to assure the people of Trenton that the council has the right, without any doubt, to remove any obstruction from a municipal property. No action will be taken by council on McColl street, or any other street, until a report from the traffic committee and the planning board and the town engineer has been received and studied. We cannot have an overall picture on the matter before next year."

The Mayor added: "These committees have been requested to formulate a policy on the width of the travel surface, the necessity for one or two sidewalks and curbing on town streets. Council is in no position to make any alterations or improvements on McColl street this year. But it is hopeful that next year's council will consider paving McColl street and several other streets during 1954."

Concluding his statements referring to people who were affected by Bylaw 952L, the Mayor said: "The parties who received letters from the town and who built obstructions on town property during the year 1952 without the knowledge of council, owe the 1953 council an apology."

Council later view on enforcing the bylaw were suggested and supported by Councillors Hamilton, D. MacPherson and R. Armstrong. However, were overdefeated when Mayor Whitley backed the wishes of Councillors E. James, J. MacDonald and C. Gunter.

A letter from the town solicitor, H. R. Park, gave violators the alternative of removing obstructions themselves or paying for the town to remove them. They had 10 days notice which terminated at midnight Monday.

Rev. F. Sneyd, Toronto, Guest Minister at 80th Anniversary

The Victoria Avenue Baptist Church welcomed to their pulpit as guest preacher on Sunday, the Rev. Robert Sneyd, of Calvary Baptist Church, Toronto. This was the occasion of their 80th anniversary.

A native of Port Hope, Mr. Sneyd became the minister of Calvary Baptist Church before he graduated from McMaster University and this year has seen a new church building dedicated to the glory of God.

SPIRITUALITIES

Mr. Sneyd's morning subject "Being Two Human" was based on the Scripture Romans 8:13. He pointed out that living the natural life is also to live sinfully. "By education, restraint and training, we learn to live well into society. It is only when we come into touch with Christ and make Him our Lord that we rise to the life spirit and find life in peace."

Taking as his evening's subject "Preaching for the Possible" his opening remarks were: "I wonder if Jesus would say the same to the people today as He said in His day. I believe He would say "Oh faithless generation" as He said in His day. "Jesus said if you do not believe in earthly things how can you believe in heavenly things?"

He went on to point out that the impossible things are being done everyday. Men's dreams have become a reality. Some of the fantastic comics the scientists have dreamed up and put into print years ago have today come to pass, such as the jet planes and fast moving ships.

IMPOSSIBLE THINGS

"We should not just believe things are right, we should know they are right," he said. "Jesus did not fit into the life of God are impossible. We have that if we do not in a sweepstake ticket that we shall not win any money. We should be satisfied in our lives that we will be stable and the secret of accomplishing the things in life is the assurance that God the Almighty is with us.

"Jesus said if the kind of people we could be if only we had faith. He said unto said Jesus, 'with things are possible to him, who believeth.'"

EVENING MUSIC

Miss Doreen Groves, soloist for the morning service, sang "The Twenty Third Psalm", while the choir rendered a selection in the evening. "The Radiant Morn Hath Passed Away" and in the evening "Great Is Thy Faithfulness" and "Love Divine" directed by the choir leader Miss Dorothy Reilly.

Centenary School Pupils Will Get New Building

Pupils of the Centenary public school in Sidney township are going to get a new school and all because the Ontario Department of Highways has a new four-lane highway under construction in that district.

The new highway right-of-way does not take in the school property but land required for the approach or an overhead crossover does and the 30-year old school building will have to come down. Negotiations are now underway between the highways department and the school board regarding the sale of the present school and school grounds to the department of highways.

Board members are planning a modern two-roomed public school which is expected will be completed in time for the opening of school term in September 1954. Site for the new school has not yet been definitely decided.

Two residences on the south side of the new highway right-of-way will also have to be moved to provide for the highway crossover.

Neighbors Plan To Build Barn For Robt. Irwin

Thanks to the good neighbor spirit Robt. Irwin of Bonarlaw, will have a barn which was burned last week rebuilt before the winter.

Monday neighbors went to the woods, cut trees and skidded logs for hauling to the Carman Redden sawmill at Stanwood. The logs will be sawed into lumber to be used for the erection of a new barn.

Mr. Irwin's barn was burned Friday night together with threshing outfit, tollage cutter and other farm machinery owned by the late Wilson Lee Owens. No feed or stock was lost as the barn was used only for storage of machinery.

The barn burned Friday evening and neighbors had been working about the building during the day laying a new concrete floor.

Northern Electric Inter Department Hockey League

Over the week-end two games were played in the N.E. inter-Department hockey league with the Idiots, led by Dave Jones the whistling ace Hot Shots 8-3. The Buzzers and the Dragnets battled to a 6-6 tie.

Dave Jones came up with five goals and a pair of assists for the Idiots while Whalen had two goals. Philps claimed the odd marker.

Pucsuik had two of the losers goals and Brant banged in the other.

Bedard led the Buzzers attack hitting the hemp on two occasions with Day and Cotten also scoring. Woodley was the top man for the Dragnets with a pair of goals. James and Mulvihill notched the remaining two.

The Hot Shots withdrawn from the league for this season leaving five other teams. A repeat schedule will be completed in a few days.

AN ENCOURAGING EXAMPLE

Employees of the Canada Cement Company at Point Anne are to be congratulated. Their action in raising $7,000 to provide a visitors' waiting room at the new Belleville General Hospital gives excellent leadership in two distinct ways.

Firstly, of course, there is $7,000 worth of evidence that these workers appreciate the need for a larger hospital and are ready—even eager—to pay their share of the cost.

But perhaps more important, there is also an example set in the adoption by the Canada Cement employees of a certain well-defined portion of the building. The waiting room is where their money will be spent.

There is something really gratifying in seeing exactly what your money has accomplished, in realizing that you and a group of your close associates have been solely responsible for some worthwhile project.

Why should the employees of other firms select certain portions of the building or equipment units and then endeavor to raise sufficient funds to make this selected section his actuality?

BOO! TO BEVAN

Aneurin Bevan, fiery leader of the Labor Party's left wing in Great Britain has charged that the British press is the reason why British people are "among the most ignorant in the world" and "practically insane." He went on to tell a political rally that the average British working man is a sort of intellectual midget.

Bevan went on to take the press with the following verbal broadside: "They are no longer newspapers. They are power-papers, used not for the purpose of communicating news but for the purpose of creating ideas and concealing from people the things they ought to know."

Such was not always the case, however, if we are to judge from the columns of Bevan's paper.

"For the first three or four years after the war the British people were comparatively sane. Now they are practically insane," he said.

For the first three or four years after the war the Labor Party nationalized Great Britain almost into insolvency. According to Bevan the British people "were comparatively sane" in those years. Since the Labor Party's defeat in 1951 the party itself has withstood the determined assaults of Bevan and his left-wing followers in their attempt to assume the party leadership, and only recently retreated from the party's own stand on nationalization, drawing further frustrated scorn from the "insane" Bevan. During this period Bevan feels that the British people have become "practically insane." The coincidence is striking if nothing else.

One of the things for which Bevan criticises the British press is its failure to print the full text of the recent Soviet note on four-power talks. Obviously he feels that the full text of the Soviet note is something the British people "ought to know." Apparently he does not feel that the entirely fruitless sequence of communications from the Kremlin in the past four or five years has hurt the West anything. Surely he should not take the British papers to task too severely for failing to devote several columns of their precious and limited space editions to publicize the diplomatic propaganda of the Soviet Union? Double talk disguised as diplomacy, is old stuff anyway, and a good editor can easily be blinded to it regarding any Soviet note with a jaundiced eye when it comes to assessing it for news values. Some new approach to duplicity, announcement of a bigger purge, or even the Malenkov has decided to embrace capitalism, could be considered authentic news if the source could be believed. But anything the Russians might have to say about diplomacy is strictly propaganda. The Soviets are not concerned with using newspapers "for the purpose of communicating news to people," but they use them for the purpose of "creating ideas and concealing from people things they ought to know," to use Bevan's own words.

It is a foolish editor who is taken in by any purported "news" on the Soviet diplomatic front, Mr. Bevan notwithstanding.

TALKED TOO MUCH

The Reader's Digest has described the account of World War II espionage in France allegedly carried out by a Canadian named in the article as Gerard Dufour, as "as the most fantastic hoax in the history of publishing." They should know. The Digest, in its November issue, carried the account credited to George Dufour of Calgary of his underground activity in France during the past war as an authentic story just coming to light. Quentin Reynolds, one of the Digest's favorite writers, had did the story under the title, "The Man Who Wouldn't Talk." The whole account has been published in book form by an Ontario American publishing house. With the discovery that the entire story is a complete fabrication, it would seem that "The Man Who Wouldn't Talk" talked a good deal too much.

A Toronto evening newspaper heralded the state visit to Canada of President Eisenhower and his wife in last Friday's edition with a headline reading, "Ike and Mamie Come to Canada." Surely the president of a neighboring republic and his wife deserve more dignified treatment than Ike, Eisenhower, in the headlines, is only one letter more than either Elizabeth or Elizabeth. We fail to recall, during the royal visit in 1951, a headline reading, "Lis and Phil Come to Canada."

PATIENT GARDEN

The garden wears a patient look. If things in nature suffer pain,
The trees of leaves are bare, As human beings do,
How flowerless is every nook, Their quiet patience makes it plain,
With silence everywhere. We should be patient, too.

The song birds' nests are empty From spray tree and plant and
The lawn is hard and brown. That wait for spring's return,
The hollyhocks along the wall That pain and suffering will pass
Its sleep have settled down. From year to year I learn.

HUNTERS FREE LARGE COP SMOKER WHICH WAS ENDED IN AFTER MIX.

This is the human act which was performed by Floyd Morden of Bellevile, Peter Mackenzie, Ross McLaren, Neil O'Keefe and Bruce Sherman, all of Trenton, when they came on a hunting trip. They came upon the moose while they were in search of deer at the head waters of the Moira River between Gilmour and Millbridge. Floyd Morden of this city slightly wounded the bull moose and took it fo a deer. He had his rifle leveled in the direction of the animal when he became aware of the fact that the animal facing him was not a deer, but a large cow moose. Peter Mackenzie and Bruce Sherman stood silent in plain view of each other; then with a trembling mort the animal turned swiftly and headed at an easy lope toward the nearby ice-coated river, Splashing through the ice and water the moose plunged on until it struck a soft spot near the opposite side and consented to sink in the mud until it was securely mired. The hunters secured a number of poles and after much heaving and pushing they liberated the animal which with a great deal of struggle got across the remaining distance to the shore where it stood for a moment eyeing the men calmly and then with another snort, which might have meant "much obliged", it made off into the brush. The six men stood in the soft mud and wiped the dirt from their brows. "Say" that's that," declared one of them — "can you imagine it chimed in the others. They retrieved their rifles from the edge of the river and calmly continued their search for deer.

At a meeting of the city council a motion was passed authorizing the purchase of about 4/5 of the stock of the gas company for the sum of $5,000 and in January next a by-law will be submitted to the electors providing for payment of all liabilities of the company and the operation of the gas plant as a civic concern.

Here is an interesting item from our file copy at this time in 1870: "The new market building is slowly — very slowly — nearing completion. The town hall is a large and attractive room and it will be lighted by two "sunlights" similar to that in St. Andrew's Church. The council chamber is highly orname and will, we understand, be handsomely furnished and carpeted. The police court is being neatly fitted up and will be the finest police court in the province as regards appearance. In the rear of the police court there are two rooms, one for the magistrate's private use and in the other room books and papers will be stored. The writer regrets it filled with black salt counters and the basement will not need a fresh swelling of the caretaker. Altogether the building will be a credit to the town.

(Note 1953) Eventually the police station was moved into the old fire hall near the upper bridge, to the new building and occupied space for office and cells on the ground floor at the south west corner of the building. The city treasurer's office and assessor's office were eventually located in the new building on the ground floor at the north, west corner of the building.)

Finds It Hard To Be Neutral

(Montreal Gazette).

It is one thing to be theorgically neutral about Communism: It becomes far harder when face to face with the Communist reality. An interesting illustration of this is seen in the case of Lt.-Gen. K. S. Thimayya, the Indian chairman of the commission on Panmunjom.

It is Gen. Thimayya's responsibility to allow the Communist "explainers" an opportunity to persuade the Communist prisoners of the United Nations to go home. But the more Gen. Thimayya has seen of Communist methods, the more man he has sickened over the whole business. "I am reluctant to order my guards to use the force required to hold these wretched men in front of the explainers," he says. "It is inhuman."

Just what did Gen. Thimayya mean when he used these words? Part of the answer is given in the verbatim account of the process. An excerpt appears in the magazine, U.S. News & World Report. It describes how one Chinese prisoner was hauled before the Communists. He tried to break away, but was brought back by the guards and forced to sit facing the "explainers." Here is how it went on:

Explainer: Go out that door! Just go out that door!

Explainer: If you are worried, tell us. Tell us! Tell us! Tell us! Tell us! Have no worry, go out and rest!

(A new explainer enters the tent and the Indian committee chairman, Thimayya, addresses him to leave.)

Chairman: I belong to this team. I have been here all the time. From now on I am with this team. I am with you. I will not leave.

(The Indian Swedish delegates strongly object to his presence.)

New explainer: The Swedish colonel is not with you.

(Turning to prisoner): Don't be afraid. Don't be afraid!

(The chairman rules that the new explainer can stay. The Swiss and Swedish delegates object. The observer and interpreter from the United Nations Command object. When they are over-ruled, they protest and leave the tent.)

New explainers: Look at the Swiss. They have deserted you. They have left you. Don't be afraid. You walk out of here you will be back with your comrades. You will see your wife. You will see your brother.

(The prisoner holds his head and groans.)

Communist interpreter (jumping to the defense and addressing the chairman): The prisoner says he wants repatriation.

Communist explainers (standing and shouting together): Go this way! Come out of here and you will be safe. Go! Go ahead!

(At the height of the turmoil Gen. Thimayya, a neutral, left. The Czech delegate insists that the prisoner be repatriated . . . Gen. Thimayya finally retires for a two-day rest for the prisoner. But still the prisoner in his car and drives away.)

It is perhaps little wonder that Gen. Thimayya, after having taken part in this sort of thing day after day, now says: "I can't stand the hunger to go to the explanation' tents and look at it myself."

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The pronunciation of English should have been greatly standardized by radio. Maybe it has been, but I still pick out a station from Texas or Mississippi and get an announcer with a drawl and an accent to his vowels that indicates him learning with the deep south. But it is astonishing how universal the pronunciation of the sounds of English is becoming all over the United States and Canada. Except in comedy and character parts, any trace of the old standard pronunciation that can be recognized over the radio in New York, Boston, Memphis, Pittsburgh, Vancouver, Dallas, appears to be discouraged by the radio industry.

The radio profession, however, can frequently be detected in little deviations which come from imitation. Some words are definitely hard to pronounce. One of them is poem. A short while ago, some eminent authority on poetry was on the air, coast to coast. He had a rich, fruity, New English accent, the overrich quality that you seldom now hear even from the BBC. And he kept pronouncing the word poem as if it were poem or pyrm. He talked about poetry and poetry as pyotry and poitry, two syllables; the "two syllables slightly squashed together, as if it were one. He pronounced poetic as pitic. You could understand him. But you had a little work knock out of his discourse. It was as if he had egg on his necktie.

Another address, a couple of our better known radio conversationalists have begun using poym and poytic. It is probably imitation. It doubtless will spread. Soon the pronunciation will have a hard time of it, against the well established poe-um, pome, poe-emm that diversify our speech across United States and Canada. United States and both up and down the strata of social levels that can be found all over, regardless of horizontal calculations.

Mikoyan Finds Merit in West

(Winnipeg Free)

It is encouraging to read that the Soviets, after all these years, have at last discovered something in the West deserving of emulation, something which we as well, albeit for dubious reasons.

Mr. A. I. Mikoyan, a deputy premier, is the man who has suddenly become conscious of this neglected aspect of life in the western world. As part of the campaign to make the Malenkov government more popular than its iron-fisted predecessor, Mr. Mikoyan is bent upon introducing vacuum cleaners and other modern conveniences into the homes of Soviet citizens. It has of course been demonstrated that the Stalin regime did everything wrong and cared not a rap for consumers. In contrast the Malenkov ministry is going to remove the turnover tax on electrical goods and dazzle the workers with everything from pots and pans to lipstick.

Naturally, as Stalin himself discovered, it is one thing to set targets and another to realize them in goods ready for distribution. As part of the drive to build up the heavy industries in cities and towns, is probably more often deficient in than in any other chemical element."

Why "dwellers in cities and towns"? Because farmers are not very strong on "groceries" and possess less eggs, dairy produce and green leaf vegetables than do townsfolk, and these are the calcium-rich foods.

It took ten or fifteen years to clear up the mystery of the bohun I was taught about "mineral matter" in foods (calcium) when I was a boy in Canadalaya. I'm afraid most of you still believe the same wrong notion that I did, about the "mineral matter" or "mineral ash matter" in the bones. As Steele's Fourteen Weeks in Human Physiology had it (table up):

The composition of the bones at maturity is about one part animal to two parts mineral matter. The proportions are very much age. In youth it is nearly half and half, while in old age the mineral is greatly in excess . . . Hence the bones of children are tough, not readily fractured, but when broken easily heal again, while those of elderly people are liable to fracture, and do not quickly unite.

The truth, is that the "mineral matter" (principally calcium) in the bones is constantly drawn upon to supply the calcium required by the nerves, heart, muscles and glands from day to day, and if the calcium store in the bones is not adequately replaced by adequate daily intake of calcium, the bones begin to soften, atrophy, become porous and light in weight, and the frame shrinks. Illness and circumstance sensibly overtakes the individual regardless of his or her chronological age.

As Boas (The Patient Past fifty) states "There is a steady loss of calcium through the years" meaning the years from infancy to senility — and this accounts for many of the complaints which are otherwise dismissed as "rheumatism", "neuralgia", "sciatica" and "arthritis" or potential fat feet in growing children, spasmophilia and tetany.

Now, my dear N. Hammer, please do not infer from this that a dose or a dozen dosed of calcium will cure any of these ailments, in order to obtain any real relief from such ailments you must not only have a high calcium diet but supplement the diet with a good daily ration of calcium AND vitamin D for a period of three months or more, and then continue the high calcium diet as long as you are able to take nourishment.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE AFTERGLOW

I am blessed with a home that stands upon a quiet corner in a city of sixty odd thousand and my study windows that seem almost to talk to me, so intimately do they crowd my sight and inspire me throughout all the seasons of the year. But autumn is my favorite.

Just now the grounds below me and the view from every window of my study is a veritable picture of gold. The maples, especially, are wrapped in golden foliage. All through the day I pause to note the sunshine bathing each leaf. Even the shadows cast by leaves have fallen is like a blanket of gold spread out. But, in the late afternoon, when the last waves of light creep into the West, I note a wonderful change in the colors, and I just sit silently in a mood of wonder and inner joy.

The afterglow of life! Shakespeare spoke of life as a "walking shadow." It's like that as the golden garments flicker in my study. Autumn is the afterglow of life itself as the lengthened years present richness, peace and quiet.

In my brief weeks during the autumn months at my island retreat I am always inspired by the majesty of the sunsets over in the West. Often this glow spreads a beautiful canopy of pastels of great beauty in mild coloring.

Also, we note a spiritual afterglow when a dear friend leaves us after a happy meeting. I used to think after many a talk with the late Bob Davis and always after the late Charles Thomas had read "The Lord's Prayer" at The Players in New York. There is that same afterglow after we sweep through one's inner consciousness after the speaking talks by Bishop Sheen on the TV.

We have all experienced the stimulus of a magnetic personality as its possessor has entered a room, and then felt the afterglow at the departure of that one. Something very wonderful—something of us all of us can hope may be ours!

THE CALCIUM DEPOSIT OBSESSION

Dr. Brady

There is more calcium (lime) in a glass of milk than in a glass of lime water.

In 1½ pints of milk, the minimum requirement of a growing child, there is approximately 2 grains of calcium.

Nutrition authorities estimate that in order to grow and develop normally and do fully well at play and study a youth or girl must assimilate 18 grains (one gram, a quarter of a teaspoonful) of calcium a day. In order to assimilate that much calcium the food ration for the day must supply half as much again, because only two-thirds of the calcium eaten is absorbed in ordinary circumstances.

The dictum of Sherman (Chemistry of Food and Nutrition) is to day one of the working principles of nutrition: "The sufficiency and diet of Americans and Europeans, at least among dwellers in cities and towns, is probably more often deficient in than in any other chemical element."

Why "dwellers in cities and towns"? Because farmers are not very strong on "groceries" and possess less eggs, dairy produce and green leaf vegetables than do townsfolk, and these are the calcium-rich foods.

It took ten or fifteen years to clear up the mystery of the bohun I was taught about "mineral matter" in foods (calcium) when I was a boy in Canadalaya. I'm afraid most of you still believe the same wrong notion that I did, about the "mineral matter" or "mineral ash matter" in the bones. As Steele's Fourteen Weeks in Human Physiology had it (table up):

The composition of the bones at maturity is about one part animal to two parts mineral matter. The proportions are very much age. In youth it is nearly half and half, while in old age the mineral is greatly in excess . . . Hence the bones of children are tough, not readily fractured, but when broken easily heal again, while those of elderly people are liable to fracture, and do not quickly unite.

The truth, is that the "mineral matter" (principally calcium) in the bones is constantly drawn upon to supply the calcium required by the nerves, heart, muscles and glands from day to day, and if the calcium store in the bones is not adequately replaced by adequate daily intake of calcium, the bones begin to soften, atrophy, become porous and light in weight, and the frame shrinks. Illness and circumstance sensibly overtakes the individual regardless of his or her chronological age.

As Boas (The Patient Past fifty) states "There is a steady loss of calcium through the years" meaning the years from infancy to senility — and this accounts for many of the complaints which are otherwise dismissed as "rheumatism", "neuralgia", "sciatica" and "arthritis" or potential fat feet in growing children, spasmophilia and tetany.

Now, my dear N. Hammer, please do not infer from this that a dose or a dozen dosed of calcium will cure any of these ailments, in order to obtain any real relief from such ailments you must not only have a high calcium diet but supplement the diet with a good daily ration of calcium AND vitamin D for a period of three months or more, and then continue the high calcium diet as long as you are able to take nourishment.

THE HUMAN HEART

Press dispatches recently carried the story of an amazing new operation originated by Dr. Arthur Vineberg, a Canadian surgeon. By bringing a third artery into the heart, Dr. Vineberg has been able to restore completely persons who were virtual invalids from blockage of normal coronary arteries.

Here is another important victory in man's conquest of disease; part of the almost unbelievable progress made within the last few years by medical science. And this progress is equaled in other fields of engineering, communications, and so on.

Both events underline the paradoxical ideiit of modern man in the middle of twentieth century. Science has let but such possibilities for a long, healthy, comfortable, safe, active life as science now offers that, at the same time, never before has he been so helpless to help himself. Progress, we would live in the Utopia that has dreamed of all the centuries. The greatest glory of all is waiting for the age—would that might be true—that can bring the human heart a truth even more exciting than Dr. Vineberg's third artery.

HUNTERS DISPLAY TROPHIES.

Several returning hunters stopped at the village on Saturday afternoon to display their trophies of the chase. The best deer on view was a large buck shot by Allan Williams, of Allan's Mills, who was one of a party of four which had visited the hunting ground just for the day. These short term hunters seem to have fared better accordingly than those who forsook the comforts of home for a week or more.

Mental Condition Of Girl's Slayer Issue in Court

STRATFORD (CP)—The courtroom fight to save a former army paratrooper, charged with murder, went into the third week Monday with the main attack by defence and crown aimed primarily at the accused's mental condition.

Since the murder hearing opened here last Wednesday afternoon six eyewitnesses told of seeing Reuben Henry Norman pump at least six small-calibre bullets from a semi-automatic pistol into the body of 17-year-old Jean Marie Satchell.

The shooting took place at noon Feb. 2 in Stratford's business section.

Since then Norman's mental condition has been a bone of contention. Last May a jury found Norman mentally unfit for trial.

SAID MENTALLY FIT

Dr. Charles R. Tenard, Ontario department of health forensic psychiatrist, a crown witness, called in reply to defence contention that Norman's mental condition was not normal, said Norman had told him defence psychiatrists had misquoted him when they reported he had heard the voice of God.

Norman was confined to an Ontario hospital at Penetang after he was found mentally ill in May and the doctor said he discovered the prisoner "very observant." Norman discussed activities and symptoms of other inmates of the hospital.

"I have come to the conclusion after seven observations that Norman is mentally fit," the doctor said.

Many Attend Dominion Stores' Cooking School Opening Day

Another delightful and most interesting Cooking School, under the sponsorship of the Dominion Stores, began its weekly cooking course at the Capitol theatre, conducted by Mrs. Adele Hunt, nationally known home economist, assisted by Mrs. Donald MacKinnon, also home economist of this city.

Tall white standards of yellow and white chrysanthemums mingled with evergreen sprays and gleaming, iridescent glitter adorned the stage; while gleaming white enamel stoves and refrigerator, as well as a bounding supply of foodstuffs formed an attractive setting for the demonstration which followed.

This first day, as Mrs. Hunt pointed out to the "good neighbors' who filled the auditorium, would be a 'get-acquainted' day, with several recipes of food preparation added for contrast, emphasizing economy in the use of aluminum foil as a saver on dish-washing.

One of five recipes which were demonstrated included a delicious stuffed apples, each apple being washed, cored and stuffed with minced dates, nuts, raisins and put in a cup of foil, with corn syrup being poured over the apple, the whole placed in the oven and baked without the necessity of washing sticky dishes or pans as the foil may be used as a serving dish. All sugary excess in the foil edge made a most attractive serving dish.

TUNA SQUARES

Other recipes included the making of quick rising dough by the use of 'get rising yeast', mixed onion squares, whose appetizing aromas were enjoyed to the full by the audience in a most tempting and hunger-producing desire. The recipe is as follows:

6 medium onions; 3 tbsps. shortening; 2 cups once-sifted pastry flour or 1¾ cups once-sifted all-purpose flour; 4 tsps. baking powder; 1 tsp. salt; 1 tsp. curry or paprika, 5 tbsps. shortening, 2/3 cup liquid milk; 1 egg, slightly beaten; few grains pepper and ¼ tsp. milk powder, liquefied.

Method—Line an 8-inch square cake pan with foil; pre-heat oven to 425 degrees F., peel onions and cut into ¼ inch thick slices; separate into rings; cook in the three tablespoons shortening until very low heat until onions are tender and lightly browned. Drain off any excess fat. Sift and sift twice, then sift into bowl, flour, baking powder, ½ tsp. salt and either curry or paprika. Cut in 5 tablespoons shortening. Carefully mix in by making a well in the flour mixture; add 2/3 cup milk and mix lightly with fork. Knead for 10 seconds on lightly floured board and pat out into prepared pan. Arrange the precooked onions over the dough. Combine slightly-beaten egg remaining ¼ teaspoon salt, pepper the ½ cup milk; pour over the onions. Bake in pre-heated oven 25 minutes, cut in squares and served hot. These may be garnished in some attractive manner the cook desires, as people eat with their eyes as well as with their mouths.

OTHER APPETIZING FOODS

Other appetizing foods were those of Porky Balls and rice in vegetable sauce, and the salmon and egg casserole, and the Royal Instant pudding which required no cooking, and might be obtained in vanilla, chocolate and coffee flavoring. This is a delicious and quick dessert which may be used for cake filling and pie filling. Just the thing for unexpected company, and so easy to prepare.

This may be purchased in packages under the name Royal Instant Pudding.

During the intermission tickets were drawn for the 15 grocery bags, the winners of these would be posted in the Dominion Store, Victoria Avenue, where many wended their collective and devious ways hoping to be the lucky possessor of a gift of groceries. Other drawings were for the foodstuffs cooked, and for three or four sets of pretty mixing bowls, floral decorated.

Mrs. Hunt is to be complimented on the delightful manner in which she maintained the attention of the many spectators; her spontaneous humor, imbibing her mirth-provoking stories. Thanks are also tendered to Mrs. MacKinnon for her timely assistance in the making and preparation of the various recipes demonstrated, and to Mr. Macaro for the use of his theatre.

Mrs. Hunt and Mrs. MacKinnon were introduced by Mr. Wm. H. Bell, manager of the Dominion Store, who officially opened the cooking school. Mr. Cavanaugh, of Frigidaire, also expressed his best wishes for the success of the school.

CAN A LOVELESS MARRIAGE WORK SUCCESSFULLY?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

At 28, I have been married eleven years and have two children.

I have never been in love with my husband, who was selected out for me by my parents. I never have any social life and am thoroughly unhappy. It just seems no use to try and do anything, and I can't find any solution for my problem except to leave my husband. Can you?—Mrs. R. L.

Dear Mrs. R. L.:

Naturally, no woman can be happy if she doesn't love her husband, and, in addition, lives a life devoid of any outside interests. But are you sure there is absolutely no hope for your marriage?

You don't say that your husband is not good to you, even though you don't love him, nor do you say that your lack of social life is his fault. In fact, you tell me so little that it is pretty hard to advise you.

Perhaps, though, I might suggest something that may help you decide whether or not there are some things worth trying before you make any attempt to make your marriage work.

It is true that, of course, that a great deal of your trouble comes from the fact that you were married so young, and, possibly, to a man much older than yourself, although his age is something else you don't mention. Since that is past history now, however, I suggest that you take a piece of paper and make two lists, one of the good things about your marriage, and the other of the things you don't like about it. Then study these lists carefully and see which one has the most important things on it. When you get through, perhaps you will have a different idea of your marriage and see that it really has assets you could develop.

Just because your marriage started with a handicap, it does not necessarily have to be a failure, unless there are some vital things wrong with it that you've not told me. And if you can really turn it into a success, it will certainly bring you more satisfaction, and more real happiness than many a marriage that started out with apparently everything in its favor.

THE MORE BOY FRIENDS YOU HAVE, THE BETTER HUSBAND YOU'LL GET

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 22 years old and have been dating boys for about four years.

The boys I've been dating are really nice, and I've been all for friends, but the trouble is, most boys want to go steady right away. So far I've told them all I don't want to go steady, but do you think I'm being silly?

Then there is something else. Two weeks ago I went out with a very nice boy and have gone out with him four times in all. On my fourth date I found out he was only 19 years old, and then I told him I couldn't see him any more because I am older than he is. I told him to find a younger girl. He said love had no limit on ages and that he would go crazy if he had to stop seeing me, but still I feel it's better to stop dating him, even though I like him more than any other boy I have dated. Do you think I should stop seeing him and forget about him?—N. R.

Dear N. R.:

I don't see any reason why you should stop dating this boy altogether, but I think you should date other boys, too, and leave the "going steady" until you are sure you have found the one who is just right for you. It doesn't necessarily matter if a young man is a little younger than a girl, but four dates are not nearly enough to find out whether that is true in your particular case, and whether there is anything special about your feeling for each other. Moreover, the only way to be sure about such a thing is to be friends with other boys, too, so that you can tell which one you really like the best.

Keep on telling 026 boys you don't want to go steady yet, and make all the friends you can for awhile, particularly among young people in your own age group. The more people you know, the closer you'll come to picking just the right young man when he turns up.

Canadian Apples Are Dessert Standbys

By Mary Moore

A happy-go-lucky gal who is a friend of mine said that Bob (her good-provider husband) had bought a barrel of Spy apples and so it was up to her to see that they were used.

She looked at me queerly and said "I came over here to ask you for a few apple ideas but I don't think I need you. I know very well you will say to serve them differently every time, but I want to make lots of apple pies."

It was fine with me, but a week later she was back. She really wanted the apple recipes this time, for she got the apple pies out of her system. I gave her a fistful of apple recipes.

Because she made me apple-conscious I made Apple Yorkshire Pudding. We have two pyrexdered sugar-shakers. One is cut glass, the other is silver. They are the two most superfluous pieces of equipment in our house. When I could use the silver one it is never polished.

So Apple Yorkshire Pudding gave me a chance to drag it out, polish it and use it.

APPLE YORKSHIRE PUDDING

In a bowl beat 3 eggs with rotary beater until light and very thick. Sift flour and measure 1-2 cup and sift it again with 1-4 teaspoon salt. Measure 1-2 cup whole milk and add half of it into the flour and stir until smooth then add remainder of the 1-2 cup of milk. Stir in the beaten eggs until smooth. Fold in 2 large thinly sliced apples. In 8-inch baking dish melt 4 tablespoons butter, in the oven (which should be set at 425 deg. Fahr.) When butter is bubbling pour in the batter and bake 30 minutes. This contains no sweetener so serve with powdered sugar. Old Inquisitive Pete tried it with maple syrup and with maple sugar, and liked it all three ways. Marianne added a little extra butter. I used a little pouring cream. It makes six servings no matter how you dress it up.

STANDARD APPLE CRISP

Slice 8 pared and cored apples into a buttered baking dish. Pour 1-3 cup hot water over them. Sift flour and measure 1 1-2 cups and add to it 3-4 cup white or brown sugar and teaspoon cinnamon. Cut into it 1-2 cup butter or margarine until fine. Spread flour mixture smoothly over apples and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for about 45 minutes. This is at its best served warm with pouring cream.

BOSTON CREAM

(Courtesy Estelle G.)

Make a syrup of 4 lbs. white sugar and 4 quarts water by boiling. When cold add 4 oz. tartaric acid, 1 1-2 oz. essence of lemon, 8 egg whites beaten stiffly. Bottle. Use 4 tablespoons Boston Cream to a tumbler of water with about 1-4 teaspoon of bicarbonate of soda or enough to make it effervesce.

ANSWER:

Thank you Estelle. I hope Ruth H. sees this.

QUESTION:

. . . I must learn to make good doughnuts . . . my best thinks no one can make doughnuts like his mother's . . . you know "The path to a man's heart. . ."—T.C.

ANSWER:

I hope these help you catch your man.

DOUGHNUTS

(Cake-type.)

In a bowl beat 4 egg yolks or 2 whole eggs until thick, then beat in 1 cup sugar and 2 tablespoons very soft shortening. Stir in 3-4 cup thick buttermilk (or sourmilk). Sift all-purpose flour and measure 3 1-2 cups and sift it again with 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon soda, 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1-4 teaspoon each cinnamon and nutmeg. Sift into egg and sugar mixture. Chill this dough thoroughly—at least 2 hours. Heat fat to depth of 2 or 4 inches in heavy kettle to 390 deg. Fahr. (a cube of bread browns in fat in 40 seconds at this temperature). While fat is heating roll out 1-3 of the dough on floured board to 1-3-inch thickness. Keep remaining dough cold. Flip cut out doughnuts into fat from wide spatula, frying as many at one time as may be turned readily. As they rise to surface and show color under neath turn over. Fry about three minutes. Lift out on long fork without pricking, drain a second and cool on absorbent paper. If you care to, just before serving, shake doughnuts, one at a time, in paper bag containing icing or granulated sugar. These amounts make two dozen 3-inch doughnuts.

GOOD MANNERS

NOT THE ONE TO GIVE A HOPE CHEST

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'm in love, and recently I've embroidered with my initials or monogram quite a few household linens (dining-table linens and napkins, bath towels, hand towels, guest towels, kitchen towels). I am planning to start a hope chest. I am not engaged, but I do go steady with a chap I like very much. He makes a good salary and is generous with his money, and lately has been hinting about what I would like him to give me for a Christmas present. Since I need a chest for the linens I'm collecting, I'd rather have him give me this, and I'm sure he would if I even mention it. Who is supposed to give a girl her hope chest? Should it be proper for a boy friend to buy it for her? If so, would I choose it if he asked me to?—Bette R.

A girl's parents may, and very often do, buy her a hope chest at any time she decides she would like to have one . . . either before or after she is engaged. Or the girl may buy her own hope chest whenever she wishes. Or when she becomes engaged, her fiance may give her a hope chest. But it is not proper for a boy friend to give her such a full-of-romantic-meaning present. . . this is entirely out-of-order, and please do not consider suggesting to him that you would be willing to receive such a significant Christmas present from him.

HOPE CHEST FROM HER FIANCE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Ken and I are engaged, but our engagement isn't to be publicly announced until Christmas Day. Then I am to receive my engagement ring as my Christmas present. As my New Year's present Ken would like to give me a hope chest for the linens and silver. I have been collecting. (Would the hope chest)—(Several of my friends have told me that a girl's parents should give her the hope chest.)—Patricia.

Yes . . . it will be correct for your finance to give you your hope chest. What a Christmas present of happiness for you. . . the announcement of your engagement, your engagement ring, your hope chest!

SHE SHOULD WAIT UNTIL FIANCE RETURNS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Before my fiance left for service in Germany, we had become engaged, but decided to wait to marry after he returned. Yesterday I received a letter from him telling me that he had instructed a jeweller in his home town to send me an engagement ring for my Christmas present. Would you advise me to have my parents announce our engagement now that I receive the ring at Christmas time or, since he writes that he expects to be home in March or April (his service was to be for two years, and this might mean his return then), would it be best to have it announced in March?—Wondering.

Since your fiance is to return so soon after Christmas (though it's a long time, I know, when you're in love!), I strongly suggest you wait until he returns before announcing the engagement. It will be so much more joy, so much more fun, to have him here to share the announcement!

Beauty

By HELEN JAMESON

LINES AROUND THE EYES

Some women, without a sign of a facial wrinkle, nevertheless have little "sun ray" streaks around their eyes. Tissues there are soft and delicate, fibers are tiny and little wrinkles can appear almost without warning. They may cause a young woman to fancy that she looks older than her years and that is no help to her spirits. They are like prematurely grey hair in their effect upon morale.

If the eyelids and surrounding tissues have a crepe-like appearance, take warning. If you catch them in time, you may be able to iron them out. Let them dig in deeply, however, and they are established for keeps. There are two common causes—impaired vision and the habit of squinting. If eyesight is not normal, the lids have a tendency to close partially in order to keep out the light. And that go on long enough, and crow's feet will appear.

If this is your special beauty problem, make it a habit to apply warm water to your eyes twice a day, then ice cold. Moisten a heavy wash cloth with ice water, hold close to the flesh for several minutes. The purpose is to stimulate circulation. With brisker circulation the tissues have a better chance of helping in tone.

After using soap and water, rinse with warm water, dry the flesh gently and apply a nourishing cream. Find one that is not too soft. What you need is a heavier, fairly resistant cream.

Place the first finger on the eyelid close to the nose, sweep outward to the temple, make circles there, then come back under the eye to starting point. This movement "irons" the lines crosswise as you would press out a crease in a fabric.

If you have normal vision you can be sure that the tiny folds around your eyes are habit wrinkles—self-induced. The underlying muscles, plus the uses to which they are put, determine the character of wrinkles of all sorts. Lifting the eyebrows will eventually form little lines across the forehead, and pulling the eyebrows together will cause frowns to develop. It is impossible to remove these lines unless the muscle habits are corrected.

Norwegian Men Learning to Cook At Oslo School

By ELIZABETH KITSON

OSLO (Reuters) — Armed with pots-and-pans and cook books, a group of middle-aged Norwegian men are busily learning the culinary arts at one of the first cooking courses for husbands to be started in Norway.

Every Thursday evening they hurry from their place of work to municipal domestic science school in an Oslo suburb.

They sit about preparing a three-course dinner under the instruction of the domestic science teacher, Mrs. Martin—whose husband is one of the pupils.

Then the class is over and the dinner is cooked, pupils and teacher sit down together to eat it.

The class was started as an experiment by Mrs. Martin, encouraged by her husband, a psychologist. Mr. Martin's problem is that although he eats like a horse and is of the same time lazy by nature, he remains as thin as a rake.

WIVES NEED CHANGE

"I wanted to find out how it is prepared, as this fat which disappears so completely," he said. "It is an interesting study, seeing like the cheese of the consistency of mercy."

But most pupils are married men who have decided that their wives deserve a day off every so often.

On the first evening, nothing more ambitious than vegetable soup and pancakes was attempted, but by the fifth lesson the male cooks were at home with Irish stew, fruit salad, and lemon and almond cakes.

The male pupils now say women are too bound by tradition, and they are already claiming they will be able to produce more exciting dishes—and produce them more cheaply than their wives.

Work may start next year on the long-planned St. Lawrence Seaway and power project. The 2,300-mile project would give minimum navigation depth of 27 feet through all canals. Bevan Declares Press Is Reason Britons 'Insane'

COVENTRY, England (AP) — Aneurin Bevan, 56 Sunday, charged the British press is a reason why the British people are "among the most ignorant in the world" and "practically insane."

Bevan, leader of the Labor party's left wing, told a political rally here the British people are living "in a sort of intellectual twilight."

"One of the causes," he said, "is to be found in British newspapers." He named no other causes.

"They are no longer newspapers. They are power papers, used not for the purpose of communicating news to people, but for indoctrinating ideas and concealing from people things they ought to know."

"As a result," he charged, "British people are no longer capable of a right assessment of the international scene."

Inland Water Route

When the St. Lawrence Seaway is completed, giant lake freighters will be able to carry ore and grain from the head of the lakes to Montreal without difficulty through enlarged canals with deeper shaft limits. At present grain freighters must transship at Prescott to ply the 14-foot St. Lawrence canal. This Malak photo shows grain pouring into a freighter. — (CP Photo.)

Make River Soundings

The power project part of the St. Lawrence Seaway would produce 2,200,000 more horsepower in the 47-mile International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence River below Prescott, Ont. This would be done by Ontario and the State of New York, who would share the power equally. An Ontario hydro survey crew is shown preparing kytoons to take soundings in the rapids section of the seaway. The kytoons float over the spot where the depth is to be measured and a lead weight suspended from the kytoon by piano wires, rests on the bottom of the river. Readings permit computation of the water depth. — (CP Photo.)

$700 Million St. Lawrence Seaway and Power Project To Employ 15,000, 5-6 Years

Work may start next year on the long-planned St. Lawrence seaway and power project. This story, first of a series, tells what the $700,000,000 job involves. Wednesday: The 2,200-mile seaway route described.

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Nature dug a 2,200-mile seaway from the heart of Canada to the Atlantic ocean.

Most of the St. Lawrence seaway, the Great Lakes system, or whatever you like to call it, is broad and deep waters, but there are hurdles. Since far-reading days Canadians have been deepening shallows and building ways around rapids and waterfalls.

What remains to be done to meet present-day needs is commonly known as the St. Lawrence seaway and power project.

The rapids and waterfalls weren't simply a scurvy trick of nature. Their hydro power has been partially harnessed.

PRODUCE MORE POWER

The power part of the St. Lawrence project would produce 2,300,000 more horsepower in the 47-mile International rapids section of the St. Lawrence river, extending from below Prescott, Ont., and Ogdensburg, N.Y., to St. Regis, N.Y., just below Cornwall, Ont. This would be done by Ontario and the state of New York, who would share the power equally.

The seaway part would give a minimum navigation depth of 27 feet through all canals, and would consist mostly of replacing prescott 14-foot canals with 30-foot canals in the 13 miles from Prescott to Montreal. With some relatively minor dredging the deep seaway already exists over the rest of the route.

For many years it was proposed that Canada and the United States do the seaway together. The United States has failed to come in and now Canada proposes to do it alone, except for work connecting Lakes Superior, Huron and Erie.

Canada, Ontario and New York hope the project can be started next year, although court action on the power project by certain opposing American interests still delays getting of a definite date.

If such a start can be made, completion time probably will be from 1958 to 1960.

ADVANCE WORK

Preliminary surveys and studies of the effects of changes in water flow have been in progress for some time. Diamond drilling is being done to locate the best foundations for dams and power installations. Relocation of the individuals and communities to be dispossessed by rising water is being studied.

While the power part of the project covers only the International rapids section, other power projects are envisaged as further development.

Quebec has 2,200,000 horsepower available in the Beauharnois section of the St. Lawrence above Montreal, of which 1,424,000 horsepower is either now developed or being developed. She has a further 1,200,000 horsepower in the Lachine section at Montreal's doorstep. These are separate from the project, but they fit into it.

Costs of the power and navigation project would presumably be financed through bond issues which would be paid off from power revenues and shipping tolls.

ESTIMATES OF COST

When Canada and the United States planned to do the navigation part together under a 1941 agreement, the cost in 1950 prices of the navigation and power job was estimated at $704,000,000. Of this, it was proposed that the United States pay $484,000,000 and Canada $220,000,000.

Senator Dandurand was based on the fact that Canada between 1912 and 1932 built the Welland canal between Lakes Erie and Ontario at a cost of $132,000,000 and that this, at 1950 prices, represented a value of $340,000,000. Also taken into account was $32,000,000 spent by the United States on waters connecting Lakes Erie, Huron and Superior.

Guy Lindsay, director of the special projects branch of the Canadian department of transport says "Canada's share of the total cost of the seaway will be more than 50 per cent."

In addition to the Welland, Canada has dredged out a 324-foot channel, which will be deepened to 35 feet, in the 160 miles of winding river from Montreal to Quebec and also built her extensive system of shallower canals which will be replaced.

THREE-WAY SPLIT

Now that Canada proposes to do the all navigation work from Lake Erie down, costs would be divided among Canada, Ontario and New York.

This leaves out $88,695,000 contained in the estimate for deepening of channels on the upper lakes. This used to have been United States work and it is still hoped she will carry it out. Already, under the 1941 agreement with Canada, she has built a new $15,000,000 lock at Sault Ste. Marie.

Subtraction of the upper lakes amount would reduce the total in terms of 1950 prices to $615,305,000.

Under the all-Canadian navigation plan, three locks which would have been on the American side of the International rapids will be built on the Canadian side. Latest

Man Convicted For Manufacture Of Dessert

OSHAWA (CP) — Magistrate F. S. Ebbs Monday convicted Godfrey Schilling of nearby Whitby on a charge of selling an edible goods product manufactured in such a way that it "is an imitation of or resembles . . . ice cream." The penalty was a fine of $10 and costs or 10 days.

The magistrate reserved judgment earlier in the month when he heard evidence on the charge, laid under an Ontario law, passed in 1952 and amended last spring, banning sale of edible oils products, except oleomargarine, manufactured so as to resembly dairy products.

The product involved in the case, a frozen dessert, was not described by the manufacturer as ice cream.

Magistrate Ebbs said the fine was nominal because "it is a test case." Mr. Schilling said he will appeal.

FOR COSTS

estimates are that extra cost will be small.

POWER COSTS

Whatever the total cost, probably more than half will be shared by Ontario and New York power. A commonly quoted estimate, apparently still valid on 1950 estimates, is $200,000,000 each for Ontario and New York, and $220,000,000 for Canada. The federal government has authorized its St. Lawrence seaway authority to borrow up to $300,000,000.

Major items in the 1950 estimate included $47,894,000 for power and navigation in the International rapids, $37,116,000 for navigation in the Soulanges section in Quebec and $36,229,000 for navigation in the Lachine section.

Estimates of labor required run to an average of 15,000 men over five or six years, with 10,000 employed on the Canadian side.

Professional Faster Claims World Record

WIESBADEN, Germany (AP)—Willy Schmitz, a professional hunger artist, claims a world record for fasting—80 days and five hours. He claims he had only mineral water and cigarets and that his weight dropped from 158 pounds to 92. He climbed out of a glass cage, completely exhausted Sunday and was taken to hospital.

He told reporters the previous world record was 40 days and one hour, held by Indian fakir Reykan, whom he will meet next spring in Venezuela in a fasting duel. Germans paid a mark (21.8 cents) to see Schmitz during the fast—his 10th in 27 years.

LIBERAL POLICY

Mr. St. Laurent replied: "I suppose I should tip my socialistic hat to him (Mr. Drew) on this occasion. . . I think we are all believers in competition." But this did not mean unlimited competition.

The subject of competition came up in a want-of-confidence motion moved by Mr. Drew.

The Progressive Conservative motion said Canadian welfare depends on free competition and added: "The security and security of all Canadians will be advanced by government policies which will restore markets for primary products and generally promote a high volume of international trade."

A sub-amendment to this motion by CCF leader Coldwell deleted the reference to competition and said the House "regrets" the government has "failed" to recommend a national health insurance plan.

END COMPETITION

In his lead-off speech of the session, Mr. Drew said government policy in the CPA case "could mean the end of free competition generally, if the government decided at any time to carry this policy a stage farther under the over-riding powers of the Emergency Powers Act."

The government's action had disclosed its determination to possess peacetime emergency powers to exercise full control over any industry by order-in-council without reference to Parliament.

Mr. St. Laurent said in reply:

"If competition is apt to achieve better service, greater efficiency and lower costs and charges, all to the good. But if it is apt to achieve over-expansion with a division of the market, resulting in heavier loss, to the consumers, shippers and taxpayers alike, I do not think it is in the public interest."

CCF AGREES

Mr. Coldwell sided with the government in the argument. There were certain phases in Canada's economic life, particularly transportation, which were suitable for public control, development and operation.

The CCF leader said that two years ago the Progressive Conservatives had attempted to block amendments to the combines act.

On the CCF's proposed national health insurance scheme, he said it should provide for full hospital, mental, dental and other health care to every Canadian "regardless of individual income."

SUSPECTED OF SPYING

OSLO (Reuters) — Norwegian police today announced the arrests of four Norwegians and one foreigner, suspected of spying in the Kirkenes area of north Norway, near the Soviet border. The Oslo newspaper Morgenbladet said the foreigner was a Russian.

No Clues Found In Kidnapping Of Windsor Child

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Police said Sunday they have found no clues in the kidnapping Friday of a three-year-old girl who was found abandoned near the vehicle entrance to the Detroit-Windsor tunnel three hours after she disappeared.

The child, Catherine Shannon, 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Shannon was unharmed. Mr. Shannon is an executive of Parke Davis and Co., Ltd., Windsor.

Police said they believed the kidnapper intended to take the girl to Detroit but became nervous and abandoned the child.

At home, Catherine told her parents and police she was "picked up by a dirty man."

"Me go to Detroit to live," she said. "Me go to Michigan."

Her mother said she never before heard Catherine say the word Michigan.

U.S. Industrialist Buys Old House To Preserve It

By SONIA YOUNG

KIRTHAM, England (Reuters)—An American industrialist has bought Ightham Mote, a moated house dating back nearly 800 years, to preserve it for the British public.

Henry R. Robinson Jr., president of the C. H. Robinson Paper-Manufacturing Company of Portland, Me., will not disclose how much he paid for the house, one of the oldest in Britain.

The National Trust, which preserves ancient buildings and natural beauty spots, said the stone and timbered grange is "a rare masterpiece, impossible to price."

Robinson signed a covenant with the National Trust declaring he will not alter Ightham Mote. He will pay for repairs to the 15-bedroom house, surrounded by a fast-flowing moat in Kent, and open it to the public.

Robinson said he fell in love with Ightham Mote when he first saw it and wanted to buy it. He achieved his wish 18 years later.

WARS OF ROSES

His name will be added to a list of owners dating back to the de Haut family of castles in 1340. During the Wars of the Roses, in which the rival royal houses of York and Lancaster struggled for supremacy, the house was taken away from the de Hauts and a member of the family was beheaded in 1484 for following the cause of Lancaster.

King Henry VII returned Ightham Mote to the family when he gained power and for the next 400 years it stayed in the hands of only two families. The remote grange, standing in a wooded valley in west Kent, then passed to Sir Thomas Colyer, who lived there until his death two years ago.

Since then, the house has stood derelict, its 14th century tudor gables and great tower fighting a losing battle against the elements. Massive oak panelling inside the building is intact. A female skeleton was found behind the panelling during restoration work 30 years ago.

RETAINED WHITE

Truman said he sent a copy of the report to White's immediate superior, the late Fred Vinson, then secretary of the treasury. He said he also discussed the matter with Vinson and Byrnes.

But that discussion, he said, was not until after the Senate had confirmed White as the U.S. member on the board of directors of the International Monetary Fund.

MANY INVOLVED

"Secretary of the Treasury Vinson consulted with Attorney-General Tom Clark and other government officials," Truman said. "When the results of these consultations were reported to me, the conclusion was reached that the appointment should be allowed to take its normal course. The final responsibility for this decision, of course, was mine. The reason for the decision was that the charges which had been made to the FBI against Mr. White also involved many other persons. . . . It was of great importance to the nation that this investigation be continued in order to prove or disprove them charges and to determine if still other persons were implicated."

Truman made no mention by name of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI, a fact noted by Senator Homer Ferguson (Rep. Mich). Ferguson accused the former president of letting it "leak out" before the report of the FBI director had been in on the agreement to keep White on the government while the investigation continued.

But in the speech, the Michigan senator said, "he doesn't combine Hoover with any of the people he consulted. He leaves that to the imagination."

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

PROUD RECORD!

President Otto Weichel, of Elmira, Ont., boss-man of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association, one of, if not the outstanding minor sports organizations in the world, made no bones about minor hockey conditions in his reply to Justice Wells' allegations regarding roughness in the sport.

The tough veteran of many a hockey battle steadily defended his association and the sport in general. And the fine record of the OMHA backs his statements beyond the slightest shadow of a doubt.

Elaborating on its prexy's reply to the judicial statement, the Ontario Minor Hockey Association released figures showing the extremely low rate in injuries in minor hockey.

Last season with 8,686 players registered for group play and Ontario play-offs, taking part in over 690 games, and 11,855 players taking part in literally thousands of local league games, only forty injuries were reported to the OMHA for insurance claims.

With the Ontario Minor body operating its very successful insurance plan, they are in a good position, possibly better than any other sports body, to keep a constant check on the injury situation.

Of the forty injuries reported to OMHA headquarters last season, only four necessitated medical charges of over $100, with the highest being $150. Only one other claim was over $50. Four ranged between $50 and $75, and 16 were between $25 and $50. Fifteen claims were reported under $25, and of those 6 were under $10, indicating the minor nature of most hockey injuries.

The above figures tend to indicate the success of the OMHA's constant drive to keep minor hockey clean, and such success should provide the players with the proper grounding in how to play hard but clean hockey before they move into the higher ranks. After that it is up to the coaches of the higher rated clubs.

We do not know if Mr. Justice Wells played hockey in his youth. We do not know if he has read, heard, or been told of the fatal and crippling injuries suffered in boxing and football in the United States. Against fatalities in Canadian hockey the figures are not worth comparison.

Every hockey-minded person regrets that an unfortunate accident cost the life of a young Canadian. But in case Mr. Justice Wells does not know, in every realm of sport where there is physical contact there is the hazard of injury and very remotely, death.

Hockey is, and will be, a rough game. In the heat of hockey battle players will hurl themselves at the opposition in an effort to avoid scores. Body-checking is one of the prime requisites of a player, especially in these days of speed, speed and more speed.

True, a hot-headed player will endeavor in his own way to "get even" if he is dumped hard and heavily by an opponent. But we do not believe that even in this heated frame of mind, any hockey player ever set them with the intent to maim or kill. We have seen many a stick swung and viciously too, but it was provoked by the situation and not premeditated on the bench or between players on the ice.

Many's the time we have heard the cry of diamond, hockey cushion and lacrosse field, "Let's go get 'em," or in choice Brooklynese, "We'll moider da bums." These expressions are said merely to inspire effort on the team as a whole, with no thought of murder or mayhem.

However, despite the criticism of the sport, the OMHA can hold its head high with pride in its achievements. And why it knows that there's a potential judge presenting with these beardless youngsters on the country's hockey rosters.

REFEREES' FORUM ...

Doug Patterson informs us that some 80 invitations have been mailed to coaches, managers, referees, and others connected with minor hockey for the OMHA Referees' Forum scheduled for the city hall here at 7.30 Thursday evening. Referee-in-chief "Pat" Patterson of the OHA, and Maurice Walsh, well known OHA referee, will be the instructor. OMHA executive members Bert Hicks, Lindsay, and Allwyn Watkins, Peterborough, will be here and there. Interesting possibility that that wizard of statistics, secretary Jack Christy, might grace the meeting with his presence. The OMHA has gone to the time and expense to present these informative forums, and their interest can best be appreciated by a large turnout. Anybody and everybody interested in minor hockey is welcome. City Hall, Thursday, 7.30.

MINOR HOCKEY!

The "Squirt" section of minor hockey will open on Thursday evening at 6.00 p.m. at the arena when the Maple Leafs and the Black Hawks clash in the initial game for the under 10-year-olds of the city.

The Minor Hockey Association feels that by giving these youngsters an opportunity to learn the proper method of play it will provide a better class of bantams, midgets, etc., in the years to come.

The "Squirt and Juvenile leagues will organize on Thursday night when all midgets are asked to be at the arena for registration, assignment to a team and a practice at 6.30 p.m. The Juveniles will take over at 8.15 for the same purpose. All players are expected to bring skates and a stick.

The first league games in these two divisions will be played on Thursday, November 26, following the second "Squirt" game of the season.

BIG CHIEF MOVES UP

MOOSE JAW (CP)—Fred Saskamoose, 19-year-old Big Chief of the Western Junior Hockey League has moved up to the National Hockey League for a tryout with the last-place Chicago Black Hawks.

The Moose Jaw Canucks' centre, one of the top scorers in the WJHL, is scheduled to play his first pro game against Boston in Chicago Friday.

Saskamoose, a full-blooded Indian and an honorary Indian chief, with the Canucks this season has notched 12 goals and eight assists.

Watson, Armstrong and Sloan Score 16 Goals, 43.24 P. C. Of The Team's 37 Goals

MONTREAL (CP)—It's getting to be routine to report that the National Hockey League's weekly official statistics show the Detroit Red Wings' well-publicized production line heads the list of individual point-getters.

So today, on the reasonable theory that goals, not assists, win hockey games, we give you a line that is doing just about as well, Harry Watson, George Armstrong and Tod Sloan of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

This unit has no fancy name, like the aptly-tagged production line of Gordie Howe, Ted Lindsay and Dutch Reibel. It's simply a we-score-'em line. Take a look at the figures.

The Detroit trio has scored 17 of the team's 39 goals, 43.59 per cent of the total. The Leaf unit has scored 16 goals, 43.24 per cent of the team's 37 goals.

The figures give a good idea also why the Red Wings and Leafs are tied only two points behind the league-leading Montreal Canadiens. Both clubs got a crack at the Montrealers before this time next week. It's significant, too, that neither the Wings nor the Leafs have played as many games as Canadiens.

RICHARD LEADS

On "point-scoring basis can't be applied to Montreal, although Maurice (Rocket) Richard is setting the pace for the league with nine. Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion has scored seven and veteran Ken Mosdell six.

Canadiens lost ground last week with a win and a tie in four games, counting three of a possible eight points. The Red Wings and Leafs each won two and tied one in three starts, good for five of a possible six points.

Howe collected two goals and two assists last week to run his total points to 30. He has six goals and 14 assists. Lindsay, leader on assists, Lindsay has six goals and 13 assists. Reibel collected three assists last week and Reibel one goal and one assist. They rank fourth and five with 13 and 11 points, respectively. Geoffrion picked up two assists and follows with 16 points. Then comes Sloan, who got one assist in three games and now has 15 points. Richard is tied at 13 points with Eddie Sandford of Boston Bruins.

GADSBY MOVES UP

Bill Gadsby, hard-working defenceman of the lowly Chicago Black Hawks, turned on a goal and an assist and moved from a 10th place tie to eighth spot with 12 points.

Half a dozen players are tied for ninth with 11 points, including Watson with seven goals and four assists and Paul Ronty of New York Rangers, who matched Howe's four points by collecting one goal and three assists.

Harry Lumley of the Leafs is crowding Gadsby for 10th place as leading goalie. Sawchuk's goals-against average was 1.33 a week ago. Now it is 1.44. Lumley improved his 1.78 to 1.39.

BEXLEY, England (CP)—Young couples strolling down Love Lane here in future are due for a shock. The town council has decided to turn it into a highway, complete with electric lights.

Calgary to Stage Title Fight For First Time

CALGARY (CP)—The first Canadian championship fight ever staged in Calgary is scheduled for tonight with Yvon Durelle, the former Baie Ste. Anne, N.B. fisherman, putting his light heavyweight crown on the line against Doug Harper of Calgary.

Durelle, one of three fighting brothers, and one of four brothers in the Canadian Army, goes into the 12-round bout with a record of 16 straight victories, 12 by knockouts. In his last appearance here about a year ago, the 25-year-old Durelle scored a convincing victory over Irish Jimmy Nolan of Calgary. Durelle is a former holder of the Canadian middleweight championship.

Harper, another hard hitter, lost an unpopular decision here a month ago to Jim Byrne of Seattle. But his experience is rated above the 21-year-old Harper gave away about 40 pounds to the Seattle heavy and still came out of the fight unmarked.

HAS ADVANTAGE

Harper, a native of Saskatchewan who now lives in Amherst Valley area, 75 miles north of Edmonton, will enjoy an edge in reach and height but he will have to be at his best to contend with the more experienced easterner.

Both fighters finished training during the week-end.

Fight experts here give Harper a good chance of wining over Durelle but the New Brunswick boy has power in each hand and the ability to break up a fight at any time.

Harper spent the last two weeks in the woods in an effort to tough up.

A sell-out crowd of about 2,500 is expected.

Que. Frontenacs Told to Release Jacques Marcotte

MIDLAND (CP)—George Dudley secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said Monday that action will be taken against Quebec Frontenacs in the next day or two if the Frontenacs don't relinquish all claims on netminder Jacques Marcotte.

Dudley said the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association, of which the Frontenacs are a member, was informed last Friday that the Frontenacs will be suspended if they continue to use Marcotte.

It is reported that Marcotte, who was ruled by the CAHA to be the property of Quebec Citadelles of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, played for Frontenacs Saturday and Sunday. Frontenacs took over the berth in the QAHA Junior A series left vacant when the Citadelles joined the OHA.

Danny Lewicki Tied for Lead In Scoring Race

NEW YORK (AP)—Buffalo's forward line of Ed Slowinski, Don Marshall and Gaye Stewart has been jolted at the head of the American Hockey League scoring list by Danny Lewicki of Pittsburgh Hornets.

All four players have 24 points. Lewicki has played in 16 games, one less than the Buffalo players.

Pittsburgh rookie Parker MacDonald leads the goal scorers with 13.

Frank Eddolls, Buffalo's playing coach, is tops in the assist department with 17 and Jacques Plante of Buffalo is the leading goal tender with an average of 2.35 in 17 games.

Sports Roundup

BY GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) — Kid Gavilan's plans are a deep mystery to the International Boxing Club. The Cuban welterweight heads back to his native Cuba. The head promoters have a certain suspicion it will be some time before they can effect a match between Gavilan and Bobo Olson for the latter's middleweight title.

The public at an IBC spokesman explains, that The Kood discovered that Bobo's fee still could make the 147-pound limit and be strong enough to pound the daylights out of the man who quite probably is the world's second-best welterweight. Author Boston Gavilan wasn't sure about it before.

"He wasn't kidding about wanting a crack at Olson," said Murray Goodman, who is the IBC's most voluble talker. "He still does and I feel sure we'll make the fight happen."

"That Cuban will never be content until he has matched Sugar Ray Robinson's record of winning both titles.

Goodman said he had just had an interesting talk with Dr. Vincent Nardiello, the official physician for the New York Athletic Commission and Kog Robinson's personal physician

"The doc says he thinks now he'll make a serious attempt to get Robby to do a comeback," Goodman said. "He says he doesn't care how long Sugar's been away that he still can lick Gavilan twice a night.

We suggested feebly that the title had wandered pretty far afield from the original topic, a tender-wrist humdinger between Gavilan and Olson.

Goodman answered that matches like that don't made easily. "It takes a lot of time," he said. "For one thing, Olson has another five months before he has to defend his title.

"Then take Gavilan. I see the Syracuse promoter wants to pay him $50,000 to fight Carmen Basilio again up there. The IBC has a contract with Gavilan, but we probably would loan him out if he wants to take that fight."

Coach Charges Players Tampered With by Argos

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Coach Al Newman of Windsor AKO, has charged that officials of Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four used "under-the-table dealings" during the week-end in an attempt to sign several AKO juniors for tryouts with Argos next season.

Several members of AKO, who played with defeated Intermediate Junior crown against Saskatoon Hilltoppers, said they met with Frank Clair, Argos coach.

The players are: Halfbacks Zeno Karcz and Bob Fletcher, end Ed Mukarchuk and tackle Remo Capet. Tommy Grant of Patterson Collegiate Panthers in the Windsor Secondary School Association League, also met with Clair.

Informed of the meeting, Newman said he didn't approve of Clair's action.

"Clair has no right to come barging into town when we've getting ready for the biggest game of the season," he said.

"We've always played fair with the Argos through the years and helped them off to any promising prospects we've seen playing here. The least they can do now is keep their hands off our players until after we've played our game out west."

Als Will Be Injury-Riddled For First Game With Ti-Cats

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Toronto Argonauts Saturday Alouettes, in the Big Four football playoffs, with Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

They worked out Monday night for the last time before the teams meet in Hamilton Wednesday in the first of best-of-three series.

Absentees were guard Ray Cicia, fired Jim Miller, flying wing Johnny Blatchier and tackle Tex Coulter.

Coulter who suffered a broken ankle in a game Oct. 31, is still out of action. Cicia and Miller are not expected to dress because of knee injuries. Blatchier is in hospital with influenza but may be able to play.

Backfielder Tommy Manastersky was reported a doubtful starter. Should he do win the series and play in the Grey Cup game Nov. 28, Cicia would not be on hand anyway. He was the player named earlier to be dropped, among Alouettes' nine imports in the event the team reached the big Canadian game.

USE NEWCOMERS

Other players still nursing injuries but in shape to play are: Tom Leckie, recovering from fractured ribs and a dislocated thumb; backfielder Chuck Hunsinger, injured thigh, and quarterback Al Dekdebrun, still wearing a cast on his left hand.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

An old-timer of sport, to whom lacrosse was a game to be revered, would have been surprised a few weeks back at the very skimpy coverage accorded the Mann and Minto cup games, except in the sections immediately concerned. Since these trophies represent, respectively, the senior and junior championships of Canada, the general lack of interest displayed therein by the press of the Dominion is unfortunate, the more so, since lacrosse is officially and legally Canada's national game.

Except for hockey, lacrosse is the fastest game played afoot, and a lacrosse field is no place for a weakling. For it is a rugged, bruising game, skill and bodily contact. And it is the oldest of all the games played in America, ante-dating baseball and hockey by far as records indicate, the first Canadian clubs were organized in the 1830's, but each followed its own rules and there was not standardization until 1860-61. The code of regulations then drawn up by Dr. W. George Beers, known as "Father of Lacrosse" gave the game great impetus and it became the National game by act of Parliament passed in 1867.

For years it flourished mightily. Epic battles were fought east and west, famous teams in the east such as Ottawa Capitals, Toronto Tecumsehs, Montreal AAA., Nationals and Shamrocks and Cornwall mighty stars. Montreal Crescent Coat it held, and still holds great favor. But in the east interest has waned, as baseball, hockey and football grew in stature.

As played by the white man, who adopted the game from the Indians, lacrosse was introduced to the United States in the 1850's when John R. Flannery sponsored a meeting of the Montreal Shamrocks and an Indian team at Boston. The game was played on Boston Commons, in the now-roaring heart of the Hub. After that contest many New England groups began experimenting with the Indian game. The U.S. Intercollegiate Association was organized a few years later and it is now the guiding body. The original manoeuvres hailed from New England, but today teams as far south as the Carolinas are included. The game is played in scores of United States colleges.

International competition has been an important feature of the sport's popularity in other years. An American squad first visited England in 1884, and, prior to World War II, American and Canadian clubs met annually for the Joe Lally Trophy, named in honor of the grand old sportsman who lives in Cornwall, once a hot-bed of the game, from whence came such stars as Newsy Lalonde, John White and the DeCrays. The John R. Flannery Memorial Cup was played in competition in 1930, when Syracuse, leading United States team of that season, played an Oshawa-Cumberland squad.

Lacrosse, a great game, is far from dead. But in general public interest, it has declined, a strange development, for a country in which it is the national game, with its roots extending back into the days when Indian rivals played it with as many as 200 men a side.

Ottawa and Montreal Get Most Offensive Team Spots While Ti-Cats Best Defenders

By WILF GIBSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Ottawa Rough Riders and Montreal Alouettes, who have shown they can break a game wide open with their quick-striking scoring punch, today landed two players each on the Big Four football all-star offensive team.

The shattering offensive power of these clubs and the sharp defensive play of Hamilton Tiger-Cats were recognized in the selections made by football writers, sportscasters and coaches for separate all-star offensive and defensive lineups.

TI-CATS BEST DEFENDERS

The selectors, who picked the teams for The Canadian Press, turned to Tiger-Cats to provide the remaining members of the defensive squad. Seven Hamilton players won berths on this squad, Montreal and Toronto Argonauts got two each and Ottawa Rough Riders remaining position.

The two offensive spots that didn't go to the Rough Riders and Alouettes were divided by Argonauts and Hamilton. In the last few years have dominated the all-star selections in this season confided to one mythical dream squad.

THE OFFENSIVE TEAM

Flying Wing: Bob Simpson, Ottawa.

Halves: Gene Roberts and Johnny Bright, Ottawa Rough Riders.

Quarter: Sam Etcheverry, Montreal.

Centre: Tom Hugo, Montreal.

Guards: Ed. Bradley, Montreal; Kay Vaughan, Ottawa.

Tackles: Art Coulter, Montreal; Vince Mazza, Hamilton.

Ends: Bernie Faloney, Hamilton; Don McCulloch, Montreal.

THE DEFENSIVE TEAM

Flying Wing: Ted Toogood, Toronto.

Halves (Tentative): Lou Kusserow and Dick Brown, Hamilton; Howie Trapp, Toronto.

Halves (Secondary): Red Edinger, Toronto; Ralph Toogood, Hamilton.

Guards: Vince Scott and Eddie Bevan, Hamilton.

Tackles: Vince Mazza, Hamilton; Tex Coulter, Montreal.

Ends: Pete Neumann, Hamilton; Doug McClelland, Montreal.

FEW CANADIANS

The selectors, whose votes were weighted to give equal balloting strength to each city in the league, picked imports for 11 positions in the offensive line-up. The only Canadians to make the squad were flying wing Bob Simpson, the third straight year he has been named to an all-star.

There was little chance for Canadians to crash the offensive line-up with all the teams concentrating their attacking forces in imports. But they shone on defence and six of the positions on the defensive team went to native players.

They were flying wing Ted Toogood of Argos, tertiary half Dick Brown of Hamilton, secondary half Ralph Toogood of Hamilton, guard Eddie Bevan of Hamilton and ends Pete Neumann of Hamilton and Doug McNichol of Montreal.

MAZZA'S FOURTH TIME

Only two players, tackles Vince Mazza of Hamilton and Tex Coulter of Montreal, were chosen for both the offensive and defensive teams. It was the fourth straight year that Mazza has won all-star rating since coming to Hamilton from Buffalo Bills. Tex Coulter made the grade in his first season in Canadian football after an outstanding career with the professional New York Giants and the college Army team.

Coulter led the balloting for offensive tackle with 319 points of a possible 330 against Mazza's 184 but the Hamilton player squeezed him out as first choice for the tackle spot on the defensive team with 183 points against Coulter's 172. John Kissell, the main figure in Cleveland Browns' threatened lawsuit against Ottawa for alleged contract-jumping, was the lowest of the tackle, was third on each team with 132 points in the offensive line-up and 146 for the defensive squad.

FLOWERS CLOSE

There was no unanimous choice for any position but Bernie Faloney, Ottawa's all-Canadian end from Purdue University, playing his first season in Canada, came close. He was picked by all but one selector for the offensive team, receiving 322 of a possible 330 points. Montreal's John O'Quinn, the other spectacular pass-catching offensive end, was not far behind with 313 points. For O'Quinn it was the second straight year he has earned all-star ranking.

Ottawa players, with the selection of Simpson, Gene Roberts and Johnny Bright, were picked for and but one of the positions on the offensive team's half line. Little Joe Scudero, Argonauts' lone representative on that line-up, was picked for the other half back.

Montreal's triple-threat quarterback, Sam Etcheverry, won the pivot spot on the offensive team in a tie-breaker. He got 165 points against 42 for Tom O'Malley of Ottawa and 38 for Bobby Wirkowski of Argonauts.

ALMOST ON TWO TEAMS

Tom Hugo, who was captain of the University of Denver team last season, almost got caught a berth on both teams. He got the nod for offensive centre and was edged out by Tooby for one of the two secondary half spots on the defensive squad.

Ottawa's Kaye Vaughan was another lineman who almost landed both-way positions. The former University of Tulsa player was picked as offensive guard to share with Montreal's Ed Bradley, from Chicago Bears.

Two Hamilton players, Bevan and Vince Scott, were named as the defensive guards. It was the third straight year that Bevan had been selected at that spot. Scott, too, it was the third time he has made the all-star list. He was named previously in 1950 and 1952.

Toogood's brother Ralph is finishing on punt receiving won him the defensive flying wing position. He was selected as runner-up to the brilliant pass defence work of Hamilton's Ted Toogood, Howie Trapp, Dick Brown and Ottawa's Howie Turner in picking them as the tertiary defence.

FIRST TIMERS

For Toogood, Brown and Kusserow it was the first time they had been selected for all-star rating.

Along with Tooby, who won all-star nomination in 1948 and 1949 as an end with Montreal, the selectors picked rugged Red Ettinger of Argonauts as the two secondary halves. Ettinger was chosen last season as centre and he combined all-star offensive and defensive team.

Two other players listed as all-stars for the first time were Neumann and McCulloch, chosen as the defensive ends.

Gerry Kesselring Is Named Top Amateur Golfer

TORONTO (CP)—Gerry Kesselring, the tall, affable amateur who gave his name to the art of golf in Canada, has been named Ontario's top amateur golfer for the third and last time.

The 34-year-old Kitchener ace, one of the best shotsmiths in the country for years, won the honor for the third time in five years on the strength of his performances this year when he took just about every title in Ontario golfdom.

The Ontario Golf Association announced its 1953 ratings today. It was just about a carbon copy of the standings for the last three years. In second place was dapper Nick Weslock, a veteran from Windsor's Essex Club, and third was Toronto Scarboro's Phil Farley.

A FREQUENT WINNER

Kesselring, who announced last September that he was retiring from the United States tournament trail for the next two years, was a leading contender for the honor. Since he displaced Weslock three years ago he has been a frequent winner in tournaments with monotonous regularity. Weslock, who placed second to Farley in the amateur section of the Canadian Open, was the Ontario Open champion. Ontario Amateur, was a Willingdon Cup medalist for the first time, as well as other smaller tournaments.

Others listed in the province's top 12, in order of rankings, are: Jack Nash of the London Hunt Club; Ken Bowman, Toronto Islington, tied for fourth; Mel Shannon, Kitchener Westmount; Jim Neale, Hamilton Thanadel; Ken Forbes, Oxford Golf and Country Club.

HONORABLE MENTIONS

The rankings committee gave honorable mentions today to Al Cassidy of Toronto St. George's, W. Hamilton of Ottawa, Richard Rockway, Doug McKellar of Toronto Rosedale, Jim Riordan of Rockway, and Colin Sharp of Sarnia Lambton Golf and Country Club.

Although he has never won the Canadian amateur championship, Kesselring's record in attaining is regarded by many experts as Canada's best amateur, particularly at medal play.

He has and 47 he was Canadian junior champion. For years he has been a member of Ontario's four-man team in the Willingdon Cup interprovincial team matches. He was knocked out of the Canadian Amateur this year in the fourth round.

Windsor AKO To Defend Title Against Saskies

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Windsor AKO, undefeated in two seasons, leaves today for Saskatoon to defend their Canadian junior football title Saturday against Saskatoon Hilltops, western Canada champions. Three players originally expected to be in condition for the game.

Most severely injured was star halfback Zeno Karcz who suffered a fractured rib Nov. 7 when AKO defeated Hamilton Tiger-Cats to take the Ontario crown.

Team officials said Monday night flying wing Jack Forrest will wear a plastic mask to protect a fractured cheek bone suffered in a game last Saturday.

Sponsored by Alpha Kai Omega fraternity which devotes its efforts to service work and the support of junior sports, the Windsor squad scored 285 points during this season's eight games. They gave up 30 points.

Coach Al Newman said Karcz, despite his injuries, would be among the 25 players making the trip.

He was used sparingly last Saturday when the fraternity boys defeated Weston Alumni, 9-7, on a two-point safety.

Karcz is rated the team's No. 1 plunging halfback, a good pass receiver and the club's placement kicker.

In another important man is Bob Fletcher, the team's best kicker. MOVIES OF RECORD

Other players who, along with Karcz and Fletcher have received much attention in the season, are from Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four, Mudcat Grant, end tackle Remo Copat.

Mularchyk figured prominently in the provincial final against Hamilton when he racked up all Windsor's points.

Commenting on the battle with Hilltops, Newman said it is "going to take a lot of doing to beat that club."

"If we're not up for that one, we're in for a pack of trouble," AKO coach Al Newman said last year by defeating Edmonton.

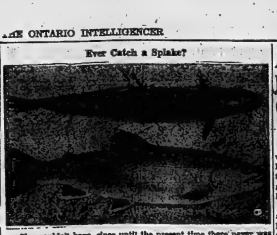
Notre Dame Still Top Football Team in U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Notre Dame and Maryland, only major teams to escape the season's first defeat, remained almost unchallenged in the Nov. 1 and 2 spots of the Associated Press rankings.

Notre Dame holds its position at the head of the Associated Press rankings for the eighth straight week, but is under new pressure from a constant pursuer, Maryland.

The first standing: 1, Notre Dame, 2, Maryland, 3, Michigan State, 4, Oklahoma, 5, UCLA, 6, Texas, 7, Illinois, 8, Wisconsin, 9, Southern California, 10, Rice.

Earns Decision Over Champion



QUEBEC (CP)—Claude Fortin of Montreal Monday night earned a unanimous decision over Canadian welterweight champion Rocky Kundabaia in a 10-round, boo-filled bout.

There were no knock-downs and Kundabaia was never in serious trouble, but he seemed rusty and was outpointed on the defensive. A crowd of 1,500 saw Fortin take the offensive from the first round and hold it throughout.

Fortin weighed in at 146½ and Brisebois at 147½.

Rink Eliminated

KITCHENER (CP)—T. S. Graham's Toronto Victorias rink was eliminated Monday in the first round of the Kitchener-Waterloo Granite Club invitation bonspiel. Graham, defending the Mutual Street Arena title last year, went down to defeat on the last end by a game with L. E. Ross of Agincourt 10-9.

Ever Catch a Spiake?

You couldn't have, since until the present time there never was such a fish. The spiake is a hybrid, cross between a speckled trout and a lake trout. Ontario Government hatcheries have successfully developed the new breed and have "planted" them in 10 Northern Ontario lakes. The spiake resembles both its parents. It is greyish with white spots on the sides. Fin and tail pattern resembles the speckled trout. It is easier to catch and hits a lure harder than either parent. — (CP Photo.)

Coach Voyles Will Not Drill Team Heavily Before Playoff

HAMILTON (CP) — Always a bridesmaid but never a bride, Hamilton Tiger-Cats will try for their first Grey Cup berth in five years when they meet Montreal Alouettes here Wednesday.

The game is the first of a best-of-three series for the Big Four championship.

The Tigers have made the Big Four playoffs during the last four seasons but each time were eliminated in the semi-finals, twice from Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four, Montreal Alouettes and Hamilton Wildcats.

Following Wednesday's opener in Hamilton, the finals move to Montreal for the second game Sunday. If a third game is necessary it will also be in Montreal Nov. 25.

LIGHT DRILLS

Coach Carl Voyles put his Tiger-Cats through a practice Monday and will hold another drill tonight. Linebacker Quincy Armstrong, who has an injured knee, will miss the series opener. Cam Fraser and Royal Bailey may play but it is doubtful. Dick Brown who played with the Tigers earlier this season but injured leg, is still limping. Voyles said he won't be running the Tigers through any heavy work before the series.

In the 37 Dominion finals here since 1921, Hamilton has been in five and has won four Grey Cups. They were defeated 18-13 by Winnipeg in 1935. Their last Grey Cup game was 1949 when they took a 23-14 victory over Winnipeg RCAF.

Many Hamilton players have been their employees of the denouement as of midday on Wednesday to go to the game. But the warnings are expected to go unheeded in this football-crazy city. Besides, many of the employers will be taking in the contest themselves.

Gene Roberts Is Big Four's Scoring Champ

TORONTO (CP)—Gene Choo-Choo Roberts, who went to Ottawa Rough Riders in exchange from Montreal Alouettes for the $200 service price, is the 1953 Big Four scoring champion.

Statistics compiled by The Canadian Press show the 29-year-old backfielder from Bonner Springs, Kas., with 86 points in 14 games, seven more than veteran Ken Poole of the Als, first-year import from New York Giants, Jimmy Stone of Riders, who jumped Chicago Cardinals this year, placed third with 65 points.

LOGAN STILL IMPROVING

But, despite the 1-3-3 placing of imports, the scoring honors belong to Canadian-born Tip Logan, fourth-place finisher with 61 points. The 29-year-old end was sent by Hamilton Tiger-Cats three years ago from Queen's in the Intercollegiate Union, has shown remarkable improvement each year.

His 1951 total of 36 scoring tills in 1951, his first season with the club, with 51 points, placed second in 1952 with 55 points and added another six this season. And two converts last Saturday in Hamilton's 18-8 victory over Ottawa in the Eastern final gave him seven 73 conversions without a miss in 73 conversions without a miss in 73 attempts.

Ulysses Curtis, Toronto Argonaut back who won the 1952 scoring title with 66 points, placed sixth position with 30 points on six touchdowns. Argonauts, with the exception of Logan, took the first 13 spots.

Canadian-born Bob Cunningham of Riders, winner of the Jeff Russel Trophy this year as the most valuable player in the union, was 14th with 30 points.

FRACAS FINISHES FIRST

Gino Fracas of the University of Western Ontario Mustangs in the Intercollegiate Union won the college championship with 44 points, four up on Ron Stewart of Queen's and Steve Oneschuk of the University of Toronto Blues, each with 40.

Fracas, who scored only nine points in 1952,came up with an 11 of his team's 13 points at London last Saturday when McGill defeated the Mustangs 24-13. That was enough to boost him from fifth place. Stewart was injured in the first half as Queen's lost 6-1 to the Blues. Oneschuk picked up one point on a conversion.

Annual Major League Draft Opens Nov. 30

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Anybody want to gamble on the Pacific Coast League betting champion for only $15,000; a former big league 30-game winner for $4,000; a no-hit hurler for the same fee?

These and many others can be acquired at the annual major league draft Nov. 30 in Atlanta, Ga. The draft list, compiled and issued by the baseball commissioner's office, contains some 1,200 minor league players to choose from. All are a gamble.

Last year, 11 players were drafted at a cost of $130,000—a slim total by comparison. Six managed to last the season and most distinguished himself to any great degree.

First call goes to the American League's newest entry, Baltimore Orioles, by virtue of the switched St. Louis Browns' last place finish in 1953. Next comes Pittsburgh, National League cellarites, and so on through to New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers.

MANY OLDIES

This year's crop includes such oldies as Dodger Bob Dillinger, Clint Hartung, Gene Bearden, Don Kolloway, George Munger, Hank Gumpert, Howard Fox, Bobby Hofman, Allie Clark, George Wilson and Mickey Grasso.

The list includes a number of good "name" players. As usual, Cincinnati Reds and St. Paul Saints, Brooklyn's triple A farm club, loaded with first division players. Under the rules, only one club each club may draft from, unless the player is designated as subject to unrestricted draft. Prices start at $15,000 for players in the PCL to $10,000 for Texas League players. The highest, $7,500 from double A clubs, $6,000 class B, $2,000 in class C and $2,000 in class D.

Bombers Scout Balmy Beach

TORONTO (CP)—Winnipeg Blue Bombers shorted the last football game of Toronto Balmy Beach against Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen.

The Bombers, Western Interprovincial football champions, have to defeat Balmy Beach in Winnipeg Nov. 21 to advance into the Grey Cup final. But there won't be many persons betting on the Beachers.

The scout, Tommy Ford, a former player for Balmy Beach, said although he doesn't expect the Ontario Rugby Football Union champions to beat the Bombers "there's about the best ORFU club I've seen in some time. They're coached and loaded with hustle and desire."

Saskatoon, Victoria Continue Win Streaks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winning streaks were kept intact Monday night in the Western Hockey League.

Saskatoon Quakers won their fourth straight with a 3-2 victory over the league-leading Vancouver Canucks. At Victoria the Cougars won their seventh straight, 5-3 victory over Calgary Stampeders.

At Saskatoon, Eddie Bumbacco, Vic Howe and Jackie McLeod notched the Quakers' goals. It was the second Canucks game without goalie Chuck Rayner.

Victoria's goals were scored four of the Victoria markers, with the other coming from defenceman Ashworth, George Pargeter and Ralph Lundy scored for Calgary.

Lance Rumble Wants Uniform Rules in Judging

TORONTO (CP) — J. Lance Rumble, retiring Canadian Football Coaches Association said Monday that the goal of the association is to achieve uniformity.

Rumble, speaking to the association's annual luncheon, said: "We've got to get unanimous about the rules we're going to have in our association—the rules that leaders can abide by from one end of the country to the other."

The retiring president said some of the methods of the American Horse Shows Association, relating to judging, are under study here. The compiling and maintenance of proper records is also being considered, he said.

Blue Bombers Start to Work For Beaches

WINNIPEG (CP)—It was back to work for Winnipeg Blue Bombers Monday night.

Coach George Trafton sent his club through a light drill to loosen up after a day of following Winnipeg's 30-24 triumph in the no-off game against Edmonton Eskimos in the western final.

The rest of the week, Bombers will get down to serious practice for their Grey Cup semi-final here Saturday against Toronto Balmy Union champions.

Trafton doesn't think the Beachers will be any pushovers.

"We're not taking them lightly. They've got some imports on their team which could make the Argos. But we're going to beat them."

Following the workout, Trafton reviewed the film of the final game against the Eskis with the team.

Pass Defence Stressed By Varsity Squad

TORONTO (CP) — Coach Bob Masterson stressed pass defence Monday as the University of Toronto Blues went through the last full-scale workout in preparation for the Intercollegiate football final against Western Mustangs here Saturday. The Senior Intercollegiate Football Union championship will be at stake.

Masterson said he thinks Western will utilize more of its passing during the day. He spent Sunday looking at films of previous Western-Varsity games.

The Blues will also use the same line-up they used against Queen's in the season's final game Saturday.

Job Still Open

OTTAWA (CP)—Clem Crowe can coach Ottawa Rough Riders again next season if he wants to, an official of the Big Four football club said Monday.

J. F. McAuliffey, Riders' president, said Crowe left for his farm at Lemoyne, N.Y., after the final game of the Big Four season which Ottawa lost 13-8 to Hamilton Tiger-Cats. The loss ended Riders' playoff hopes.

"I think he did a better offer the coaching job for next fall if he's again," McAuliffey said.

Peace Congress Wants Meeting Of Top Powers

OTTAWA (CP)—Members of the Red-tinged Canadian Peace Congress came to Parliament Hill Monday with a brief asking support for a meeting of "the leading powers" to stave off war.

The cabinet turned down a request for a meeting with a congress delegation and, instead, the congress will present its brief today to one of the cabinet secretaries.

Meanwhile, groups from the national council of the congress, about 30 members of which held week-end meetings here, went through the centre block submitting the brief to individual members of Parliament.

One of the points in the brief was that there had been a 48-percent "yes" vote among 34,121 Canadians in a congress-sponsored "national peace referendum" on the question of a meeting of leading powers with a view to settling, by negotiation, world problems threatening peace.

Fighting Mohawks Ask Exemption From Tariffs

OTTAWA (CP)—Fighting Mohawks of the Iroquois tribe have demanded that the government honor an ancient treaty giving them the right to bring in goods from the United States duty-free.

Dressed in native plumage, a group of them paraded to the Exchequer Court of Canada where their Ottawa lawyer, Gordon Henderson, appealed against customs duties imposed on personal articles brought in by Louis Francis, an Indian welder at St. Regis, Que.

The hearing, which opened Monday, is a test case. On it will depend whether Canada's 136,000 Indians will have to pay duties on the goods they buy in the U.S. or whether they will be able to bring them in duty-free, a right they say was given to them under the Jay treaty of 1794.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was late for dinner and ma was walking up and down looking at the living room clock and talking to herself half mad and 3 quarters worried, saying, He knows I expect him to telephone when he's delayed. It's an ironclad rule and an unwritten law, so he has no possible excuse, I dont know what he can be thinking of. He's probably not thinking at all. Suitch a man, oh dear, she said.

And she sat down and got up again and sat down again still talking to herself, and I thought, G, I better think of something to relieve her feelings.

And I said, Well heck, ma, he could be worse than late. What do you call that thing that happens to people when they cant ever remember their name or where they live, so they have to go around ringing doorbells and asking if they live there? I said, and ma said, Do you mean amnesia? Suitch an idea, your father never had that in his life. How can you even mention suitch an idea? He probably had half a dozen telefones staring him in the face, what a man, oh dear, she said.

Well then gosh, ma, there's probably nothing the matter with him, I said. Maybe he's bringing some man home to dinner for a serprise, or maybe even 2 men, and maybe he's kind of afraid you mite not like the idea, I said, and ma said, I've got a good mind to give you something you wont like the idea of yourself, I hope he knows better than that, even if he doesn't know enough to telefone, she said.

Which just then pop came home mad on account of having tried to telefone about 10 times and not getting any answer on account of me having accidently let the fone off the hook after I got through talking to Puds Simkins.

Ring the beginning of the actual end part.

HOLD CHOIR FESTIVAL

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—An international boys' choir festival was held Monday night at St. Thomas Anglican church. More than 100 boy choristers from seven different churches in Ontario and the United States took part.

Russia Refused ILO Membership

GENEVA, Switzerland (Reuters) The International Labor Organization Monday refused Russia's application for membership.

The ILO reply to Russia said its constitution makes no provision for membership on a basis of incomplete acceptance of obligations, it was announced.

The Soviet Union applied recently for readmission to the organization, but declared she would not consider herself bound by the article in ILO's constitution providing for appeals to the international court or other tribunals.

Steelworkers' Expert to Seek CCF Leadership

TORONTO (CP)—Fred Young, 46, political action representative of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL), announced Monday night he will seek the leadership of the Ontario CCF party at its convention here next week-end.

Born in Long Reach, N.B., he was at one time principal of a public school in Woodstock, N.B. He holds a master of arts degree from the University of Toronto. For six years he was a United Church minister.

He unsuccessfully contested Toronto Davenport riding for the CCF in the Aug. 10 federal election.

Andrew Brewin, Toronto lawyer, is the only other announced candidate for the leadership left vacant by the resignation of E. B. Jolliffe.

Will Resume Talks

TIMMINS (CP)—Talks will resume again Wednesday between officials of the strikebound Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines and the United Steelworkers of America (CIO).

The talks, aimed at settlement of the strike over union demands for the dues checkoff and pay increases, started last week-end.

Two hours of discussion ended late Monday with the announcement that further talks will be held. There was no indication of the progress or direction of the talks.

Upwards of 3,000 men are on strike in this northern Ontario district and eight of the 12 mines are idle.

Council Decides Not to Build Civic Arena

OSHAWA (CP)—City council has decided not to build a $700,000 civic arena to replace the one destroyed by fire last September.

Mayor John Naylor said service clubs, churches and others interested in replacing the arena should do it. He said the city's commitments are already too great.

The $500,000 arena was destroyed Sept. 16. Council had decided earlier a public vote on rebuilding the arena should be taken.

AIRMEN KILLED

CALGARY (CP) — The RCAF said Monday that LAC Edward Lacey, about 21, one of two airmen killed in a highway accident Saturday, was from Lanark, Ont. Lacey and 22-year-old LAC Norman Raymond Athey of Calgary, were killed when their car sideswiped a milk truck.

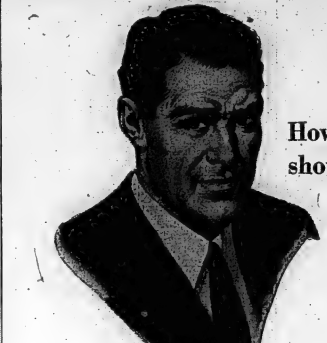
YEARS of medical research sponsored by the Ontario Mining Association may have found the answer to silicosis, the disease which attacks the lungs of miners exposed to silica dust. Curiously enough, the treatment consists of breathing very fine aluminum dust directly into the lungs; the aluminum renders the silica particles harmless. The treatment has been adopted in gold and other mining areas in Canada and throughout the world.

Aluminum, long used in hospital kitchens, today saves the medical profession in many ways —from aluminum foil for covering serious burns, to aluminum sextets for medical drainage, to aluminum blenders for the preparation of sterile biological products. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan)

NO SUNDAY SPORT

PETROLIA (CP)—Petrolia town council Monday night rescinded a Sunday sport by-law passed three weeks ago. The by-law would have submitted to the ratepayers at the Dec. 7 election the question of whether or not they wanted to have Sunday sports. A delegation numbering nearly 100 expressed their views against submitting the question to the electorate.

HEART ATTACK FATAL



KITCHENER (CP) — Winfred Stumpf, 66, cigar store operator, died Monday after suffering a heart attack in his car while driving to a club meeting.

LIBRARY TO BE BUILT

OSHAWA (CP)—Col. R. E. McLaughlin of Oshawa laid the cornerstone of a $400,000 public library Monday. The library was donated by Col. McLaughlin and will be officially opened next November.

You're "sitting pretty" behind the wheel

Take this Bel Air model. Rich-looking upholstery and appointments—roomy, comfortable seats with foam rubber cushions. Just turn the ignition key to start the engine and you're ready to go.

You get more power on less gas

Here's all the power and performance you could ever ask for. In Powerglide* models, you get the most powerful engine in Chevrolet's field — the new 115-h.p. "Blue-Flame." Gearshift models offer you the new 106-h.p. "Thrift-King" engine.

You can see all around

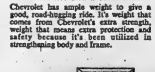
You see all the road ahead and see it close in. For you look out and down through a wide, curved, one-piece windshield that sweeps back in narrow corner posts. The panoramic rear window and big windows provide a clear view in all directions.

And it's the lowest-priced line

Chevrolet offers you about everything you could want. So what's the point in paying more? You can be ahead in every way with a new Chevrolet!

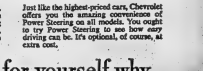
*Combination of Powerglide automatic transmission and 115-h.p. "Blue-Flame" engine optional on "Two-Ten" and Bel Air models at extra cost.

C-2528



I figured on paying about $200 more for a new car... until a Discovery Drive showed me all that Chevrolet offers

I was ahead in every way after this demonstration!



A Smoother and a Safer Ride

Chevrolet has ample weight to give a good, road-hugging ride. It's weight that comes from Chevrolet's extra strength, weight that means extra protection and safety because it's been utilized in strengthening body and frame.

You get greater gutsaway with the new Powerglide*

A lot finer performance on a lot less gas. Now you're automatically in "low" range for standing starts and for quick passing in city traffic. Then, automatically again, you slip smoothly into "cruising" range as you pick up speed.

Even Power Steering, if you want it

Just like the highest-priced cars, Chevrolet offers you the amazing convenience of Power Steering on all models. You ought to try Power Steering to see how easy driving can be. It's optional, of course, at extra cost.

FBI Head Opposed Truman's Decision To Retain White

J. Edgar Hoover Says Work Of FBI Hampered by Action

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—FBI director J. Edgar Hoover's disclosure that he opposed, but bowed to, former president Truman's decision to keep Harry Dexter White in the United States government has fanned political controversy in to spectacular case.

In precedent-breaking testimony, Hoover told the Senate internal security sub - committee at' a crowded televised hearing Tuesday that he advised against retaining White, who had been passed on an FBI report as an espionage prospect.

The giddy-faced FBI director said he had never committed his agency to any such arrangement, which he said would have been "inconsecv'nt" for it and "not within my province" to tell the top FBI efforts to keep an eye on White were hampered after Truman let White go from the post as U.S. director of the International Monetary Fund on through Feb. 26, 1946.

"At no time was the FBI a party to an agreement to promote Harry Dexter White and at no time did the FBI ever approve of such an arrangement," Hoover declared.

But Hoover confirmed that Truman, in the face of the adverse FBI said, permitted White to transfer from the treasury to the monetary fund post with the full knowledge and sanction of him. Truman did not contend that the FBI had approved this course.

CANADIAN INVOLVED

In another development Tuesday, Attorney-General Herbert Brownell made public a letter from Hoover to the White House in 1946 which said a "high-placed" Canadian government source told the FBI director White was slated to be moved into a position, the monetary fund post, which would give him the power to influence to a great degree deliberations of all International financial arrangements."

(In Ottawa Tuesday night, a government source said he had no knowledge of such a report.)

Hoover also said two Truman cabinet members involved did not favor keeping White in government service.

BROWNELL TESTIFIED

Brownell, who preceded Hoover as a witness, said any "reasonable man" would have to conclude that Truman knew" White was a spy when he appointed him.

But the attorney-general conceded, under questioning by Senator John J. McClellan (D-Ark.) that it was a matter of "judgment." He said he was not impugning Truman's motives but a former president had claimed in asserting executive privilege "old American people."

Brownell's father, that Truman was guilty of "blindness" and "laxity" toward Communists in government.

In Kansas City, Truman shrugged this off with a remark about "why waste words?"

Brownell said he had watched Bowsell's testimony on TV but not Hoover's. He added of the FBI director: "I'm sure he told the truth."

Fauci White, 70, a sister of Harry Dexter White, said in Boston that Brownell's charges are "false, all false." She said her brother, who died in 1948 after swearing he was not a spy, "loved this country" and "had no respect for Russia."

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis: Southwesterly winds have brought sunny skies and record-breaking mild weather to Ontario the past few days. Latest weather map shows the province sharply divided along a line from Northern Hudson Bay to northern Lake Superior to the Gulf of California with warm dry air to the east and colder air to the west of this line.

Because a disturbance is being born in the southwestern mountain states the eastward advancement of the colder air will be hindered and southern Ontario can expect another sunny mild day on Thursday. Increasing cloudiness is forecast for southern Ontario late Thursday afternoon and evening with the approach of this new disturbance.

Port of Cadiz May Become Big Naval Base

By HENRY BUCKLEY

CADIZ, Spain (Reuters) — The picturesque port of Cadiz, which in 1588 will celebrate its 4,000th birthday, hopes to become an important international naval base now that Spain has been opened up for United States naval vessels.

Cadiz hopes that it will be base bigger and better than Gibraltar. Gibraltar lies about 80 miles to the east and the people of Cadiz dislike it because it takes away from them a big and profitable trade in refuelling and supplying ships.

This Atlantic port founded by the Phoenicians has modernized its port so that 30,000-ton liners can dock almost in the centre of the city.

The people of Cadiz, known as Gaditanos, hope that the United States, under its agreement with Spain will dredge the harbor so that battleships and aircraft carriers can enter.

STRATEGIC POSITION

Cadiz has a strategic position for the Mediterranean. Naval units stationed there can be switched east into the Mediterranean, west into the Atlantic, south to Africa or north to European waters.

The United States also is expected to make an airfield at La Parra, 10 miles from the bay from Cadiz. There is talk, too, of a highway from the French frontier to Cadiz.

The present town of Cadiz was built mainly on the reclaimed land when most of America belonged to Spain and her port was regarded as the wealthiest in the world. Gold and silver and spices' and coffee.

On the top of many houses are still small look-out towers. In olden days the ship merchants had servants in these towers scanning the horizon for any sign of their merchants' ships arriving from America.

Belgian Mother Of Skating Champ Pushed Off Train

KITZINGEN, Germany (AP)—Simone de Ridder, 51-year-old Belgian skating instructor and mother of Olympic champion, died today of injuries suffered when she was thrown from a moving train.

She sought a tall, thin man who was believed to have pushed Mrs. de Ridder from an international train before dawn Tuesday after robbing her.

The Kitzingen station master told police that as the train rolled through the yards he saw a woman clinging to a window ledge while a man tried to push her down.

Her daughter, Micheline Lannoy, was a member of the Belgian Olympic pairs skating competition.

'Croakers and Moaners' Assailed For Criticizing Queen's Race-Going

LONDON (Reuters)—Two mass-circulation London papers today came to the defence of Queen Elizabeth in a current controversy with British Methodists on whether or not she should go to races.

The Daily Mirror and its rival Daily Sketch today forced to attack a Methodist minister, Rev. Donald Soper, for telling the Queen that she should stay away from the tracks.

Mr. Soper, president of the British Methodist conference, told a Manchester audience Monday that the Queen would be wiser if she kept away from "what is erroneously called the sport of kings" but which is largely 'the house of racekeepers'."

The Mirror told its 4,000,000 readers that Mr. Soper should explain himself to the stewards of the Jockey Club whose job it is "to employ racketeers out of the sport."

"There are shady characters everywhere—even in church congregations," the Mirror added. "But nobody says the Queen must keep away from church to show disapproval."

Herbert Gunn, editor of The Sketch, joined in a front-page article:

"They are at it again. The croakers, the moaners, the killjoys, the pestiferous busybodies: Queen Elizabeth is the target. Keep telling her what not to do.

"The Queen has said that Mr. Soper had written in the Socialist Daily Herald that, 'When my wife and I go on vacation we always put our swimsuits under our Sunday best and hope for a short sermon."

Editor Gunn concluded that the Queen has done nothing that the vast majority of her subjects would not wish her to do.

CHARGES DOSCO IS SABOTAGING COAL INDUSTRY

Gillis Says Company Is Under U.S. Control

OTTAWA (CP)—A former Cape Breton coal miner Tuesday night suggested that the government declare a state of emergency in Nova Scotia pending an investigation of the province's coal industry.

Charlie Gillis (CCF—Cape Breton South) said in the Commons that Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation has "sabotaged" eastern Canada's steel and coal industry and should be investigated.

He urged an extension of unemployment insurance benefits for more than 4,000 unemployed miners, and said 600 more men were laid off Monday at Dominion Steel plant at Sydney, N. S.*

"This is a time of emergency," Mr. Gillis said during the throne speech debate.

Dosco was "no longer interested" in mining coal except to supply the Sydney steel plant. There was "a gradual, deliberate breakdown in the industry by the company itself."

U. S. CONTROL

The Cape Breton had come under control of United States financiers and had set up a marketing board to buy American coal for sale in Quebec and Ontario, its advertisements encouraging people in Ontario and Quebec to buy Kentucky coal. Nova Scotia and Ontario were unable to buy Cape Breton coal.

Mr. Gillis said the government controlled 37,500,000 without enforcement powers.

LACK RESPONSIBILITY

About 75,000 persons, one-sixth of the province's population, depended on Dosco for a livelihood. Because of the company's irresponsibility and was laying off steel workers although steel was being imported from the U. S.

Unemployed miners had no other industries to go to. The government should show as much consideration for Nova Scotia miners as it showed for immigrants from Europe.

If a capital was gaining sufficient control of Canadian companies in the country, it should tell U. S. products in Canada, Mr. Gillis said.

The U. S. was taking over Canada economically and "most of us haven't the sense to see it. Economic control led to political control. Some day the people might wake up to find "an American military dictatorship wrapped around our neck."

WHEAT PLAN

He supported his party's plan on wheat surplus, John Blakemore (PC—Lethbridge) called for government loans at two-per-cent interest to build farm granaries; Solon Low (SC—Peace River) a cent a bushel on farm-stored wheat; Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre) for farm storage comparable to grain elevator rates and loans of dollars to overseas wheat customers.

The plan should also cover oats, said Barry Mather (CCF—Skeena) Olympic pairs skating competition.

Mother of Greenlease Boy Was Told Child Still Alive

By AL DOPKING

KANSAS CITY (AP)—The federal government expects to wrap up its death demand today for the kidnap-slitters of six-year-old Bobby Greenlease, whose mother testified Tuesday on how the confessed killers got $600,000 in ransom after slaying her son.

In an unflattering voice, Bobby's mother told the jury how Carl Austin Hall, 34, repeatedly assured her at the time only she was alive even though he had been slain over the telephone kidnaping from a private school.

Her multi-millionaire husband, Robert C. Greenlease, sat a few feet from Hall. The 71-year-old automobile dealer at a bird per closely as she talked. He had been there all day, listening to the government press its case for the death penalty for Hall and Bonnie Brown Heady.

Hall and Mrs. Heady are being tried only for the kidnapping, under the federal Lindbergh law which provides the death penalty. The couple already have pleaded guilty and the jury is solely concerned with punishment. Conviction the maximum penalty should be imposed.

FACE MURDER CHARGE

However, should the couple escape the death penalty in this trial, they would still face Kansas state charges of kidnapping and murder, also calling for death as the maximum penalty. The state said Bobby was filed in Olathe, Kans. Tuesday, in the county where the boy was slain after he had been taken from his Missouri home.

The appearance of Mrs. Greenlease, in her mid-40s, climaxed a day in which the government drove hard to wrap up its case.

Mrs. Greenlease told of her first telephone talk with the kidnapper Oct. 4, six days after her boy's abduction.

"I said, 'this is Mrs. Greenlease. We are willing and ready to pay the money, but first I must know that my son is alive and well.' He said, 'I can assure you your son is alive and well.'

"He said, 'by request Mr. Lee (certain a family friend) made to have you speak to your son, we would not carry out. We were afraid to take him to a telephone.' I said, 'I have to have him to answer questions for me,' and he said, 'yes.'

"I asked him to ask Bobby the name of the driver of our automobile in Europe this summer and I said Bobby will be right there. He's built in his play room the night that he was taken from our home."

Mrs. Greenlease said the kidnapper promised to call her back within an hour. He called back about 1:30 the same morning and told her Bobby wouldn't talk. He just dummied up."

Flying Boxcar Hits 'Chutists, 10 Die in Air, Five on Plane

PORT BRAGG, N. C. (AP)—A big C-119 Flying Boxcar hurtled to the ground today after paratroops drop here Tuesday killing 15 men—five aboard and 10 floating from parachutes in the air.

It probably never will be known which of the men were killed by the falling plane and which had their 'chutes collapse in the tragedy.

The Boxcar apparently developed engine trouble during a drop at about 1,500 feet over the scene of the 82nd Airborne Division. The drop was part of the division's training project.

5 DIE IN PLANE

The pilot, co-pilot and two other air force men rode the plane down to the ground with it, apparently trapped inside when a shovel attached to his uniform hung at the jump door. Thirty-seven others jumped safely.

The other victims had jumped from companion planes in the flight.

One of the crash survivors, Sgt. C. Hobert Sluss, said two "sticks" of 'chutists were in the plane when it hit. Then "the plane hit somewhere and exploded like two automobiles hitting."

TOSSED TWO OUT

Sluss said the pilot whose job is to see that the men jump on signal, said the plane "started to weave and equipment was thrown into the aisle. . . . A couple of the men tossed the three boxes right out."

Officers said the plane was flying at about 1,200 feet before starting its last drop. It then went sharply to the left, apparently trying to avoid hitting more of the drifting parachutists.

Farmer Retracts His Confession He Slew Three

DIGNE, France (Reuters) — Farmer Gaston Dominici today retracted his confession that he murder of British scientist Sir Jack Drummond, his wife and daughter Elsie, and declared that he was "completely innocent."

Members of his family here supported him, although one of the prosecuted old man that severe police pressure had forced him into a false admission of guilt. But Magistrate Marcel Boyer, who is trying the murder charge against Dominici Monday, said the police case against the 77-year-old defendant was so complete that the denials made no difference.

Boyer told the jury after 40 hours of police interrogation last week-end Dominici admitted he killed the British tourists as they camped on his farm 15 months ago.

Dominici's wife, Marie, insisted the old man had not left his house on the night of the murder.

Meanwhile, Italian Premier Antonio Eden has blamed "irresponsible Italian elements" for sparking the riots.

ANTI-DUMPING RESTRICTIONS ARE PLANNED

Textile Trade Told Law To Be Stiffened

OTTAWA (CP) — Stiffening of Canada's anti-dumping law against cheap foreign goods competing with Canadian products is in prospect, cabinet ministers Tuesday told a delegation from the textile trade.

The change, they indicated, will be directed chiefly at keeping out textiles from abroad that have been dumped on the Canadian market and causing unemployment in this country's textile mills.

Government informants said later the legislation will be introduced when Commons resists chiefly of a redefinition of the term "fair market value" as applied to imports.

It would have the effect of averaging out the dumping price of a line of goods over a period to eliminate such things as the throwing of low-cost lines into Canada at the end of a style cycle.

However, the delegation group of ministers under Trade Minister Howe left no doubt it was the textile representatives the government will not take action against fair competition with Canadian industry from other countries.

LARGEST DELEGATION

The 200-member delegation from textile-manufacturing communities of Canada, the largest ever to appear before the Commons, was headed by Frank Sam Fluhler, vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers (AFL), speaking at a dinner in honor of John Bruce, general president of the AFL-CIO Plumbers Union, who at 78 has retired after 50 years in the trade union movement. Premier Frost attended the dinner.

"I'm not the first," Mr. Fluhler said to his audience of 500 at the Toronto Hotel Royal. "I played ball with labor to the best of my ability at all times and is still doing 'so."

Smoke-Laden Fog Lifts in London But Will Return

LONDON (Reuters)—Fog blanketed much of London for the second day for the second day running.

But London, still fearful of The Big Smoke, which killed up to 6,000 persons in four days last winter, took no chances this time.

A heavy smoke-laden pall which boiled out the daylight during most of Tuesday lifted today and visibility increased to 600 yards. But it was stated that forecasters say that it would be back by Friday.

Elsewhere in Britain and across Europe, fog, rain, thunderstorms, gary, air and surface travel were snarled by continuing fog.

Eisenhower Says Common Problems To Be Discussed

Looking Forward to Big Three Meeting in Bermuda

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower said today the Big Three meeting in Bermuda next month will be devoted to common problems of defense against Communist aggression in Europe and Asia.

He listed the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Korea and Indo-China among the topics he said will be discussed at the conference with Prime Minister Churchill and French Premier Laniel.

The three nations have many common interests, Eisenhower told a press conference, and if the forthcoming informal conversations can eliminate friction between the governments that is all to the good. The meeting will be held Dec. 4-8.

PREPARING STATEMENT

Eisenhower also said, in answer to a question, he is hopeful that before too long he can lay before the American people a clear description of their national security problems.

Eisenhower announced some time ago that he was working on a White Paper statement which he hoped to outline exactly what concerns the U.S. from the standpoint of its continued defense and related matters, and what his administration is doing about it.

He said he hopes his administration has demonstrated by its actions that there need be no fear on the part of the American people that the government is not keeping on its vigilance against Communists.

QUESTION BRINGS ANGER

A reporter cited the statement of former president Truman that the Eisenhower administration had not embraced "McCarthyism."

Flushing, the president replied abruptly that he was ready to take the judgment of the assembled reporters on that matter.

The president avoided a direct yes or no answer when asked about reports that Pakistan is interested in the United States military aid and might grant air bases in return for it.

So far as Pakistan is concerned the United States must be careful to do anything that would cause distress in neighboring India, he said.

The Indian government has its dicated great concern over reports that the United States might aid to strengthen Pakistan.

DEFICIT SEEN

On domestic conditions, Eisenhower said he does not believe the federal budget can be balanced by the fiscal beginning next July 1.

He also said the administration probably won't know until next month whether it will have to ask Congress to increase the national debt ceiling of $275,000,000.

Reds Propose Alternative Plan For Peace Talks

PANMUNJOM (AP) — Allied and Communist negotiators today appeared to be making some progress in talks to arrange Korean peace conference already long delayed.

The Communists today turned down an American plan for inviting neutral powers to the full-dress talks. But they apparently abandoned demands for a round-table conference at which non-belligerents including Russia—would have a full voice.

The Reds suggested instead that neutrals attend the conference as a third party to insure a "harmonious atmosphere"—but with also no voting power.

Arthur Dean, United States special envoy, said the vaguely worded Red plan needed clarifying and asked the Reds a series of questions designed to obtain information over the role neutrals would play in a conference.

EXPECT ANSWERS

The Communists indicated they would answer Dean's questions when the diplomats meet again Thursday.

Observers were increasing signs that the Communists might not resume interviews with Chinese and Korean war prisoners who have refused to go home.

The Indian command said there will be no interviews Thursday and a spokesman said he had no idea when the explanations will resume.

Branch Library Will Be Opened In K. G. School

Approval of the Belleville Public School Board for use of secondary classrooms in Queen Elizabeth School as a branch library was granted at this week's meeting.

Miss Olive Selleck, librarian at the Corby Public Library said today that setting up of the branch library at King George school to serve residents in the northern end of the city could take place as soon as necessary in the new year. However, the branch library might not be opened until September.

The new branch library would be operated in the same manner as the Corby branch library at Queen Elizabeth school which is open seven days a week from three to six in the afternoons. The library at Queen Elizabeth school has seen excellent response on the part of children in the Corbyville area, with circulation of adult books is growing steadily.

The proposed branch library at King George school there will be a good selection of books both for children and adults with special emphasis on books for boys for teen agers. This is thought advisable to take care of the interests of the students who will be attending the new high school in that area.

Operation of Public Schools To Cost Taxpayers $8,000 More Than Paid in 1953

Despite the fact there will be an additional 13 classrooms in operation in the public schools next year, the cost of operating the school system will cost the city taxpayers only just over $8,000 more than in 1953.

This was indicated in the 1954 public schools budget which was approved by the board at their regular meeting held Monday evening. Schools operation will cost the taxpayers $1,252,000 for this year compared with $252,000 for this year.

Total estimated costs for the operation of public schools next year, $1,252,000, with an other $32,572.20 for capital and debenture costs. Department of Education grants are estimated at $86,160 on operation and $10,077.64 on debenture costs.

It was pointed out that the expected departmental grants were more estimates as the basis for school grants are not announced by the department until March.

The school board prepared their 1954 budget at the request of city council which a year ago adopted the policy of getting the costs of the various city departments prepared before the end of the year. This will enable control of the tax rate with a corresponding saving in interest charges which the city normally has to pay on money borrowed for current expenditures.

BUDGET IS READY

The public schools budget will be placed before city council at his next meeting.

With the opening of classrooms now under construction and planned for construction, a total of 87 classes will be in operation in the city public schools next year. The additional classrooms will be at the Prince Charles school where an addition is now being built and at the Sir Winston Churchill school to be constructed on MacDonald Avenue.

Public schools enrolment during October was 6,236 with an average attendance at all schools of 86.43 per cent. This is expected to be a very satisfactory attendance record for next month.

Estimated public school costs for next year were broken down as follows: Instructional salaries, $826,500; supply staff, $3,000; Instructional supplies, $18,000; Administration, $9,250; Plant Operation, including custodians' salaries and fuel, $60,150; plant maintenance, including repairs, decorating, insurance etc., $22,000; Equipment, $1,500 and Health, including dental services, $3,200.

DISLIKES CREW-CUT

EASTBOURNE, England (CP)—R. W. Shaw, headmaster of Eastbourne College, has written a letter to parents in his annual report to discourage sartorial eccentricities as well as that coiffure known as the crew-cut."

HISTORIC RELICS

STOWMARKET, England (CP) An old whipping post recently found in a cellar was put on show at an exhibition of old-time articles in this Suffolk town. Others included a fire pump used in 1734, and a 4½-gallon ale jug that was known as a "gotch."

Final Plans for New School Being Prepared by Architects

Final plans for the proposed new Western public collegiate school on MacDonald Avenue are now being prepared by Watson and Wagland, architects, it was noted by members of the Belleville public school board following their November meeting held this week.

Revised sketch plans for the new building have been approved by the board and the architects will be requested to complete final plans in order that Mr. Clearing of the proposed site north of Victoria Ave. has gone forward to call for tenders for certain site being left to work in with the building programme.

Board chairman Fred Symons told the board that two owners of property in the area of the new school site had indicated they would like to sell their property to the school board. The matter was turned over to the special sites committee of members, Smith, Trill and Grandamore.

SEE MARK "SPECIAL"

Right hundred stacking chairs, to be distributed among the various schools, be purchased by the board from the Standard Tube Company of Woodstock, at a per unit price of $4.10. Two hundred desks were purchased from Orbell Sales in Belleville at $32.05. The tender of the Steel Company of Canada for Queen Alexandra school grounds was accepted at a price of $983.07.

The Queen Alexandra Home and School Association, of which Mrs. R. Tooth is president, will take on as a project the fitting of a basement room for audio-visual purposes. The school board will co-operate by fitting up the basement room and doing the decoration. The main contribution of the association will be the installation of a projection room and placing window blinds.

WORK LAID OVER

The board decided to lay over until 1954 the removal of a partition in the manual training shop at Queen Victoria School, also the re-lighting of Queen Alexandra school grounds.

General accounts of $48,328 for November were approved; also an amount of $6,862.55 on account for the Prince Charles School addition and $1,540.50 in connection with site for the Sir Winston Churchill School on MacDonald Ave. The latter included $330 to A. T. Ransom for making the survey and taking levels, $14.50 to the city of Belleville for digging test pits and $1,160 to Fitzgerald and Bartt for site clearing.

Social Evening Held by Clubs

Carrying out their recently adopted policy of holding more social evenings, members of the local Kinsmen and Kinette Clubs got together for a social evening and dance at the Knights of Columbus club rooms Monday night. The social evening and dance held following the regular Kinsmen dinner meeting at the Hotel Quinte, was attended by about 35 Kinsmen and their wives. The Bill Wareham trio provided dance music.

Little business was conducted at the club dinner meeting. The past year's financial statement was read by Ray Lennox, following which there was a general discussion on various club projects and their fund raising potential.

'Predicted Time' Auto Race Held By Repair Depot

This district's first "Predicted Time Auto Race", sponsored by the sports committee of 6 R.C.A.F. Repair Depot, was held on a 23 mile course with 56 entrants participating.

F/Sgt. M. J. Smith won first prize of $50 and F/Sgt. J. Buchan second prize of $25, while third prize, complete weather-proofing for a car, was won by Mr. D. Reavely.

Mrs. Montgomery won $10 for the best time by a lady driver while Mrs. D'Arcy Nolan won a special prize for finishing with the second best time.

Several consolation prizes donated by local merchants were won by the other finishers.

The "race", originally scheduled for the preceding Sunday but postponed because of snow, started at 1.00 p.m. with contestants starting at one minute intervals. The course would through the Murray Hills on secondary and tertiary roads, past check points at Campbellcroft and Glen Miller and back to the base.

The drivers were provided with a set of maps and a road map. The clues, if properly deciphered and observed, laid out the course. Drivers were then supposed to follow the course at an average speed of 20 miles an hour. The various check points noted the time of passing of each car. These times were later computed for each leg of the race with the winning driver being the one who maintained a speed as much less closest to 20 mph.

Of the 56 starters there were only 4 finishers. It took three men two days to compute the results.

Those responsible for the race were Wing Commander A. Chorneboryw, F/Sgt. William Turnbull, F/Sgt. H. Clewes and WO. I. G. B. Kennedy.

Report Coons And Blackbirds Do Much Damage

TORONTO (CP)—Most Ontario farmers want more rain or snow to moisten the ground for the winter. Wells in some areas have been dry for weeks and some land is too hard for good plowing.

Most fall plowing, however, has been completed, the Ontario department of agriculture said today in its weekly crop report.

Farmers in Waterloo county were shipping turnips at 35 cents a bushel. Potato prices were discouraging in many counties. In Hastings county much damage to corn from raccons and blackbirds was reported.

IN MEMORIAM

ANDERSON — In loving memory of Thomas Anderson, who passed away on November 18th, 1950.
We had so much of happiness
We had our cup of joy
And memory is our gift of God
To have and to hold.
—Sadly missed by Jessie and daughters Emma, Elva and Faye. M18

KEMP. — In loving memory of Jessie Kemp, who passed away a year ago, November 18th, 1952.
Sadness reigns in our home
Silent tears we shed alone
Thinking of you all the while
To be with us and then to part
Is the sorest trial we have had.
The years may wipe out many things
But not the memory of you
The memory of those happy days
Spent with you dear Mother.
—Sadly missed and mourned by her sons Fraser, Jack and Ivan. M18

KEMP. — In loving memory of our mother, Jessie, who passed away a year ago today.
We seem to see in the soft dim light
A face we loved the best.
We think of her when the sun's last ray
Sinks in the west.
We miss her now as the time goes by
We miss her no less as the time goes by
For absence can never close our memory
And the flame of our love is still glowing
Her heart is the truest in all the wide world
For her children best to recall.
For no one can ever take her place
She is still the dearest of all.
—Ever lovingly remembered by her daughter Ivan. M18

KEMP. — In loving memory of a dear mother, Jessie, who passed away one year ago today.
Inside our hearts our memory lingers
Deep in our thoughts you live.
There is not a day, dear mother,
That we do not think of you.
—Lovingly remembered by her daughter Harry. M18

Art of Public Speaking Outlined to Sales, Ad Club

A thoroughly interpretative address on the art of public speaking was delivered at a meeting of the Belleville Sales and Advertising Club, Tuesday evening in the Shrine Club. The speaker was W. J. McCulloch, formerc news editor of the Hamilton Spectator, secretary-manager of the Hamilton Chamber of Commerce and more recently, a director of the Hamilton Street Railway.

He said there is a greater demand today for easy, fluid, fluent speaking in sales work across the country and most salesmen fall, in this respect because even though they have a knowledge of their subject or product they lack confidence, when it comes to speaking.

Mr. McCulloch advised the group to think seriously about forming a public speaking course in their midst. "Speaking is a tough chore," he declared, "both for audience and speaker alike." By putting into effect such a course, the sales force of members they would be doing themselves a great service which would stand them in good stead throughout their business careers.

SPEAKING STREAMLINED

He noted that the art of public speaking has been streamlined and said a Canadian and an Italian were responsible for the changes. The speaker recalled that at one time, before the advent of radio and television, people would travel for miles to hear one man orate. "Now," he said, "since the Canadian, Alexander Graham Bell and the Italian, Marconi, invented the telephone and radio respectively, speaking has been streamlined to the extent we are almost captives in our own homes."

Mr. McCulloch described North America as having become one of the greatest talking nations and continents in history of the world.

GIVE SPEAKER BREAK

His advice to audiences was, "give the speaker a break." He emphasized the fact audiences are cruel groups and said the amount of good preparedness a speaker puts in his work is not repaid by the small returns from audiences.

For those who are burdened with the task of introducing the speaker Mr. McCulloch had a word of caution. He warned them not to be too flattering in their description of the man who was to speak. He suggested that in introductions, the introducer be brief, to the point and tactful.

Mr. McCulloch also stressed the importance of knowing the type of audience if a public address is planned. He suggested obtaining a list of the previous three speakers and their topics as an aid in learning a little of the audience to be addressed and in gaining an idea of what type of lecture the listeners might be interested in hearing.

LAUDS CHURCHILL

He also paid tribute to Winston Churchill whom he described as a shining example for all public speakers. The speaker referred to Mr. Churchill's voice impediment, which the prime minister was forced to overcome. He also recalled Mr. Churchill's first public address in the House of Commons and how England's first minister, "stuttered and spluttered," when forced to sit down half way through his talk on the floor because he could not finish.

In conclusion Mr. McCulloch commended, "Art, without the power of that man's voice, the job of finishing the war would have taken much longer to do and likely with less success."

He was introduced by Freeman Burrows and the expression of thanks was extended by S. E. Goodwin.

Farm Forum Notes

Three forums met to discuss the subject "Farmers, Ahoy!" last week. Hazzards met at Ken Broad's; Foxboro at Mrs. D. Longwell's, and Brookdale at Morley Sine's.

The three forums agreed that man and wife should be joint owners in the farming business, the wife helping with light farm work when needed, but the home and children should come first. Both should share the cruel and unusual drudgery of milking the business either directly or indirectly, and also in planning the expenditures. In the majority of cases the wife does the bookkeeping.

Farm wives should certainly keep informed on modern farm techniques and farm marketing. She will then understand better the workings of the farm and can discuss the prevailing situation more intelligently.

Girl Suffers Possible Fracture

Maureen King, age 7, of 87 Purdy St., suffered a possible fractured leg at noon today when struck by a school truck as she darted out in front of a vehicle on North Front St. The little girl was on her way home from school when at the south approach to the overhead bridge she darted out from the east curb into the path of the panel delivery operated by Edward J. Malcolm, R.R. 4, Belleville. Dr. W. J. Ross ordered X-rays taken to determine if the girl's leg was fractured.

Key Club Members to Re-Build Home Destroyed by Fire

The Key Club, a Kiwanis-sponsored group of teen-age boys, has undertaken the task of re-building a house for Lawrence Moore and his mother who lost their house and belongings in a fire at Consecon several weeks ago. The boys are being assisted in this venture by the Kiwanians.

At a meeting of the Kiwanis club in the Centre on Tuesday, Al Drysdale announced the directors had voted unanimously to assist the Key club in re-building the gutted home. He said that drawings had been completed, the excavation dug and footings poured. It is hoped the family will be able to occupy the home by the end of December.

Mr. Drysdale has estimated the cash cost of constructing the frame dwelling which is near the site of the burnt out home will be in their neighborhood of $2,500, $1,500 of which is already been raised.

Since the fire many organizations, clubs and neighbors have contributed generously toward the re-establishment of Mrs. Moore and her son. Lawrence Moore, who is a member of the Key Club, is also president of the students' council at B.C.I.V.S.

TRIBUTE PAID.

Frank Creegan, president of the Kiwanis club, paid tribute to the Key club members. He said, "Our hearts are warmed when we think of the courage of these teenaged boys who have not been daunted by the size of the task, but they are boys and school work must not suffer. We think they have shown their mettle and we are organizing the resources of the Kiwanis club to assist them."

The president also stated he hopes the people of Belleville will feel as the Kiwanis club does and offer assistance to the Key clubbers and their venture.

According to Mr. Creegan, assistance is required in the following departments: carts, Arnold Wolfendon, phone 3738 or 4930; skilled labor, Hugh Murray, phone 2444-W or 4496; carpentry, also carpentry equipment, Harold Casruthers, phone 3186 or 2185; electrical aid or equipment, Dut Purchard, phone 2882-W or 3430; plumbing and heating, Stuart Robb, phone 2223 or 3432.

Any further information may be received from Jack Wood, phones 3348-J or 806. Mr. Creegan said these men know exactly what is needed and can advise as to what is needed.

TWO NEW MEMBERS.

Also at the meeting on Tuesday two new members were inducted into the club. Bill Webb of Webb Motors, introduced by Augus Duffy and Hal Ford, a supervisor of the H.E.P.C., introduced by Charley Lusk, were installed by Cliff Berggar.

THE IMMIGRATION QUESTION

On no topic is there a wider divergence of opinion than on the desirability, or otherwise, of encouraging immigration. Some reasons why they are confused about the issue can be glimpsed in the text of Mr. Ferguson's remarks, as reported by The Canadian Press.

Mr. Ferguson, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, is quoted as saying: "We can demand all we like to have the same standard (of living) as in the United States." With our present population we just haven't the heads and hands to produce the same quantities of goods, and we haven't the mouths to consume what we make."

In other words; we are not producing enough and we are not consuming enough. We need more people in order to produce more and we also need more people in order to consume more.

It is possible to reconcile the two statements by saying that we need more people to produce goods which we now do not produce abundantly, but we also need more people to consume goods of which we have a surplus.

But, as reported, the speech was little help in clarifying this point.

Then, too, Mr. Ferguson is reported to have stated that he could not understand people who fear that immigration makes jobs scarcer for present Canadians.

"Can't they see that every new Canadian represents an increased demand for the goods they make?" he asked.

"And, since immigrants frequently bring with them wives and families, the increased demand for goods must more than counterbalance any increased competition for employment."

Now, if that latter sentence is to make sense at all, it means that the immigrant will create more demand than the immigrant can produce. And, if that is true, then how will the addition of this immigrant family to Canada's population help to increase our prosperity by making more goods available to those people who are already Canadians?

The fact is that nobody can say whether an increase in the country's population, through immigration, will make more, or less, goods immediately available to the rest of Canada's residents. The argument for immigration is simple. It is that a country with a large population possesses a large domestic market and that the size of this market will, in the long run, make it possible to take advantage of the economies inherent in mass production. Certain costs of operation of the country will remain fairly constant, whether our population is 15,000,000 or 30,000,000. Therefore a larger population will reduce the per capita cost of what we may term "national overhead."

If we want to enjoy the higher standard of living which prevails in the United States, then we must increase our population. Most people want a higher standard of living. Therefore, if they can once be convinced of the soundness of the immigration principle, the majority of Canadians are certain to support such a policy. There will be some, however, who will insist that this increased prosperity is being bought at a price. They will point to the filling up of our transportation, a reduction in our "living space." But to many this will just be another argument in favor of immigration. Those who are otherwise, who prefer to do without certain material advantages for the privilege of living in a country which gives them lots of elbow room, can only hope that more advocates of immigration prefer Mr. Ferguson—or that The Canadian Press reports of what they say read like the report of Mr. Ferguson's speech.

A DEADLY SLOW FAST

Willy Schmitz, described as a professional hunger artist, recently claimed to have survived 30 days and five hours on mineral water and cigarets, outlasting by four hours the previous world record of an Indian fakir whom he will next meet during his forthcoming fast. Willy Schmitz dropped from 158 to 92 pounds.

The inability due could turn out to be an artistic fake next spring. In July and August men will fast go to waste, although a fast is the slowest way to duel that has probably yet been devised. Nonetheless we venture to say that the thousand cheering spectators will be called upon, for a price, to watch these two men gradually wither away. And they will deserve what they see, a thin man getting thinner on mineral water and a motionless fakir. Oh hum.

The current Communist expose in the United States is colorful to say the least. Protagonists are pummelling each other black and blue in the "White" cage in which it is known White was a Red.

OLD PICTURES

We cherish best throughout the years
The faces of fleeting smiles and in ancient dress we smile upon.
The love that we have known and lost,
The joys we've had at little cost,
The frequent triumphs over dead,
These all we keep to talk about.

The uncles and the aunts, long gone,
Now weather worn and feeble could be.
Appears just as it was when we Thought none more beautiful we view
Our neighbors then—the first we knew.

Whenever we are moved to look
Upon the family's picture book
We find ourselves a bridal pair,
The grownup son's a baby there;
The first small home we called our own,
Appears just as it was when young as once they were.

Ten Times Seaway

(Brantford Expositor)

The cost of the Georgian bomb project now under way in South Carolina is estimated at a billion and a quarter dollars, reports the National Geographic Society. That is more than double the cost of the Panama Canal, and more than 10 times the amount the U.S. would have to contribute to become a partner in the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Amusing Episodes

(Kitchener-Waterloo Record)

Man watches with interest the vigor, care and the earnestness with which a woman "makes up" her face after opening her hand bag. It is a sight that would fill the Victorian grandmother with horror.

But does man realize with what malevolent gaze a woman watches a man as he screws up his face while he shaves?

These are two of the funniest operations in any home.

Toughest Thing That Grows

(By Norman and Madelaine Carlisle, in Condensed from Coronet)

When the red disc of Mars came closest to our earth a few years ago, astronomers got a picture of frightful desolation. Here was an almost airless world, with no oceans, no rivers, no lakes. Nineteenth century astronomers discovered that in the daytime, its temperature at the equator might rise to a little above freezing, and at night drop to perhaps 100 below.

Yet, over a great part of the dry sky brokers had seen its polar ice caps alternately shrink and grow. Parts of the ruddy planet also changed color. Could this color change be caused by the growth of some incredible Martian plant?

Strangely, the scientists needed no super-Martian plant to visualize such a botanical monstrosity. For that particular kind of plant which could survive on Mars actually grows right here on our own planet.

This wonder of nature is called the lichen. Astronomers aren't. You probably think it is moss when you see it growing on a rock, a tree, or a barn roof, or on the side of a rock, a tree, on a bare patch of earth, or even on the side of a house.

As the most widespread plant on our earth, the lichen belongs to the dark green, flourishing with equal ease in the jungles of South America, the frozen tundras and desolate mountain tops of the Rockies, the fringes of our northern Arctic. Its more than 10,000 different species defy successfully all attempts to classify it, no matter how destructive to other plants.

For centuries, however, it was proved otherwise, the lichen was thought to spring from the rock which it fed, so too hard for the lichen. It will cling to solid concrete as well as to granite or stone. It flourishes on granite—in fact, almost any rock. Its airborne seeds happen to fall.

When conditions aren't favorable even for its growth, the lichen has an astonishing capability that keeps it alive indefinitely. It just shrivels up and waits.

Even if the lichen lacked any other spectacular claims to attention, its method of construction would make botanists hail it as the world's most unusual plant.

For the lichen is actually two plants, a fungus and an alga, living together in such close harmony each other. Somehow in the dim, unclear world of plant life, the fungus took the alga inside of it. Not, as you might at first suppose, to do. The fungus grips the surface of the rock, tree or earth, secretes acids and enzymes that enable it to draw food from an apparently sterile material. The alga can't do that, but it can transform air and water, using energy from the sun, into carbohydrates, which both plants need for survival.

Scientists, intrigued by the possibilities of a plant that can exist in barren lands, are giving the lichen careful attention. There are hints that it may become a versatile source of medicine, perfumes and food.

It already turns up in a number of Scandinavian foods. One, called oak-moss, is a key ingredient in Italian cookery, for it preserves and quickly loses its scent. Another is the plant that has been used for color England's famous Harris tweeds.

Meanwhile, medical researchers are getting a thrill from some of the ancient beliefs about the curative powers of lichens. Iceland moss (lichens may have a real basis in fact. Dr. Pio del Rio Hortega, Jungwort, a common lichen, did not help Spain's Generalissimo, but Dr. Florencio Bustinza of the University of Madrid, reports that ones he has tested have revealed that a solution of one part of it in 1,000 parts of water "inhibits the growth of tuberculosis bacteria in the laboratory."

Most intriguing of all is the possibility that the lichen might help to solve greatly the world's food supply.

Piglets Come In Big Bunches

(Windsor Daily Star)

Pigs are different in more ways than one, from most animals on the farm. They come in bunches, rather than singly or doubly. The Indiana sow which gave birth to a litter of 23 certainly was exceptional, however; the average litter probably is less than half that number.

Occasionally on an Ontario farm there will be twin calves. Frequently there will be twin lambs, sometimes four. But the good brood sow will produce a litter as regularly as the hen will set, furthermore, she will do it twice a year.

A sow may have excellent breeding, and represent the finest known type of hog, but she won't produce sizeable broods unless she has been properly fed. One hog raiser who feeds only a half-dozen or so at a litter is living on dreams, and he isn't any worth her feed.

And it isn't sufficient for sow to produce 10 or 12 piglets semi-annual. She must be equipped with sufficient facilities to nourish each and all of her brood until they are ready to shift for themselves. The sow that can produce a dozen little ones, but feed only eight or nine of them, leaves much to be desired.

She also must be a good mother, careful not to trample or crush any of the wee ones. Some sows either are awkward or careless, like bacon.

Shakespeare Vs. Jurists

(Ottawa Journal)

Shakespeare said that if all the year were holidays, to play would be as tedious as to work. Now comes the United States Supreme Court to rule that professional baseball is still only a sport and not subject to anti-trust laws.

None will deny that Shakespeare was right. The decision that leave the Supreme Court? Why, it will make the day of holiday for the baseball professional, that harnessed, driven man who is driven to exhibit to order what the manager told him and how the status of a player and the manager's strategy was no good.

A serious player, surely, is practising a profession as earnestly as a lawyer. Ontario Supreme Judges when they appeared in the Court of Appeal, felt the judge in the security of the bench, say the telling baseball player to "keep your eye himself at a sport. To have a court rule that black is white does not mean that white that change in color has occurred.

unintentionally causing fatalities among the offspring.

The ideal is one which requires only a single litter a year, but when the sow has produced a dozen healthy, happy man or woman. People comment that it isn't easy to rear and forget. But it is. It is easy as falling off a log once you decide to do so. It's like carrying out any other task that you've made up your mind to do. Once you've decided to do so, it

Cornerstone for Service Centre For CNIB Laid at Kingston

The cornerstone of the Quinte-St. Lawrence service centre for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, was officially laid Monday afternoon in Kingston by Hon. W. A. Goodfellow, Ont. Minister of Public Welfare, for Ontario.

The yellow brick building, which has been erected on Union Street West, is a united project of six counties, Frontenac, Prince Edward, Hastings, Leeds and Grenville.

The City of Belleville gave a grant of $6,000 for its construction while a public canvass raised an additional $15,000, over Belleville residents and merchants in the County of Hastings gave a grant of $7,500. Total amount to be raised by the six counties was $200,000 of the estimated cost of $253,000.

Representatives of the CNIB committees from the six counties were present for the laying of the cornerstone. The new building will have facilities for caring for 430 blind persons, as well as providing a centre in which the blind will be able to gather to enjoy the educational and recreational facilities the Institute has planned for the building.

Mr. Goodfellow praised the foresight and hard work of the people responsible for the erection of the building.

In praising the program for the blind, Mr. Goodfellow said, "It is most important to get people to help themselves and not to depend on the state for support."

He said that he was pleased that the provincial government had been able to assist the project, adding that the government recognized the contribution that such organizations as the CNIB to disabled persons.

CO-OPERATION VITAL

"It is necessary," said Mr. Goodfellow, "that the able-bodied assist the disabled. This co-operation is vital if we are to attain a perfect social democracy."

W. M. Nickle, Q.C., M.L.A., who introduced the speakers, welcomed the blind, who would use the building, and lauded the work of Col. A. Baker, managing director of the CNIB, and Lt.-Col. S. M. Polson, chairman of the Kingston-Frontenac advisory board of the Institute.

Col. Baker, who was recently elected president of the World Council for the Blind, thanked all those who had been responsible for making "this dream a reality", and hoped that the interest of those people in the building would continue.

The trowel with which the cornerstone was laid was presented to Mr. Goodfellow by T. A. Andre, whose construction firm built the centre.

Enclosed in the stone were: a list of members of the local advisory committee, a copy of the minutes of the meeting at which it was decided to erect the building, a brief history of the work of the CNIB in this area, a copy of the program for the cornerstone laying ceremony, fresh minted coins of the realm, names of the architects, contractor, building superintendent, board chairman and campaign chairmen of the six counties in the Quinte-St. Lawrence area, messages in Braille from the field secretary of the district.

Rev. A. M. Laverty, chaplain of Queen's University, read the invocation and pronounced the blessing.

Weddings

COULSON—BAILEY

College Hill United Church, Belleville, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, November 7, when Marjorie Ruth Bailey became the bride of Grant Robert Coulson. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Bailey, Belleville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Coulson of Thomasburg. The Reverend W. R. Merrick officiated.

The traditional wedding music was played by Miss Sylvia Mobray, friend of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a ballerina-length gown of white slipper satin, nylon net and Chantilly lace, featuring a chantilly lace bolero with long sleeves, and there of lace and set on the skirt. She wore a fingertip length veil of scalloped tulle illusion held by a small cap, and carried a cascade bouquet of red roses.

Miss Helen Love, of Belleville, was bridesmaid, attractively attired in mauve nylon net and lace over taffeta, with matching mitts. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and carnations, and wore a matching headdress.

Mr. Ray Coulson, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman, and Mr. Philip Bailey and Mr. Ralph Nelson were ushers.

Following the wedding, a reception was held in the church parlor. The bride's mother received, wearing Alice blue crepe with navy accessories and corsage of red and white carnations. The bridegroom's mother assisted, wearing a mauve suit with grey accessories and a similar corsage.

The bride's table was appropriately appointed with white damask, centred by a three-tier wedding cake topped by miniature wedding bells. Bouquets of white, yellow and mauve chrysanthemums added a lovely accent.

The toast to the bride was proposed by the student minister, Mr. Bruce Besley, to which the bridegroom responded.

For the wedding trip to Montreal, and points east, the bride chose a powder blue wool dress with matching feather hat, a grey coat, and black accessories, and wore a corsage of red roses.

The tea tables, centred and flowed with Yuletide decorations of red poinsettias, and sprays of glinting pine, while miniature Christmas trees, and dangling Santa Clauses smiled from various booths.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A "MARRIED WOMAN" HAS STOLEN HER BOY FRIEND

At first glance, the question written in big capitals in the 16 year-old girl's letter seemed plain silly, of course. This is how it read:

"HOW CAN YOU COPE WITH A MARRIED WOMAN?"

For an 18-year-old to consider a married woman a serious rival in regard to masculine attention would not be anything to take seriously, one would think. But this particular girl, however, the facts justify the query, for the married woman about whom the letter is written is also a girl of 18, and, moreover, is expecting a baby.

"My problem concerns myself, my former boy friend and my best friend," the letter begins, and goes on:

"It seems that my boy friend is infatuated with me and wants me to be married and whose husband is in Korea. The trouble started when my best friend and this buddies came home from Korea. I went out with them and then skipped out. Everyone in my crowd—and I'm the only girl in his buddies and their girls—is single, but this married girl formed in all dates and activities without even being invited and, of course, we're not married one there. Just to be nice, and because his wife and husband had just gone away and she was lonely, we didn't make any objections to her going with us.

"Now she has taken an apartment with another married woman and invites all the single boys in our crowd, including my boy friend, to come up there. She calls them, and the crowd is at my house and begs them to come away from me and they all go. She even has them stay all night. My friend is a fine fellow, but I am afraid this other girl has said something to him about me because he never was much to say any more and, when he does come to the house, he soon leaves.

"I just can't understand it and I don't know how to cope with it."

PLAN SOME ACTIVITY

If I were one of this crowd of girls who are being neglected by their boy friends in favor of an unscrupulous young wife, I hope I'd be too smart to sit around moping. Instead, I hope I'd try to sell the other girls on the idea of cooking up some good lively activity program with some of the other boys who have better sense than to let themselves be roped in by this kind of girl. Why should any bunch of girls make themselves look as though they were entirely dependent on these few foolish boys? If the boys have found other friends, why not let them see that the girls can find other interests, too, and can get along without the boys very well?

So the girls are brooding because their crowd has been split up and they're lonely. Of course they're lonely, but they don't have to stay that way. This particular group lives in a big city where there are ample opportunities to make many new friends. Must they go mooning around by themselves, friendless, because they've been deserted by these particular companions? They don't have to unless that's what they want.

Personally, I'd prefer to brace up and show a little spirit by forming a new crowd, and have such good times that those former companions wouldn't be missed long. When the boys get tired of playing at being sophisticated beyond their years, as they certainly will in time, and girls are the kind of boys nice girls shouldn't be going with anyhow, I wouldn't be in too much of a hurry to welcome them back, either.

One thing I certainly would not do would be to try and talk the boys out of associating with their new interest, nor to make protests to the girl herself. I'm quite sure that to argue with either party to that unfortunate alliance would be just a waste of time. Instead, I'd put all my imagination and energy and thoughts on developing a different set of friends, who were more reliable.

Come on now, girls; let's see what you can do.

Special-Purpose Menu

By Mary Moore

OVEN DINNER

Baked Fish Fillets
Spicy-Curry Broiled Tomatoes
Baked Squash
November Cole Slaw
Apple Pie Cheese Coffee

When I make the mistake of asking my family in a loud voice what they would like for dinner from one direction I hear: "Roast Chicken" from another "Roast Beef and Yorkshire Pudding."

Now how is a dietician going to very her menus with two such rank minds like that? Keep quiet, cheery how, and slip off and do the marketing and buy something different.

When I asked the fishman for the very freshest fish he had on hand he loftily said "Madam all our fish is fresh." I tried another tack: What did he have that he would fillet for me? "I can fillet anything."

This boastful master of the indefinite had me floundering so I asked him to fillet a flounder. No flounder.

He had whitefish at 50 cents; pickerel at 60 cents and white fillets (fresh cod) at 40 cents. I bought the pike — a 2-lb. creature who seemed to be staring at me suspiciously. It was lovely and fresh and I had plenty for three.

BAKED FISH FILLETS

Oil a baking dish. Your large glass pie plate is good for a small amount. Place fish fillets, skin side down on dish. Sprinkle well with salt. Strew all over with finely sifted breadcrumbs. This must make a complete coating. Now drizzle or sprinkle over the crumbs oil or melted fat or butter —about 2 tablespoons. Place in very hot oven of 500 deg. Fahr. Do not add water. Bake quickly until well-browned, allowing about ten minutes per inch thickness of fish. For a large thick fish it should be reduced during the last few minutes.

If you like lots of flavor it is a good idea to spread the fish with 1 tablespoon grated onion before you sprinkle it with crumbs.

SPICY-CURRY BROILED TOMATOES

These are ideal with fish, but wonderful to look at on a steak platter and make a good stock accompaniment too.

Mix together 4 ounces white cream cheese, 2 ounces blue cheese, 1 tablespoon each chopped parsley, 1-4 teaspoon each grated onion and Worcestershire sauce, salt, and 7-8 teaspoon monosodium glutamate (Accent). Mix this until it is smooth. Cut large peeled tomatoes in halves crosswise. Spread cut sides liberally with the cheese mix. Sprinkle with fine dry breadcrumbs and paprika. Broil or bake slowly until crumbs are brown and tomatoes piping hot.

Pepper squashes may be baked whole, or cut in halves, seed section scooped out, and baked cut side down on buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, nutmeg and dot generously with butter.

NOVEMBER COLE SLAW

Shred Savoy cabbage as fine as possible with long very sharp knife. Add 2 cups of it add 1-3 of a green pepper finely shredded, 1-2 cup finely chopped parsley, and 1-2 cup finely cut celery. Moisten with mayonnaise or French dressing. Remember to conserve salad vitamins it should be cut the last thing before serving and dressing should be added at once.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

CONCERNING CHRISTMAS CARDS AND MOURNING

There are two questions concerning the sending of Christmas cards that I am particularly gentle consideration. Both questions have to do with being in mourning, and both questions are being asked by many readers in these days before Christmas.

1. Is it proper to send Christmas cards to people in mourning?

Yes, it is proper. If we choose the cards we send with tender understanding of their special mission. With this kindly gesture we can express our loving kindness, our warm-hearted friendliness and understanding. We may send cards of religious inspiration, a lovely reproduction of a Madonna or other religious masterpiece, a beautifully traditional message of the Christmas story. Or we may choose a card with a conservative design on the cover, and on an inside blank page write a message of comfort: "Dear Beatrice, I do so very much want you to know that I am thinking of you these days with loving devotion and with tender understanding."

Note 1: Instead of sending a card, we may, with exquisite taste, write our message of devotion and understanding on plain white paper. The few loving and sincere words you write may bring just the comfort needed at Christmas.

Note 2: Don't lazily, thoughtlessly, send one of the printed cards "With sympathy to you at Christmas time." Frightly impersonal, these cards. . . the printer's words, not yours. Better that you write on a plain white card or note-paper, "I am thinking of you with devotion and understanding."

2. Is it proper for people in mourning to send Christmas cards?

Yes, . . but naturally it does, and of course should, depend entirely on their feelings and preference. Naturally too, relatives and friends of those in mourning will not expect them to send Christmas cards. They will want them to send cards if the effort will add strain and burden. On the other hand, if they do decide to send cards to their relatives and intimate friends, these honored will be deeply touched and inspired by this spiritual bravery. . . the gallantry of the heart" that can impel one to forget one's own unhappiness in wishing happiness to others.

Note 1: The person in mourning may choose to write a message of greeting either on plain white note paper or on the inside blank pages of cards with a religious picture on the cover. Perhaps to write: "Greetings from my heart to your heart. . . every good wish for your Christmas and New Year." Or simply "Greetings to you, dear Katherine."

Note 2: Of course a person in mourning does not send Christmas cards to cause friends, or to mere acquaintances.

TELEPHONE REPLY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have just moved into the apartment over the store. When he is out, I stay in the office to answer the telephone. Please tell me what I should answer when the person calling asks to whom he is speaking—should I say "This is Mrs. Martin" or "This is Martha Martin"—Mrs.

You should answer "This is Mrs. Martin."

Hair Stylist Says 'Watch Eyebrows'

REGINA (CP)—Hair stylist Peter Mayr has this advice for women: "Watch those eyebrows."

Mayr, who arrived recently from Toronto, says many a carefully-groomed effect is ruined by lack of attention to the most important focal point of a girl's face—her eyebrows.

All it needs is a flick of the artist with an eyebrow pencil, to highlight the eyes and transform mediocrity to personality.

Mayr, an expert in make-up who has worked for professional and amateur fashion shows, says "personality" is the most important of all when it comes to style.

Party Chiefs Congratulate Women M.P.'s

OTTAWA (CP)—The leaders of Canada's four main political parties Monday congratulated the four women elected to the Commons last summer and said there should be more of them.

Prime Minister St. Laurent said "It has given us great satisfaction to find that the people of Canada have chosen to send to this Parliament four representatives of the fair sex." He said they would undoubtedly help the government to perform its main role in domestic affairs—the promotion and maintenance of a healthy atmosphere for the development of happy families.

The four women members are Mrs. Ann Shipley (L — Tiwskaming); Miss Sybil Bennett (PC—Halton); Mrs. Ellen Fairclough (PC—Hamilton West), and Miss Margaret Aitken (PC—York Humber).

Opposition Leader Drew said the four women all had previous records of distinguished public service. He said he hopes that more women will be elected to Parliament.

Incurable Antiques Fever Strikes Noted Specialist

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Mary Macfadyen Netter, specialist in women's diseases, has retired from the practice of medicine because she's in an advanced stage of an illness for which no cure has ever been found: antiques fever.

Dr. Netter has the usual symptoms—a giddy, light - headedness when in proximity to anything made in 1833 or earlier, absolute disregard of money when confronted with an item of interesting vintage, shape or condition or disrepair and complete inability to talk, think or concentrate on anything except antiques. She also has a unique symptom: a passion for beat-up French telephones.

The patient is married to a doctor, has five children ranging from college age to Her Rogers Jane and her present occupation is owner of an antiques shop, "the Gold Dolphin," on New York's Third avenue.

Prior to the second world war, Dr. Netter was practising medicine and raising a family. Then, promising medical career ended the day she and her husband, Dr. Frank Netter, moved from a seven-room apartment into an 18-room town house.

"Until then," recalls Mrs. Netter, "I didn't know anything about furniture. Someone told me the house was French. The apartment had been furnished in early Ignorant, a combination of clutter and English. I put it all in the cellar and started to haunt antique shops."

STARTS ANTIQUE BUSINESS

By the time the 15-room house was suitably furnished Mrs. Netter knew an armful from a wing-back and was disregarding furniture silhouettes as skilfully as she used a stethescope. Then, scarcely five years ago, the Netters purchased a 32-room home in Oyster Bay.

Today antiques cram several floors of the Gold Dolphin building. Mrs. Netter has a staff of eight, a list of customers which sounds like a register of show business and society, and a raft of old-fashioned French telephones.

The vogue in French phones, amazing to anyone who has ever been forced to cope with the French telephone system, also started accidentally.

In May, Mrs. Netter went on her first European buying spree with French phones high on her shopping list—to supply the demand. She brought back a large collection, from early 20th century pieces to more modern ones—none with dials.

"The French," she reports, "think I am crazy. No one saves French telephones in France." The French phones are selling and renting like crazy, which puzzles Mrs. Netter because they are really good only for incoming calls.

Women's Institute

MOUNTAIN VIEW W.I.

MOUNTAIN VIEW—The November meeting of Mountain View Women's Institute was held at the home of Miss Lillian Sprague with 23 members present. The president, Mrs. Clark Sprung, presided.

Plans were made for the community banquet to be held on November 20 in Mountain View Church parlors.

Mrs. Don Jones and Mrs. Clifford Barber who were delegates to the convention both gave splendid reports of this event.

Mrs. Allan Wallbridge gave interesting "Current Events."

"Citizenship and Education" was the topic for this meeting and was under the convenorship of Mrs. Eddy Hall. Owing to the illness of Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Sprung and Mrs. Anderson read the section papers which Mrs. Hall had prepared.

Mrs. Cretney concluded her travelogue on her trip to British Columbia.

The hostess served delectable refreshments and a social time was enjoyed by all.

The December meeting will be held on December 2 at the home of Mrs. Reg. Barber.

Says Agnes Macphail Not Properly Treated

OTTAWA (CP)—M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, said Monday that Agnes Macphail, former CCF member of Parliament had not been properly treated by her country.

Miss Macphail was the first woman elected to the House of Commons. She represented the ridings of Grey South East and Grey-Bruce for some 20 years.

Mr. Coldwell said in the Commons that Miss Macphail served the people of Canada well and "has deserved better at the hands of Canada than she has received."

Miss Macphail, he said, will long be remembered as one of the great exponents of penitentiary reform. The reform that had been implemented during the last few years were recommended by Miss Macphail during the time she sat in the Commons.

said he is happy to see more women members in the House. He added that he wished some members of his party were from the fair sex. Solon Low, leader of the Social Credit group, said he is certain the four women will make a valuable contribution to Commons debates.

E. B. Jolliffe, retiring Ontario CCF leader, said in a telephone interview that Miss Macphail, member of her long service in Parliament and later in the Ontario legislature, forfeited any claim to the superannuation pension to which she would have been entitled if she had followed her original career of school teaching. She was a member of Parliament from 1921 to 1940 and sat in the Ontario legislature as CCF member for York East from 1943 to 1945 and from 1948 to 1951. Recently she has been in indifferent health but attended the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto last week.

Mr. Jolliffe said he hopes the pension plan for members of Parliament soon will be amended to include such persons as Miss Macphail who served as members under than the required 17 sessions but who are not now members.

Polio Outbreak At Edmonton Is Now at Peak

EDMONTON (CP)—Health authorities kept close watch today on a fresh polio outbreak that has shattered records set by last year's major epidemic.

Officials said they believe the outbreak, which brought Edmonton a total of 231 cases, 136 more than last year, has reached its peak. The disease has claimed 10 lives in the city, compared with seven during 1953.

The new outbreak became noticeable two weeks ago, long after the seasonal summer decline of polio was reported. The provincial total now stands at 1,164 cases, against 774 for 1952. Alberta's death rate is at a high of 80, two more than last year.

Dr. G. M. Little, Edmonton medical health officer, said Monday the trend of infection indicates the peak has been reached. More adults than children are catching the disease, which is "usual at the tail-end of an epidemic," he said.

The fresh outbreak put a strain on city hospitals. There is still an urgent need for nurses and trained physiotherapists.

IRON LUNGS

Hospitals, caught without enough iron lungs, had the RCAF fly in eight from Winnipeg and Calgary and 12 from Regina.

Health authorities said they believe a new virus, stronger than the one which caused last year's epidemic, is responsible for the unseasonably high rate. Dr. Little said cases this year are more severe than those of 1952.

Dr. A. Somerville, deputy provincial minister of health, said it was unusual to see two epidemics in consecutive years but he said a polio outbreak in winter is not unusual in northern climates. He pointed out that the epidemic which hit Kainnae at Chesterfield Inlet in the Arctic a few years ago started in January.

Used 27 Boxes of Toothpicks To Build Tower in 300 Hours

It took approximately 27 boxes of toothpicks to build the seven-foot three inch tower and 300 hours of the builder's time to complete the tooth-pick constructed tower in the window of Rolof's Music Centre on Victoria Avenue.

The tower, which was built by the proprietor, Carl Rolof, in his spare time, includes almost enough tooth-picks for each member of the city's population. The exact number must remain a secret because Mr. Rolof plans to hold a contest to determine the actual amount that went into the tower's construction.

The builder said the finished article is not intended to resemble any actual construction. Its design is his own and was never planned on paper. This is the fifth piece of work that he has completed since he took up building tooth pick models. Prior to building the tower, Mr. Rolof had already constructed two model bridges, one other smaller tower and a ferris wheel.

At its base, the tower is three feet square and the base alone is strong enough to support a 15-pound record player. During construction Mr. Rolof used 41 tubes of glue plus the 27 boxes of toothpicks. He recalled the cost of construction was slightly more than $3.

The retailer became interested in this hobby when he was in hospital. Since then he has spent much spare time constructing these models. This latest of projects, because of its size, had to be built in two sections, the top tower and the base.

French Fortress, Munition-Filled, Swept by Flames

STRASBOURG, France (Reuters)—A century-old stone fortress slowly pounded itself to a smoking ruin today as fire which broke out Tuesday in 300 tons of ammunition stored there by the French army continued with periodic blasts and new belches of smoke and flame.

Rescue squads stood helpless half amile away, not knowing how much of the explosives were left still to go off.

Inside the tumbled walls of old Fort Foch were six men trapped by the initial blast. Hope of finding them alive has been almost abandoned, but their families hope they may have escaped the initial explosion and found shelter in an underground dungeon.

Disaster Relief By Government Is $137,462

OTTAWA (CP) — Citizenship Minister Harris announced Tuesday that the government will contribute $137,462 toward disaster relief in western Ontario counties struck by tornadoes last May.

The federal grant brings to $642,940 the amount of money earmarked for relief.

The money will be distributed to the counties of Lambton, Middlesex, Perth and Huron and will cover losses to farm buildings and dwellings.

Mr. Harris said the federal government was matching a provincial grant of $137,462.

His statement:

"The government has been giving consideration to the question of assisting those who suffered loss by reason of the tornadoes, which caused considerable damage in western Ontario May 21 and May 24, 1953.

"The counties of Lambton, Middlesex, Oxford, Perth and Huron set up county relief committees to which donations were made by individuals and municipal corporations.

"The provincial government has assured a grant being one-half the amount which came into the funds of the county relief committees, from these two sources. Donations totalled $210,425 and the municipal grants $64,500 which means that the provincial grant would amount to $137,462. The Canadian Disaster Relief Fund announced last week that it would contribute $100,000 to the relief funds and this is to announce that this government will contribute the sum of $137,462 for the benefit of those who suffered loss to dwellings and farm buildings, being a like amount to that contributed by the Provinces of Ontario.

"Details of the method of payment will be worked out with the Canadian Disaster Relief Fund and the county committees."

Ex-Paratrooper Will Hang For Noon Street Slaying Of His Former Girl Friend

STRATFORD (CP) — Reuben Henry Norman, 26, insisting that he felt no sense of guilt, was sentenced Tuesday night to be hanged Feb. 16 for murder in the noon-hour shooting on downtown Stratford street last Feb. 7 of his former girl friend, Jean Marie Batchelt, 19.

An Ontario Supreme court jury deliberated two hours and 45 minutes before returning its verdict.

Evidence was that the shooting came at a climax to a quarrel during which the paratrooper asked the girl why she had decided to give him up and her reply was "because I want to." Police said he fired at least six small-calibre revolver bullets into her body at close range and then ran for the police station, less than block away.

Norman was found mentally unfit to stand last May and appointed a mental hospital at Penetanguishene. Last week a jury decided he was sane when he shot Miss Batchelt and the hearing started Nov. 11.

ADDRESS

"It is true I cannot deny the event took place by my hand," Norman said during a 20-minute speech after Mr. Justice Wishart Spence asked him if he had anything to say. "I do not know what in my own heart made me do it. I have no sense of guilt.

"I intend to make an appeal. I was mentally sick. I am now cured, God knows. People think I'm a nut because I have been converted by the grace of God. Wherever I go from here will be God's will. I have been convicted because of my conversion. . . . I can't understand how a conviction of guilty is placed on me. I know there's a mistake has been made."

CONFERENCES

Norman said the psychiatrists who testified during the trial were chiefly concerned with his reported sudden turn to the Bible and Scriptures. The psychiatrists said Norman referred to Biblical passages instead of answering questions.

Mr. Justice Spencer said in his address to the jury that it would bring in a verdict of guilty of murder, not guilty because of insanity, and, later, at the request of defence counsel, guilty of manslaughter only if it were satisfied there was provocation. The defence had contended there was some provocation in the girl's actions and in her refusal to give a satisfactory reason for breaking off the relationship.

Commons Briefs

OTTAWA (CP)—Rev. Dan Mc-Ivor (L—Fort William) urged the government Tuesday to use $100,000,000 of the defence appropriation to buy wheat for underdeveloped countries. This would be one way to use some of Canada's surplus wheat to feed hungry peoples, he said in the Commons.

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Garson indicated Tuesday the government has decided to appoint a commission to study capital punishment. He said announcement of appointment of a royal commission would be postponed until the new Criminal Code comes up for second reading in the House.

OTTAWA (CP)—Trade Minister Howe said in the Commons western grain growers will receive an estimated $1,150,000 in the 1953 calendar year for wheat, oats and barley. It was the "highest income ever enjoyed by them."

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent said Tuesday in the Commons that the government has received no "non-confidential information" on the coming Bermuda conference among Prime Minister Churchill, U.S. President Eisenhower and Premier Laniel of France.

"There are, of course, dispatches which are marked secret," Mr. St. Laurent said. These would be kept secret until permission was given to issue them.

OTTAWA (CP) — Veterans Minister Lapointe said Tuesday the government has no intention of placing limitations on casual earnings by the 46,000 recipients of war veterans' allowances. Recipients are allowed to claim the $Xmonth exemptions from permissible income.

He said a clearer definition of casual earnings in construction has been sent to district officers of the veterans department. The matter was being looked into and he would report on it later to the House.

Follwell Urges House Opening Be Televised

OTTAWA (CP) — Frank S. Follwell (Liberal—Hamilton Thursday urged in the Commons that the opening of Parliament be broadcast and televised.

He said the CBCs TV program on President Eisenhower's speech to the Commons and Senate last Saturday was an "outstanding job."

He also said he is "gratified" to learn that members of the cabinet have told a delegation from the textile industry that Canada's anti-dumping law against cheap foreign imports will be strengthened.

Mr. Follwell also urged that pensions of $40 a month be granted to blind persons between 21 and 65 without a means test. He said he supports the Canadian National Institute for the Blind's request for this action.

Shore Property Owners Assail St. Lawrence Plan

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (AP) — A spokesman for Lake Ontario waterfront owners Tuesday charged that the proposed St. Lawrence power project is responsible for maintaining low water levels only in Montreal harbor.

Montreal is downstream from the power project.

The charge was made at a public hearing on the power project's water flow is designed to make Lake Ontario a reservoir to guarantee adequate water for the winter power grind, and to keep the river from getting too high in ports downstream.

The present plan, known as method 5, specifies that the development must maintain without impairment the low water levels of Montreal harbor.

LAKE LEVELS DAMAGING

The property owners, organized as the Lake Ontario Level Development and Beach Protection Association, contended that the power plan as it now stands approved by the IJC would boost Lake Ontario to damaging levels in winter and spring.

The association claims there has been "millions of dollars of damage" to lakefront properties in both these seasons in the last few years.

Gail A. Hathaway, adviser to the chief of the Army Corps of Engineers, declared that no maximum lake level has been recommended by the IJC. He said "level of the lake can be so regulated as to benefit shore property," and that maximums will be lower than in the past.

Representative Kenneth B. Keating (Rep, N. Y.) drew a standing ovation when he declared, "I intend to oppose this plan in every way I can until there is adequate protection for people who put their savings into lake shore properties."

Pleading guilty besides the rubber association were: Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. of Canada Ltd.; Dominion Rubber Co. Ltd.; Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. of Canada Ltd.; B. F. Goodrich Co. of Canada Ltd.; Dunlop Tire and Rubber Co. Ltd.; Goodyear Tire Co. of Canada Ltd.; General Tire and Rubber Co. of Canada Ltd., and Gutta Percha Rubber Ltd.

Truman Labels Brownell Charge as 'McCarthyism'

Ex-President Truman — Senator McCarthy — Attorney-General Brownell

Accusing Attorney - General Brownell of "lying to the American people," ex-President Harry Truman has given his version of the Harry Dexter White affair which grew out of a U.S. Senate subcommittee investigation into "un-American activities. Brownell said that White, who died in 1948, was known as a Communist spy by the people (among them Mr. Truman), who hired him to fill high government post. Mr. Truman accused the attorney-general of indulging in "McCarthyism," referring to Sen. Joseph McCarthy. He described McCarthyism as a "corruption of truth" and the "sum of unfounded accusation in the name of Americanism." — Central Press Canadian Photos.

Horsepower Race By Auto-Makers Is Criticized

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — D. C. Gaskin, president of Studebaker Corporation of Canada Limited, Tuesday night criticized rival automobile manufacturers for what he called a "horsepower rat race."

Addressing Peterborough Sales and Advertising Club, he said cars now being produced with 200 horsepower or more still will have that power 10 years from now when their steering, brakes, tires and other means of controlling them have become obsolete. He said they will probably fall into the hands of youthful buyers who may not use their head proper.

"It's about time the automobile industry took a good look at itself," he said. "Thank God our company is not in this horsepower rat race."

Canadian Forces in Germany Have Own Version of Story

Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Canadian army has met and passed the first big test at its new headquarters in Soest, Germany.

How do you pronounce Soest? The answer, says commanding officer Brig. W. A. B. Anderson, is S-O-A-S-T—rhymes with toast.

The 3,000-odd officers and soldiers from Montreal and Ottawa said "considerable thought" went into solving this weighty question.

Ordinarily the "oe" combination would call for the use of a guttural grunt, difficult to render phonetically. So Soest as a place name is a special case.

BAD PUBLICITY

Canada's military forces in Germany apparently have their own version of the "dear John" story. When sweethearts in Canada want to break off romances with soldiers overseas, they don't break the news in a letter—they just don't write.

Rifleman Stan Wickens of Aberdeen, Ont., and Rifleman Smith of Hamilton passed along this information while munching bratwurst, German sausage, on a bri deg. They said it hadn't happened to them, but they knew "several" fellows whose girls had stopped writing after publication in Canada of articles criticizing the Canadian 27th Brigade.

A dental officer said one of his men was upset because his girl in Canada had broken off their engagement, presumably because of the adverse articles.

ODD SWITCH

History plays strange tricks. Ten years ago Silesia - born Herbert Froemert was squadron leader in Goering's Luftwaffe. His technical officer was a man named Erich Breucker.

Now Froemert is head waiter at the Canadian barracks near Werl. The bartender is Erich Breucker.

Froemert says he thinks Canadians will get better beer in the new bases near Soest, Werl and Hemer than they did in Hannover. "Canadians here are richer than those around Hannover," said Froemert. Besides, many of them understand that the Canadians have not set out carrying troops but as NATO forces."

JUST LIKE HOME

When everything is complete the Canadian garrison should be ideal. By next summer there will be married quarters, schools run by Canadian teachers, general stores for shopping, soda fountains in seven of the 11 canteens, reading rooms, clubs and cinemas.

The number of married couples who have been serving in Germany has startled German girls.

Driver John Muise of Yarmouth, N.S., in the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps says some girls will never girl last summer. His wife's father was killed fighting for the Germans in the Second World War.

Air Commodore Clare Annis Now Chief Staff Officer Of Air Defence Command

George S. White Critical of Sale Without Warranty

OTTAWA (CP)—Appointment of one of Canada's chief exponents of the air concept of war as the No. 3 man in the RCAF's defence command was announced today.

The appointment of chief staff officer, air defence command, goes to Air Commodore Clare L. Annis, 41, of Scarborough, Ont., now attending the Imperial Defence College in Britain. He will succeed Group Capt. J. G. Scott, 46, of Bobcaygeon, Ont., who is to take an overseas appointment.

Air Commodore Annis was captain of a Liberator bomber which in 1942 made the first attack on a U-boat in North American waters, off the strait of Belle Isle between Labrador and Newfoundland. He later co-ordinated an RAF and RCAF bomber station in England and has held various posts since the war.

The air concept of war preaches that the outcome of any future conflict would depend on what happens in the air.

This concept involves three phases: The destruction of enemy air power; the destruction of the enemy's means of replacing this power until complete mastery of the air is won; the destruction of the enemy's ability to produce war materiel.

This concept is in opposition to the surface concept of war, where the forces exist chiefly as close support for the army and navy.

LIMITED ROLE

Canada's air role in any future war would involve only the first phase of the air concept: The destruction of enemy fighters and bombers in the air. The other two phases, involving strategic bombing, would have to be left to the United States Air Force and the RAF.

Though the defence department is placing increased emphasis on the RCAF's role in mobility, most of the money will go to keeping it up to date in fighter planes and equipment. There is no thought of a bomber command, simply because Canada could not afford one.

OTTAWA (CP)—George S. White (PC — Hastings-Frontenac) Tuesday in the Commons criticized the Chrysler Corporation of Canada for not replacing a car purchased by a client of his law firm.

Mr. White, a lawyer in Madoc, said the Chrysler Corporation gives no warranty or guarantee of performance for a given period on new cars.

"In fact under the terms of the purchase any such representation or warranty is specifically excluded," he said. "I think that will come as a great surprise to the public. . . ."

Mr. White said a client purchased a car which turned out to be a "lemon." The car had many defects which could not be corrected.

"It would appear that an important company such as Chrysler, having turned out a lemon on a car like this, would at least replace it with a new car in proper shape," he said.

NO WARRANTY

"I hope that all purchasers of Chrysler products will take notice of the fact that this company gives no warranty at all and that the poor purchases must look to the dealer for any remedy they can get."

Mr. White, speaking in the throne speech debate, urged the government to investigate the price of gasoline, automobile and electrical appliances in Canada. Canadians, he said, want to know that these high prices are not caused by excessive taxation or excessive profits.

C. C. Rowe, president of Chrysler, informed Mr. White's remarks said: "I have no comment to make."

U.S. Writer Charges Pearson Has 'Consistently Sabotaged' Efforts to Bare Red Plots

NEW YORK (CP) — A writer introduced as a "leading authority on Communism" attacked Canadian officials Tuesday in a speech to a committee of the Women's National Republican Club.

Victori Lasky, former New York newspaper man and co-author with Ralph de Toledano of "Seeds of Treason," a book dealing with the Alger Hiss case, directed his attack chiefly at External Affairs Minister Pearson, who he claimed has "consistently sabotaged" efforts to disclose Soviet intrigue in Washington and Ottawa.

He said Pearson had thwarted efforts of a U.S. Senate committee to question Igor Gouzenko in the investigation of allegations that Harry Dexter White was a Soviet spy. Later, the Communist had indicated previously that the Soviet secret police had "a source in the treasury department." White was a former assistant secretary of the treasury.

(William Herbert Communist and professor at Columbia, claimed in 1953 that Norman, then acting chief of Canada's delegation to the United Nations, was now high commissioner to New Zealand, had belonged to a Communist underground cell set up in Cape Cod in 1939. The Canadian external affairs department denounced the statement as untrue.

In Ottawa Pearson described as "false to the point of absurdity," Lasky's speech.

"I do not wish to demean myself, or dignify this speech by commenting on it," the minister said in a statement.

"I need only say that in so far as it touches the department of external affairs or to myself, it is false to the point of absurdity."

Early Opening Of Legislature Is Considered

TORONTO (CP)—An early opening of the 1954 session of the Ontario legislature, perhaps during the first or second week of February, is being considered.

Premier Frost said Tuesday the government has had many requests for an earlier opening. He said the government will do whatever suits the convenience of most members and, since the province's fiscal year ends March 31, an early opening would have some advantage from a budget viewpoint.

Usually the legislature lasts six or seven weeks and ends at Easter. In 1954, Easter will be late, falling April 18.

Intricate Canal System

The heavy line running from east of Kingston, Ont., through the Great Lakes to Port Arthur and Fort William on the map indicates the route of the 2,300 mile, $700,000,000 St. Lawrence Seaway and power project. Enlarged canals and locks will permit ships of heavier tonnage than now is possible to bypass the more precipitous waters. New power houses will harness the seaway for electrical energy for both Ontario and New York State. — (CP Photo).

International Rapids Part Of St. Lawrence Big Obstacle To Seaway 2,200 Miles Long

This story is one of a series on the St. Lawrence seaway. It describes the intricate system of canals which now lets small lakes trade from the Atlantic ocean to the Lakehead and tells the vast cost of opening the route to large deep sea freighters.

Tomorrow: The International rapids project.)

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

What is involved in the St. Lawrence seaway and power project, which proposes to give Canada's 2,200-mile water route from the Lakehead to the Atlantic a minimum depth of 27 feet?

At Fort William and Port Arthur on Lake Superior, we are—on an average over the year—602.2 feet above sea level. Between there and the coast, we must bring our ship down from that height.

We can't take our ship to sea as nature takes the waters, over rapids and waterfalls. . . .

We have built canals around the more precipitous places. We enter a canal lock; we close gates behind us to prevent water from getting in at the upper end; and we let water out at the lower end until we are down to the level of the next lock or body of water. Coming up, we reverse the process.

MILES OF CANAL

In the 1,200 miles from the Lakehead to Montreal we go through 36 locks in 64.8 miles of canals. Coming up, we go through four more locks in a further 11.5 miles of canals.

From Fort William and Port Arthur we cross the northern light of Lake Superior, 258 miles. We enter St. Mary's river, whose 63 miles will drop us 23 feet into Lake Huron—most of it in a single lock at Sault Ste. Marie, in the world's busiest canal system.

St. Mary's channels allow us 25 feet of water downbound and 21 feet upbound. We hope the United States, which has done most of the modern channel improvement there, will deepen it to 27 feet to conform with what Canada plans farther along.

From St. Mary's we sail 228 miles through Lake Huron. Then, without canals, we drop eight feet into Lake Erie through the St. Clair river, 39 miles; lake St. Clair, 18 miles; and Detroit river, 32 miles—passing on our way the cities of Sarnia, Windsor and Detroit.

These connecting waters also have minimum depths of 25 feet downbound and 21 feet upbound, and again we hope the United States will deepen them to 27 feet.

CROSS LAKE ERIE

We go 319 miles through Lake Erie, past rich western Ontario and Cleveland and the throbbing American industrial area to the south, until we come to the most spectacular obstacle of all—Niagara Falls and the rapids and gorge of Niagara river.

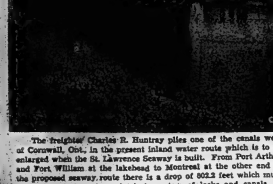
This obstacle has been overcome. The Welland canal, opened by Canada in 1932, takes us around it and drops us 326 feet, through eight locks and 27.6 miles of canal, into Lake Ontario.

The Welland cost $132,000,000 and in it Canada looked forward to a deep seaway to the ocean. Its smallest lock is 859 feet long, 80 feet wide and 30 feet on the sills. This compares with ruling dimensions of 240 feet length and 45 feet width in the 14-foot canals downstream. It requires only dredging to deepen its present 25 feet.

From the Welland we travel 135 miles through Lake Ontario, past Hamilton and Toronto to Kingston and 68 miles through the Thousand Islands.

BIGGEST OBSTACLE

That takes us to Prescott, Ont., and Ogdensburg, N.Y., and the start of the International rapids section of the St. Lawrence river.



Now we have arrived at the real job of the St. Lawrence seaway and power project. The 115 miles between here and Montreal is the bottleneck which, to date, has sealed off big ocean ships from the lakes, and big lake ships from Montreal.

This has meant, as only one instance, that western grain can't go to market without trans-shipment on the lakes. It means, in the years just ahead, a throttling hand on the amount of Labrador iron ore which can reach mid-continent markets.

With the present 14-foot canals we can send through ships of some 2,500 tons deadweight capacity. With the 27-foot canals we will be able to send through ships of 25,000 to 30,000 tons capacity.

The St. Lawrence waterway is open about eight months each year, from mid-April to mid-December.

Long Sault Rapids

The freighter Charles R. Huntley piles one of the canals west of Cornwall, Ont., in the present inland water route which is to be enlarged when the St. Lawrence Seaway is built. From Port Arthur and Fort William at the lakehead to Montreal at the other end of the proposed seaway route there is a drop of 602.2 feet which must be navigated through an intricate system of locks and canals. —(CP from National Film Board.)

Little Benny's Note Book

This morning ma was eating her grapefruit diet with a thoughtful expression, saving to pop, William, suppose we have a nice little dinner at home tonight?

Yes gods, when did I ever want to have a dinner anywhere else? pop said.

Him wanting to eat home every day in the year, especially Sundays, and ma said. That's exactly what I mean, William. I have such a birzy day looming ahead of me that I was seriously planning for us all to eat somewhere on the Avenue this evening, she said.

Well, if we lived up on the Avenue, we could still eat at home, pop said, and ma said, We are going to eat at home. I wish you'd listen to me. I can manage to hurry home, even if I'm a little late, and ye can have a nice simple little meal rite here, even if it's a little delayed, she said.

That's fine. I'll finish up some back work at the office and get home a little late myself, so you wont have to rush, pop said, and ma said, Oh, I'll be rushing all day, for that matter, so you dont need to worry about that. I wont have time to do any marketing before 2 pm, but that's all rite, I can pick up a nice little stake on my way home. I don't mind, it will just make one more thing to carry. What would you like with it, William? she said.

Come to think of it, I've got an uncontrollable urge to wrestle with a paper napkin, pop said. World is full of them, but too much if we ate up on the Avenue most places, he said, and ma said, Why of course not, William, if you really mean it.

My dear, no man was ever more serious in a women's world, pop said.

Says Armed Thug Lived Good Life For Past Decade

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A Chatham man who, his lawyer said, has "lived a good life" since his release from penitentiary in 1945, Monday pleaded guilty to the armed robbery of two downtown business firms held up within a 20-minute period Oct. 7.

George McEllistrum, Jr., of Chatham, was remanded one week for sentence. He pleaded guilty to two charges of armed robbery.

He was arrested less than a half hour after the first of two establishments, located about four blocks apart on the city's main street, was robbed.

Crown Attorney Bruce J. S. Macdonald read McEllistrum's record of nine criminal convictions from 1931 to 1939.

He was last released from penitentiary in March, 1945, after serving four years in connection with an offence committed in Kitchener, Ont., Macdonald said. He has had no convictions since then.

Defence Counsel Gordon R. Stewart said McEllistrum has lived a good life since 1943.

Mr. Macdonald said the holdups here had been "carefully premeditated crimes." McEllistrum was captured with two automatic pistols in his possession and was "prepared to shoot if not if necessary," he said.

The man was also in possession of $750 dollars taken from the drug store and tavern.

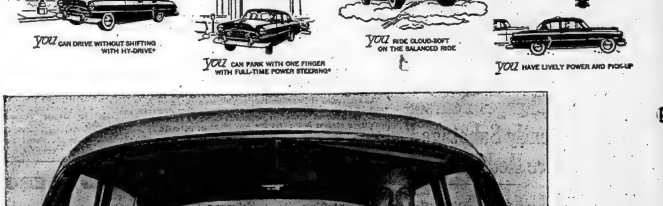
Bomb Shelters In New Schools Are Suggested

KITCHENER (CP) — The construction of bomb shelters in Waterloo schools was suggested at a Waterloo school board meeting.



"I have seen where bomb shelters are being incorporated in new schools in other areas, and I think we should give it some thought," said H. W. Wagner.

Board members decided to discuss the matter with the department of education.

Pupils will also be taught to lie on the floor and shelter face and head from any flash from a bomb, the board decided.

Ti-Cats Must Stop Etcheverry's Passing To Beat Montreal

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

— Belleville Memos are in Kingston tonight where they will try to make two consecutive wins into a three game winning streak at the expense of the Kingston Goodyears. . . . Should the Memos win they will slide into second place, with the Goodies with a 500 percentage of three wins and three losses. It is not necessary to add that the Goodyears, enjoying an average 3,000 per game attendance and public acclaim of unprecedented dimensions, will be out to trounce the Memos. It is likely, following the Memos' 6-2 verdict over the Oshawa Truckmen last night, that Kingston's Memorial Arena will chalk up a new attendance record for the young season as a typical Belleville-Kingston duel shapes up.

The Memos will be without playing-coach Red Doran, in tonight's game — the estimable Red is attending a 10-day course in community recreation in Toronto. The Memos will go into battle with veteran Vern Geyer at the helm. Only other regular likely absent for tonight's encounter is Doug Hall. Should Doug fail to make the trip, Dave Jones will be in for him on the Defence, with Jones' line-mate, Ken Donald, who joined the Oshawa zone last Saturday night and who sat out last night's light shelling practice in Memorial Arena, will be available at centre ice, line with Vern Geyer and Jack Wardhaugh. The 2-D line of Duke Doran and Edwin and Erwin Duncan are in top form. Backstop Wade and Taylor and defencemen Bill and Ian Ashbridge will man the defensive posts in front of Ken Sarsaili, with Don Barclay in reserve.

The Goodyears, who were having internal ailments as the executive allegedly tried to overrule Coach John Carr-Harris in the matter of signing players, have ironed out their differences with Carr-Harris in the fancy financial tune, according to an unimpeachable leak, and will be at full strength. The Goodies are also reported to have had Dave Catlin on their first line last time out. Manpower, apparently, is no problem.

The Memos are tentatively set to trek to Orillia on Friday night to play their postponed league opener with the Pontiacs, but reports as yet, still indicate that the Pontiacs have no ice in their igloo. The club is ready to go anyway. If they make the trip, Red Doran will be along, and the Redhead will be with the team when it meets the Pontiacs in Memorial Arena Saturday night.

Speaking of hockey, just another reminder from Doug Palcer-Jones that 80 referees have been named to coaches, managers, referees, and others connected with minor hockey, for the OMHA Referees' Forum scheduled for the city hall here tomorrow night at 7:30. . . . The "Squirt" section of minor hockey, for those under 10 years of age, opens its season in the Arena Thursday evening at 6.00 p.m. when the Maple Leafs and the Black Hawks clash.

MARMORA — Out here in this pretty doorway to the door country and the holiday hinterland, there is one topic of conversation.

Taxes? Shucks, the good burghers of Marmora, like the rest of us, take 'em in their stride, grips and beef a little — then pay 'em. Bethlehem Steel? At the moment the mammoth ore-producing project is running in second place. Hunting? The bucks are running and Marmorites are getting their share.

Speaking of "bucks" and quick one-at that, history is closer to the prime theme of conversation of the villagers from urchins to uncles; muppets to mothers-in-law and from the keeper of the village pump to himself the rover.

Front villagers, surrounded by their good neighbors from the surrounding districts, on Friday night will celebrate officially the opening of the new artificial ice plant in the Dr. Hamilton Crawford Memorial Arena.

Friday night climaxes what is probably one of the greatest community and district efforts ever attempted in Hastings County's rural area. Only a few short months ago, the germ of a seed took life in the mind of one of the village's outstanding businessmen. The seed sprouted, blossomed and standing business men. The seed sprouted, blossomed and pollenized other business, professional and industrial minds. The man on the street, in shops, offices and plants caught the "bug." It was an artificial ice plant in the village's well-appointed arena.

There was a mere matter of raising some $30,000. Quite a hurdle. But nothing is impossible, as it was proven, when a number of community-minded people, aided and abetted by their out-of-town friends and communities, decided to do it.

The rest of the story has been published. It is a story of determination, the will to succeed and finally, pride of achievement.

While it was an all-out community enterprise, a lot of credit must go to the man who "rallied-children" the idea. He is Albert Marrow, well known theatre proprietor of the village. Mr. Marrow has been the right-hand man of the special committee in charge. He donated a personal $1,000 and gave the use of his theatre gratis to the many events that raised funds for, the project. Then, too, there is Jim Keeley, engineer at the neighboring Deloro Smelting and Refining Company. Jim gave freely of his professional knowledge and in this way helped cut down some heavy expense.

While industrial firms of the village and district contributed to the fund, the "boys on the street" should be mentioned. The Marmora Hockey Club, well known in the Trent Valley Hockey League circles, buried its shoulder to the wheel. The employees of the Deloro plant "kicked in" handsomely with generous amounts from individual pay cheques. So did the boys who toil on the Bethlehem Steel's huge mining project. The veterans of the Canadian Legion, who know what an all-round effort means, willingly gave of their funds and services.

Space will not permit mention of all those who assisted, but it was an all-out 100 per cent community effort that is being crowned with the exceptional show and celebration scheduled for Friday night. We are told the famous RCAF Central Command Band will be there as well as internationally known figure skating champions. Not forgetting a hockey match between two teams of district ice-land stars. Dit Clapper will be on hand in a whistle-tooting role as will be brawny Jack Bater, of Madoc. . . . Looks like a grand time all round. Secrah there.

Pass Defence of Hamilton Squad Has Looked Weak In Many Games This Year

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats' pass defence, which has been good some games and bad in others, will have to be at its sharpest for the Big Four playoffs opening here today.

It will have to contend with the passing attack of Montreal Alouettes directed by Sam (The Rifle) Etcheverry, who, when he is having a good day, can pass a team dizzy.

The Als' main weapon is the right arm of the former University of Denver quarterback. Whether the Tiger-Cats can throttle his aerial blows will depend largely on the defensive play of Dick Brown, Lou Kusserow, Vito Ragazzo and Ralph Tooley, added by a line which has been pretty much Ivory Etcheverry on his throws or smear him before he can get them away.

BEST BACKFIELD

On the record of its numbers, interceptions and yardage, defensive backfield is the best in the league but in some games it has looked weak and the lapses have caused dire effects.

That was the case in the last meeting of the regular schedule between Hamilton and Montreal on the same Montreal went on to win 31-18. The week before the Hamilton Tiger-Cats beat the Als by the same score. Alouettes beat them 17-0 in Montreal, 17-7 in Hamilton. Cats won the next battle 20-15 in Hamilton.

Cam Fraser, who'll be missing along with linebacker Quincy Arrington from the Cats' defence here today because of injuries, won that game for Hamilton when he kicked a Montreal punt behind the Al's line and rushed down to fall on it for a touchdown while the Montreal kicker, Tex Coulter, waited in vain for the final second which ticked off. Until that happened the Als were in front 15-14.

HOME-FIELD WINS

The games that the Tiger-Cats and Als have won against each other have been on their home fields. If that is any edge Hamilton will have it but the second game of the best-of-three series will be played in Montreal Sunday, and the third, if necessary, also there next Wednesday.

The Als, who placed five men on the Big Four all-star offensive and defensive squads, one for Hamilton, also weakened through injuries. Gone are one of the two players who made both the offensive and defensive all-star lineups, is definitely out along with guard Ray Cicia and end Jim Miller. In addition, halfback Tommy Manastersky is a doubtful starter.

Tackle Vince Mazza of Hamilton, who shared the alouels with Quinlan of the Tiger-Cats' players picked on both the offensive and defensive all-star teams, will be one of the key players in coach Carl Voyles' strategy.

He'll likely be matched to end where he was used earlier in the season against Ottawa.

 BROWNS FADE

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The name St. Louis Browns passed into history officially Tuesday—stockholders of the organization changed the formal name to Baltimore Baseball Club Inc., informally the Orioles.

It was the last step in the American League franchise transfer.

Only 12 stockholders appeared at the meeting and voted "unanimously and most agreeably" to changes proposed, said Clyde Morris, Baltimore lawyer and secretary of the Orioles.

Sport in Brief

Racing Records Fall

NEW YORK (AP)—Season racing at United States thoroughbred tracks broke all records this year, an unofficial Associated Press survey of attendance, betting and revenue of the 25 racing states disclosed today. Wagering went over the $2,000,000,000-mark for the first time.

The season now drawing to a close was even better than the 1952 year, in itself a record season. With attendance up in 22 states where racing is still going on, the survey shows wagering is up 7.21 per cent over 1952, with attendance up 4.39 per cent, and an increase in revenue to the states of 14.29 per cent.

Incomplete and unofficial figures show that wagering totalled $2,068,000,000 in 1953, against $1,923,205,490 in 1952. Attendance this year was 28,329,182 compared with 27,137,941 years.

RECORD TAXES

The tracks will turn over in revenue to the state and municipalities a record of $136,000,370, compared with $121,000,000 and $119,051,276 in 1952.

New York's perennial leader in betting, showed a decline in both wagering and attendance, but the state's revenue figure — estimated after Jamaica closed Saturday is $35,000,000 against $36,000,000 last year.

This season total betting in New York was $374,441,814, compared with $382,092,319 in 1952. Attendance dropped from 4,563,577 to 4,496,334.

OK OLYMPIC RINK

CORTINA D'AMPEZZO, Italy (AP) —Home Olympic officials have given the green light to construction of the ice rink for the Winter Olympic Games here in 1956.

The rink will be tested twice this winter. An Italian national championship and an international competition between Switzerland, Sweden and Italy.

BUDGE WINS ROUND

LONDON (AP) — Veteran Don Budge gave L. Radovanovic of Yugoslavia 6-1, 6-2 beating Tuesday in the first round of the international indoor professional lawn tennis championships.

The great American star of the 1930's handled the Yugoslavian star easily and once again got his big serve zipping early. He used two backhanded Radovanic's lobs and drop shots.

First-seeded Pancho Gonzales of Los Angeles, opened second round eligies competition with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Hans Nusslein of Germany.

FINNEY BACK TO MINORS

Calgary (CP) — Coach Frank Currie said Tuesday that forward Gerry Finney, on with the parent Chicago Black Hawks for the last two weeks, will be returned to Calgary Stampeders of the Western Hockey League.

Finney is being returned as a replacement for Stampeder defensive halfback Ted Wyrostok, who has left to join the Hawks.

MITCHELL HAPPY

WITCHITA, Kan. (AP) — Jack Mitchell, University of Kansas football coach, said Tuesday night he had declined an offer to coach Calgary Stampeders.

"It was a fine offer, it's a great country up there and their football seems a sound venture. But I am happy with my work here and at this time I am not interested in transferring to professional football," he said.

SIGN HEAVIES

EDMONTON (CP) — Boxing promoter Jack Berry announced Tuesday night he has signed Ernie Reynolds, of Jersey City, N.J., and Earl Walls of Toronto, Canadian champion for a heavyweight bout here Dec. 4.

St. Catharines Shuts Out Irish By 2-0 Count

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The good thing about the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series is the insurance the nine teams offer their fans.

If the spectators don't see a hockey game, they're bound to see at least a good fight.

Tuesday night in St. Catharines they saw both—plus a match. St. Catharines TeePees shutout Toronto St. Michael's College Majors 2-0 and a free-for-all in the third period.

In the loop's other game Barrie Flyers dropped the Citadelles 6-3 in Quebec.

The Bees and St. Michael's proved that players in the OHA junior loop will fight at the drop of a stick. Chris Warchuk of the TeePees received a bodycheck in the third period but by so doing lacked arms. Geoff Duff of the Irish, Duff resented it and that touched off the fight. Before the differences were settled four majors and two misconducts were assessed to members of both teams.

INCREASE LEAD

Nels Bullock and Brian Cullen scored for St. Catharines to increase its first-place standings to three points over the second-place Galt Black Hawks.

Nipper Nash, Don Cherry, Ed McQueen, Dan McFall, Cleland Morrison and Arnold Smith tallied for the Flyers. Clermont Doyan had three for the last-place Citadelles. Ray Cyr and Mike Ratchford got the other Quebec goals.

Galt plays the Tigers in Hamilton and St. Mitchael's meets the Hitmores in Guelph tonight.

Remember When

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winnipeg Blue Bombers beat Calgary Stampeders to win the western football title 34 years ago today, taking the two-game, total point round 33-30 after losing the first game 13-7. Winnipeg went on to win the Canadian title by edging Ottawa 8-7 in the Grey Cup final.

N.Y. Rangers Need Win Over Chihawks to Pull Them Up Closer to Playoff Spot

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Frank Boucher, New York Ranger coach, will probably be counting noses in the Madison Square Garden crowd tonight.

Boucher pulled a few switches to inject some color into his fading Broadway Blues and the move paid off with some of the largest National Hockey League crowds of the season.

Sid Abel's Black Hawks fared much better. They defeated the leading Montreal Canadiens 3-2 in Montreal Saturday and fought to a 2-2 deadlock with the Habs in Chicago Sunday. The win and tie pulled them closer to the Rangers and a victory tonight would move them into fifth place with the Rangers.

Abel is unveiling a new player tonight, defenceman Fred Hucul from the Calgary farm club. Friday night in Boston he add 18 year-old Fred Saskatoonan, a full-blooded Cree Indian from Moose Jaw Juniors of the Western Junior Hockey League.

Boucher is counting on his new defenceman Ivan (The Terrible) Irwin to spark his club into the higher echelons of the NHL. Irwin was brought in from Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League to replace Allan Stanley.

HAWKS IMPROVING

Last night Hawks fared much better. They defeated the Montreal Canadiens 3-2 in Detroit.

Varsity Blues Confident They Can Beat Western

TORONTO (CP) — University of Toronto Blues, boasting an impressive defensive record, looked with confidence today to their sudden-death game in Toronto Saturday against University of Western Ontario Mustangs for the senior intercollegiate football crown.

Blues appeared to belied one these striking points about the team's 1953 performance:

Opposing teams haven't scored a forward-pass touchdown against the Blues all season; the single point Queen's scored against Varsity last month was the only best score against the team in its last four games; Western, defending college champions, managed only a single point in two invasions of Toronto this year.

The two teams have clashed three times this season. In Toronto the Blues won a pre-season exhibition 11-1 and took a scheduled game 13-6. In London Western came from behind for a 13-13 verdict.

The Blues escaped without serious injury in their final scheduled game at Kingston last Saturday. The minor hurts were suffered by end Tony Pajaczkowski but two backs, half Phil Munts who acquired a charley horse and fullback Steve Stochaj who aggravated a shoulder injury.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—The bulldog fur the big punch in the heavyweight title fight will begin officially tonight in Los Angeles when Lee Succonni of Philadelphia displays his considerable wares before coast-wide audience in a 10 - rounder against Freddie Beshore.

Succonni was badly wrong, the 190-pound Butcher Boy from the East will starch his man well within the limit. From there it will be only a question of time and careful guidance until Danny finds himself sampling Rocky Marciano's humble.

The reason one can predict all this with some assurance is that some sort of challenger must be found by next summer. Kmard Charles, Roland LaStarza and Nino Valdes so not fit into one of those ordered ring productions. Succonni looks as though he might. He talks good, too.

"Marciano's knockouts over Walcott and Louis were overplayed," we use he is quoted. "They was old men. I saw him against LaStarza and I know he can be taken."

That's the kind of talk Rocky and his manager, Al Weill, love to hear.

GOOD NEWS

The news that Rogers Hornsby has landed on his feet again and will operate an extended school of baseball instruction films for national TV showing is one of the most welcome items of the week.

It is highly probable that the former batting wizard knows as much about the game's finer points as any man living.

OBSESSION

We do not know the name of the next manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, nor do we even have a favorite candidate. We do know this, though: the man who eventually takes the post forfeited by Chuck Dressen will know exactly where he stands if say manager ever did.

"Our next manager," says president Walter O'Malley, "will have to take more interest in the World Series. This has become an obsession with us."

Cornwall Beaten

CORNWALL (CP) — Kingston Collegiate and Vocational Institute Tuesday beat Cornwall Lawrence High School 13-8 in a sudden-death playoff and captured the championship of the Eastern Ontario Secondary School Association Southern B football group.

Kingston now meets the winner of the Empire-Pembroke series for the B group title.

Adopt Rules

TORONTO (CP) — The annual meeting of the Canadian Horse Shows Association Tuesday voted to retain the Federation Equestre Internationale rules which were introduced in the association's rule book last year.

Provision was made, however, that any show wishing to do so could apply for permission to operate under other rules.

Windsor Expects Dynamite In Canadian Junior Football Final from Saskatoon Hilltops

SASKATOON, (CP) — Saskatoon Hilltops' average weight along the wingline of 177.5 pounds and their overall team weight of 2,490 pounds won't send any shivers through the opposition, but Windsor Athletics expect dynamite in small packages when they meet Hilltops here Saturday in the Canadian junior football final.

The Toppers, champions of Manitoba and Saskatchewan for the first year since they were formed in 1947, are perhaps one of the lightest junior teams ever to represent the Prairies, but they are also regarded as one of the best.

For 11 games this fall their record stands at 10 victories and one defeat, the schedule including eight league games, two playoff games and one exhibition contest. They ran up 427 points and allowed the opposition 61.

Their greatest margin of victory was in a pre-season exhibition game against Edmonton Oilers when they romped over the Alberta capital 54-0. In their Manitoba-Saskatchewan league the Toppers have blanked Regina Rams 23-0 and 43-0.

Their only league defeat came in their own league when Winnipeg Weston Wildcats spilled them 20-14 in Winnipeg stadium. But they atoned for this loss by trampling the Weston 36-4 and 27-3 in the Manitoba - Saskatchewan home-and-home, total-point finals.

EXHIBITION WIN

The Topper also scored a 29-15 victory over Calgary Bronks in a spring exhibition game.

Thirteen players are thirty-year men. Eight have been with the club two seasons and five are five-year veterans. Nine of the 37 players came up through Hilltop junior ranks. Coach Guards Dick Clarke and Brent Logan migrated from Regina and halfback Audie Meder came from Weyburn, Sask.

The team is coached by Bob Arr, a high school teacher in Saskatoon regarded as one of the best football coaches in the west.

Assistant backfield coach is Ron Tinkler who played for Arr when the Hilltops before graduating from high school kept up their Line coach is Johnny Robinson, former Saskatchewan Roughrider who has been with the Toppers since 1947.

Standout on the team is Ron Adam, 18-year-old quarterback. A 1952-graduate of high school, he is playing his third year with the team. He will be with the club next season if he chooses. But the odds against this are slim as Saskatchewan Roughriders are scraping him.

STANDOUT PLAYER

Adam rates with the best passers in western Canada. He is a stylish ball handler can run and kick. He's one of the fastest men on the team.

Besides Adam, other third-year men are captain Ray Syrnyk and halfbacks Johnny Sando and Eddie Wright. This will be the last junior year for Syrnyk, Eyks and Sando. But Wright has three more year to go.

Hilltops', hard-hitting fullback, Ole Krebbs will go up with the team. He was the first senior boy when the club was formed. Later Olstad played high school football and helped the Toppers as a player two years ago.

John Casper, Rudy Voykin, Rusty Charlebois, Ken McMurtry, the only 200-pounder of the team, Val Konoroff, Ted Mackenzie, Bill Trout, Jules Rawlyk, Chuck Bolivan, Murray Carl Lampman, Ron Eddols, Art Risdah, Larry Bretzel, Don Park, Ernie Gulka and Johnny Krba are the other Toppers.

Dan Bucceroni Heavily Picked To Beat Beshore

LOS ANGELES (CP)—Dan Bucceroni, who hopes to land a title match with heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano, is heavily picked to use veteran Freddy Beshore for a punching bag in their 10-round here tonight.

Bucceroni, 26, probably will weigh about 195.

Bucceroni's best known victims this year are Tommy Harrison and Jimmy Slade.

Beshore, after a long layoff came back to defeat Abel Ferreira in Detroit a week ago, a decision to Harry (Kid) Matthews. He weighs about 190.

Cataracts Suffer Twelfth Loss In 14 Starts

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The vivid descriptions about the dangerous Cataracts of Niagara Falls are fast wearing out.

The Cataracts are not dangerous but rather seven teams in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series are proving it.

The last scoring spell hardly be compared to the swirling rapids when they were trounced 9-1 by Chatham Maroons in Niagara Falls Tuesday night. Their fifth loss in 14 games was a stepping stone to first place for Chatham.

Jim Conacher, Joe Carveth, Al Plouffe, Doug French, Bill Cupolo and Ted Faulkner scored for Niagara Falls.

Doug Travers and Gord Haidy notched two goals each for the Bulldogs to displace Kitchener from first place in the standings. Lyle Wiseman fired the other. George Scheles scored for the Dutchmen.

Laurie Peterson fired both goals for the Indians. Ernie Degenais replied for the Lumber Kings.

Barrie is at Stratford in the OHA group and the Indians meet the Wolves in Sudbury in the NOHA.

Beliveau Tests Ankle By Skating on Tuesday

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Beliveau, Montreal rookie centre, skated Tuesday for the first time since he suffered a broken ankle here Oct. 24 in a game at Chicago.

When he will return to action is problematical—likely a week or more. Beliveau skated for 30 minutes without any ill effects to the ankle.

Alston Touted As Manager Of Dodgers

NEW YORK (CP)—Walter Alston, manager of the Brooklyn Dodger Montreal triple-A farm club in the International League, was touted today by the Daily Mirror as the new Dodger manager—one who has nothing to say about the appointment.

Alston managed Montreal to the International League title last season and the Little World series championship over Kansas City of the American Association. The Brooklyn club has been open since Chuck Dressen, who piloted the club to the National League pennant but lost to New York Yankees in the world series, left last month after failing to get a contract for more than one year.

The Mirror said it got its information "from a source close to the Ebbets Field player headquarters."

But none of the official Dodger brass would say anything about the rumor.

Edmonton, Saskatoon Trade Their Captains

EDMONTON (CP) — In a surprise player deal, Edmonton Flyers and Saskatchewan Valleyers of the Western Hockey League have traded captains.

Edmonton got veteran Chuck McCullough, 30, and Quakers Jim BUNDAN WIN

Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians edged the Lumber Kings 2-1 in Pembroke to move into sold possession of fourth place in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A group.

Laurie Peterson fired both goals for the Indians. Ernie Degenais replied for the Lumber Kings.

Barrie is at Stratford in the OHA group and the Indians meet the Wolves in Sudbury in the NOHA.

Montreal and Fort William To Meet for Int. Title

MONTREAL (CP)—Lake Shore Flyers, with a fast-charging line and a good backfield, meet Fort William Redskins here Saturday in the first officially sanctioned east - west intermediate football final.

Previous sectional matches have been arranged by the clubs themselves. Early this year, at its meeting in Edmonton, the Canadian Rugby Union gave its blessing to an annual final for the Eastern Interprovincial Football Union.

The Redskins are expected to arrive Friday and will be able to practice in the afternoon. St. Aloysius Orfans, the Flyers members of the Quebec Rugby Football Union, have offered their east-end field for use by the Fort William club.

LOCAL BOYS

Coach Bill Davies' eastern team is an aggregation made up largely of players from the suburban area bordering Lake St. Louis. Davies played with Montreal Big Four teams before the war and was a winner of the Jeff Russel Trophy, an annual award to the most valuable, popular and sportsmanlike player in the Big Four.

Spearhead of the Flyers is Wil O'Hagan, 27, a running halfback who came back after a foot injury and was outstanding in the ORFU playoffs and in the eastern final last Saturday against Peterborough Orfans, whom Flyers defeated 11-6.

DOUBLE THREATS

Joe Stracina, 23, formerly with Saskatchewan Rough Riders, carries the kicking for Flyers. He's a fullback. One of the fleet-backfielders is Sandy Spence, Montreal track star. George Rousy, an end, played with McGill two seasons ago. He was a member of Canada's paddling team at the Olympic games in Helsinki last summer.

At quarterback is Ron Lamb, a local boy who has shone exceptionally well in the last few games. Ron Farrington, who wears glasses, is also a quarterback. He has done most of the passing but has been used recently as a defensive half.

The CRU has set 24 as the number of players to be dressed by each team but both coaches are expected to increase the number to their full squads of about 30. During the week of scholastic games, more on the platoon system for offensive and defensive play.

Rollie Miles Broke Western Yardage Record

REGINA (CP)—A record of 189 yards rushing in one game by Edmonton Eskimos' halfback Rollie Miles was disclosed in official statistics for this season's 14-game regular schedule in the Western Interprovincial Football Union.

The little Negro's rushing total surpassed the 183 yards gained by Winnipeg fullback Lorne Benson in Blue Bombers' 43-3 romp over Saskatchewan Roughriders in the league semi-finals this year, and the 181 yards netted by Edmonton halfback Mike King in a 1951 regular season game.

The record Miles set is a lonely effort Oct. 19, when Eskimos were shaded 20-19 by Roughriders. In that game the little speedster, a third-year import, scored two touchdowns, his fourth and fifth within three nights. For one of them, he ran 81 yards.

RECORDS EXPANDED

The fact that miles had broken King's record went unnoticed at first.

About one-quarter of the 116 pages in the 1953 edition of the WIFU books were shattered this year. Herb Johnson, first-year import halfback with Saskatchewan, led the way with five new marks.

He set a pass-receiving percentage record of 66.6 catching 42 of 73 passes thrown him. This eclipsed the 78.9 average set last year by Blue Bomber halt Tom Casey.

Johnson's 131 yards in runbacks of punts in a single game set a record along with a 108-yard run, the longest ever. His 73 runbacks of punts, totalling 634 yards, broke two more marks.

Advance bridge planning is not just study teacher uses to bear himself into. It prepares you for what you must do with what you have. It tells you what plays to select and what entries to consider.

From this you are able to discover what you are unable to do or what you must not try to do. The importance of this lies in the fact that it advises you to try something else.

We started talking about this deal:

South found himself in a final contract of six spades. He got an opening lead of the trump jack from west. Dummy played a small and the east hand showed out just before south took it with the king.

A heart finesse or dummy queen held. The jack play from west indicated the lone king of hearts now there. This means he would be in position to overruff a third heart if ordinary play is tried.

To set up hearts will take two ruffs. If trumps are pulled, not enough entries are in dummy for cashing the fifth heart which is so importantly needed for the stuff of a south club.

So, there you have the picture. If trumps are pulled, two clubs will lose by lack of entries to dummy. If trumps are held up, west will overruff a third heart and a club will lose, too.

If south ruffs a third heart high, west will get a trump trick and his side will also get a club. A trick must be saved in some way, simply or miraculously. Or the contract is sunk.

There is no doubt at all that one club trick must be lost by any manner of play. To keep from losing two is what the declarer had to plan. He managed it with what looks like a miracle play.

It is a shame to leave you like this. But this is one of those plays of plays it would be worth your while to study for solution. My next article will show the answer. Meanwhile, don't hate me for the delay.

AT THE CAPITOL—Virginia Grey finds herself in Wayne Morris' arms in scene from "The Fighting Lawman", third new co-hit now playing at the Capitol Theatre. Also on the same program is Cinema color "Royal African Rifles" starring Louis Hayward and Veronica Hurst. Both hits are first Belleville showings.

Deer Hunters Arrive Home, Many With Quotas

FRANKFORD. — Frankford's deer hunters are all back in the fold for another year, with the usual tall and true stories being told; some hunters came home empty-handed, and others came home happy.

Noteworthy among the trophies were three large bucks felled by one group. The largest dropping before the gun of Harry Hearns, a 16-point buck tipping the scales at 220 lbs., another of 12-points went to Jack Wallace and a third to Charles Winters of Hamilton a 10-pointer. These boys hunt near Gilmour, Ontario.

Jack Farley's Canners picked up their limit of one per man to a total of twelve for a nice bag of game.

Jim Hill's gang came home with 13 deer and Jim just happened to down six or the 13 by himself.

One party of hunters entertained themselves for a few days fighting a forest fire, at the request of local fire rangers, and have a story to tell even if they did not set any hunting records.

LIVING RULE-HOLDER

TORONTO (CP) — A 40-foot spruce tree will have a police escort on its way to the city hall here from North Toronto. It will be permanently planted in front of the city hall and will provide a place to put Christmas tree lights and other decorations. Toronto got the idea from Cleveland which is doing the same thing.

TROOPS COMING HOME

OTTAWA (CP)—Nearly 800 men of the 27th Canadian Infantry Brigade are coming home from Germany next Wednesday. The army said the soldiers, second contingent of the brigade to return to Canada on rotation, will arrive in the transport Columbia at Wolfe's Cove.

Good Eating!

NEARLY EVERYONE LIKES A GOOD STEAK OR A GOOD PORTION OF FRIED CHICKEN

STEAK

To do it justice, a steak should be about one inch thick of the best quality (Rbd Brand) beef and hung from 14 to 4 weeks prior to cutting. Then cooked to taste.

FRIED CHICKEN

Should be Grade "A" well cooked in a good shortening, and a substantial enough portion so that you can really enjoy it.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—It's time to check up on the wondrous world of Shelley Winters.

The unpredictable blonde is a throwback to another Hollywood era. There was a time when the temperamental leading lady was considered par for the course. But movie actors on the whole have become mops normal.

Shelley is always up in arms about something. Recently she had a much-publicized running feud with a cactus when she was appearing in Las Vegas. She claims the place provoked her into blowing her top so the publicity could be repaired.

Even so, the fracas appears to have done her no harm. She said that upon her return she had more job offers than she could handle.

CAN BE DIFFICULT

"Yes, I can be," she replied. "I get along fine until people do things to prevent me from doing my best possible work. Then I blow up."

Difficult or not, Shelly has a voracious appetite for work, which is even more pronounced since her retirement to bear a child. Since then she has made three pictures, started the club date and made a TV film. She soon starts a film for her home ish, Universal-International.

On Dec. 23, she flies with baby Vittoria to Rome, where they will join her husband, Vittorio Gassman. Shelley will make a picture with him. At the same time, she hopes to make a movie with Vittorio de Sica.

Take a rest after that? Not our girl. She may do a stage version of "The Rose Tattoo" in London.

NOT NOW, DEAR

Despite the gossips, she remarked that her marriage to Gassman is far closer than the only distance between them being geographic. Recently the pair spent an idyllic few days in Canada, where she was on location. When he returned to Hollywood briefly, he read reports she was divorcing him. He quickly phoned her.

"Are you divorcing me?" he asked.

"Maybe later, dear," she replied, "Not now."

Your Individual Horoscope

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR THURSDAY, NOV. 19, 1953.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — Some adverse tendencies for other can routine tasks. Extra effort will naturally help, but don't allow conditions to irritate; that will only confuse things. Calmness best.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus) — Some minor opposition, but don't let it discourage you. Take things in stride; maintain an even disposition, and you will succeed.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini) — Side-step a tendency toward unwise speculations, unsound propositions. Make your day a worthy one; whether or not you accomplish, be it said you tried.

June 22 to July 22 (Cancer) — No impulsive decisions or hasty words, folks! A realistic, forward earth attitude and disposition needed. Might take inventory of your past, present outlook!

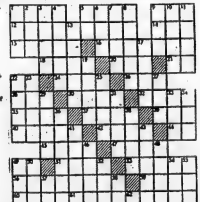
July 24 to August 22 (Leo) — Adverse tendencies can be counteracted by grit, the will to achieve and intelligent thinking. You may be under some pressure in early hours; mark time until tense period is over.

August 23 to September 20 (Virgo)—You may have to compromise, combine resources to outwit possible contention from unexpected places, people. Incentive should exist; you have mastered many obstacles before; why not again?

September 21 to October 23 (Libra)—Reward is so satisfying you should step out and repeat past gains. Progress will be measured by your own persistency. P. M. brighter period for personal matters, home, family.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Not a good period in which to go all-out in money speculations or to make binding contracts. Caution is day's keyword. Handle romance, personal associations most thoughtfully.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—If you are inept or satisfied with inadequate progress now you may find it rough going later. Be honest with yourself and with those with whom you deal. Improvement due in evening.



December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Be alert, especially in money matters, stock investments; doubtlechck. Be sure you are thinking soundly. Avoid arguments, combativeness.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Size up your problems carefully; aspects are not entirely auspicious. Seek help and advice from right sources and these close to you. Evening favors personal interests, home matters.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Avoid taking chances with property or health, especially in bad weather. Approach problems with keenness; seek opinions from those qualified before going ahead. Use your intelligence.

YOU BORN TODAY possess keen intelligence but tend to allow suspicious, skeptical thoughts to lead you astray. You have grit, fine idealism, determination, so ask God to guide you rightly and there is hardly a height you cannot reach. Strike a happy medium, avoid waste, and do not take on needless burdens. Be ever encouraged. Birthdate of: James A. Garfield, 20th U.S. President.

Egyptian Court Will Try Farouk

CAIRO (AP)—A judge of Egypt's revolutionary court says the tribunal will try ex-king Farouk in absentia. The former monarch, ousted in a 1952 army-backed coup, is living in exile in Italy.

The justice, Hassan Ibrahim, did not specify what charges might be placed against Farouk, but President Mohammed Naguib's regime has accused the former king of graft and abuse of power.

Reports here have said Italy would not permit Farouk's extradition to Egypt to answer to his status as a political exile.

Testifies Child Held Up by Wrist And Then Beaten

KITCHENER (CP) — Patricia Naylor, 14, of Kitchener, said Tuesday that in August, 1952, she saw Mrs. William Parepcke pick up her small daughter, Glenis Parepcke, by one wrist and beat her with her free hand.

Testifying at the trial of Mr. and Mrs. Parepcke on an assault charge arising from the death of the three-year-old child last January, the girl said the August incident occurred on an occasion when she was visiting the Parepckes.

"I said, 'If you keep on, some day you are going to kill Glenis.' Mrs. Parepcke said, 'You don't prove anything' and got very mad."

As a result, Mrs. Parepcke told her to "get out," she said.

SLAPPED HIM

Judge D. S. Charlton ruled the testimony admissible, over defence objections. He also admitted as evidence a statement Inspector Alec Mundell of the provincial police said Parepcke gave to police.

The statement, read to the jury, quoted Parepcke as saying the child had been in the habit of being put outside. He had found ordinary beatings with an open hand unsatisfactory and had used his belt. He also arrived home the day of the' child's death and learned Tuesday unconscious.

The parents were acquitted last February of charges of murder and manslaughter.

New World Mark Of 1,272 M.P.H. Set by Skyrocket

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A world speed record of 1,372 miles an hour was established Oct. 14 in a Douglas Skyrocket by Scott Crossfield, pilot for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, the Los Angeles Times says today.

The former mark was 1,238 miles an hour, set Aug. 15, 1951, in the same plane.

Marvin Miles, Times aviation editor, says the NACA has verified the new mark.

The rocket plane was dropped from the belly of a B-29 Superfortress bomber at about 33,000 feet. It was under power only for about three minutes before being nosed down toward a "dead stick" landing in 17 minutes.

Transport Board Approves Lower Air Freight Rates

OTTAWA (CP) — The air transport board has approved a reduction in government-owned Trans-Canada Air Lines' air freight charges across Canada, it was learned Tuesday.

The new rates, cutting present rates as much as 30 per cent in some cases, are expected to become effective Jan. 1.

The board's approval of the rate cut application of TCA, filed early this year, follows closely on the cabinet's decision not to grant an air freight franchise to Canadian Pacific Airlines between Montreal and Vancouver.

The TCA rates approved by the board, an informant said, will be roughly the same for air freight as Canadian Pacific had mentioned in its application as prospective rates.

The tolls generally would be between 25 and 30 cents a ton-mile—that is, for a ton of cargo flown a mile—as compared with the current figure of between 35 and 37 cents a ton-mile.

BIG COLLECTIONS

WINNIPEG (CP) — The city budget for 1953 estimated revenue from parking meters at $140,000. It looks pretty safe. The total for the first 10 months was $121,000. The money goes into the general civic revenues.

MARMORA

Canadian Legion L. A. Consecrates Colors

MARMORA. — New colors of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion were consecrated and remembrance of the fallen of the wars of this century was observed in a most impressive service held in St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, on Sunday evening.

CONDUCTS SERVICE

Rev. K. J. Crawford, B.A., B.D., conducted the service, as pastor of the church and on behalf of the Board of Elders, welcomed the Legion and Auxiliary. The consecration service then followed the singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers", and the National Anthem and was performed by the Rev. K. J. Crawford.

Following their consecration the colors were presented the Auxiliary color party by the two zone commanders.

Former Chaplain, W. J. Cotterell, read the two Scripture lessons and led in the responsive reading of Wisdom 3. The pastor then recited "O Valiant Hearts", which was succeeded by "The Last Post", by Robert Sanderson; the Lament by Pipe Major Harry Anderson and "Reveille", by Robert Sanderson.

SPECIAL MUSIC

The choir then effectively rendered "For All the Saints', in a special anthem setting. For the sermon, the pastor chose as his subject "The Most King", taking as his text, Isaiah 9:6: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace."

His elaboration of these attributes of Christ were followed with rapt attention by the large congregation.

At the conclusion of the service the passage of the new colors through the ranks before the return of the parade to the Legion Hall was piped by Pipe Major Anderson.

At the Hall, refreshments were served by the Auxiliary and various short speeches of commendation and thanks were interposed at a social half hour.

Jimmy Dellne arrived home from Bellleville General Hospital on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rolmans and family, of Belleville, visited Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. Nayler on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hickey spent Sunday afternoon with relatives in Bancroft.

Amounts Will Be Smaller Than Anticipated

TORONTO (CP) — J. Irving Ochkron, president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, has said that reparations Jewish immigrants in Toronto will receive from the German government will be smaller amounts than reports published earlier suggested.

The first report was that about 5,000 Jews here would receive as much as $1,000 each during the next few months as compensation for their sufferings at the hands of the German government of Adolf Hitler.

Payment has been set at the rate of $30 for every month the Jews were deprived of their freedom.

Mr. Ochsaun said in a statement the maximum payment to any one claimant will be $1,000, but not nearly all the 2,000 persons here will receive the maximum.

"Many of them were in prison for nine or 10 months and hence could not possibly receive $1,000 at payments of $30 a month. The number of claimants will be below 2,000. Not all of them will receive the maximum of $1,000 and much of the money is in a frozen account in Germany anyway. I can't imagine many of them going back to that country to collect."

U.S. Made Mistake In Disarming Japs Nixon Declares

Misjudged Soviet Intentions Admits U.S. Vice-President

By RUSSELL BRINES.

TOKYO (AP) — United States vice-president Richard Nixon, in a bid for a rearmed Japan, said today "the United States made a mistake in 1946" when it ordered destruction of the remnants of Japanese military might.

Nixon's unexpected comment on U.S. policy startled, then pleased some 700 Japanese leaders. There was quick praise from Japanese who long have insisted demilitarization was a costly mistake.

"We misjudged the intentions of Soviet leaders" at the end of the last World War II, Nixon told the influential Japan-America Society.

Since then, "the threat from the Communist nations, with the threat centered in Moscow, has prevented the Free World from living in peace.

"It is because we want peace and believe in peace that we have rearmed since 1946, and we believe that Japan and other nations should share the same responsibility.

"We felt disarmament was necessary in 1946. We looked ahead hoping against hope that it would be possible to attain a peaceful world.'

Since that time, the Communist threat has gained in power—wars have begun.

"If we want peace, we must be militarily stronger than the Communist nations."

Civil Defence Display Costs Any City $1,000

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Federal government procedure asking $1,000 from any municipality wanting to show an 11-vehicle civil defence display now touring Canada came under fire Wednesday by Maj. W. F. A. Preston, London civil defence director.

Maj. Preston said London was not given choice as to whether or not it wished to have the display here.

The mobile convoy, showing civil defence methods against unpreparedness, has already visited Montreal, Regina, Calgary, Vancouver, Edmonton, Saskatoon and Winnipeg.

Maj. Preston said it would go to Windsor to see the display next Tuesday and Wednesday. Windsor is the only Ontario city scheduled to have it.

"It has a dim view of the whole thing," said Maj. Preston. "We're all paying for the civil defence. I can't see why municipalities should have to pay $1,000 to have something which would be of great benefit to their organizations."

Fibber and Molly Say Radio Still Good Enough

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Fibber McGee and Molly vow radio is still good enough for them, even though the gap is less than half what it used to be in the pre-television days.

It's well known in the trade that many a sponsor would love to convert the show to TV, but the cost of radio to television if ever a format were made favorable for TV, the story of the bungling Fibber and his practical Molly is TV.

"We'll probably do TV one of these days," promises Fibber, "But we found out on our last trip to Peoria that a lot of people still listen to radio."

When that time comes, Fibber hints that he will not try for any such bashful guest.

"It makes you too hard to watch, unless you're Red Skelton or Abbott and Costello. I hate situation comedies that have something too hard for the belly laughs."

BOAC Orders Five Super-Jets

LONDON (Reuters) — British Overseas Airways Corporation has ordered five super-jetliners for a transatlantic service. They will have the same long-term work capacity as the Boeing Queen Mary—97,000 passengers a year.

The order, an initial one, was announced today by de Havilland, makers of the Comet jet.

The BOAC jetliners will be the Comet Series III, also ordered by Pan American Airways. The planes will carry 38 passengers at cruising speeds of 500 miles an hour (800 km.) over non-stop stages of 2,500 miles.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis: Warm air covering south eastern North America is separated from a much colder air mass, which now dominates the rest of the continent, along a line from Texas to Lake Superior and Southeastern Southland. Since the northern half of this boundary is almost stationary, southern Ontario can expect another mild day on Friday. Skies however will be mainly cloudy both today and Friday as the southwesterly winds are now bringing up moist warm air from the Gulf of Mexico.

A disturbance is beginning to move southeastward and is expected to bring cold air into all of the province Friday night.

NO GOVERNMENT LOANS ON GRAIN STORED ON FARMS

Howe Says Income Will Be $1,404,000,000

OTTAWA (CP)—Prairie farmers can expect no government loans on grain stored on farms because of the "many uncertain factors" Grain was entering export markets "at a pretty fair rate" and the government stocks of farm-stored grain were the best kind of insurance against drought, C. D. Howe said.

The minister entered the throne speech debate to make his detailed statement on the wheat situation—a topic which has cropped up repeatedly in the four-day-old debate.

Two members on the opposition side, Jean Lesage (L—Montmorency-Charlevoix) and E. G. McDonald (Yorkton—Moose Jaw-Assiniboia-Camrose) gave their views on the issue.

SHIP WHEAT TO ASIA

Mr. Fleming suggested Canada should ship more wheat to countries in Asia to strike an "effective and dramatic" blow against communism in that area.

Mr. McCullough said loans on farm-stored grain should be extended immediately as an "expediency." He urged the government to provide permanent storage for 100,000,000 bushels of grains within three years. The largest single grain purchases from farmers to avoid a "cliff" in the world grain market.

Mr. Howe said he has received prairie requests for loans on farm-stored grain but had received other representations "greater in number," opposing such loans.

STEADY HAND NEEDED

The minister, who is in charge of marketing grain, said the situation ensures that the huge stocks-piles of wheat needed a "steady hand." Prices are "certainly not more than critical, as stated by Progressive Conservative Leader Diefenbaker.

Grain exports, including wheat, oats and barley, have risen from last year. But deliveries of grain to farmers in the "seven months higher than in "many previous years," totalling 207,000,000 bushels compared to 180,000,000. By the year's end this figure "will exceed 300,000,000 bushels and could reach 325,000,000."

Mr. Howe said his previous estimate that Prairie grain income would be lower than in 1952 had proved "over on the side of pessimism."

RECORD PAYMENTS

Payments for 1953 deliveries of wheat, oats, barley and flaxseed, participation payments during the year totalled 1952 records, would reach a record $1,404,000,000. Still to come are payments for participation and final participation payments from the wheat board for the 1952 crop. However, in the current year the total farm income in 1953 was forecast at $3,000,000,000

BAD EXAMPLE?

MANCHESTER (Reuters)— Dr. Donald Soper, president of the British Methodist Conference, said today he wishes the Queen would stay away from the races. "I believe she can do more harm than good by encouraging other people to follow her example in this," he said.

'Greatest Faith Ever Known' To Start in Saturday Issue

Starting Saturday The Ontario Intelligencer will bring to its readers the beautiful and moving story of the spread of Christ's words throughout the world in the early years of the Christian era.

"The Greatest Faith Ever Known" started by Fulton Oursler to complete his great three-book series on the Scriptures commenced with "The Greatest Story Ever Told" and followed by "The Greatest Book Ever Written". When he had finished Oursler left a sentence half-finished. His task was taken up by his daughter, April Oursler Armstrong. In her own words Mrs. Armstrong describes how "The Greatest Faith Ever Known" came to be written and the completed state of the book on her father's death:

"The suggestion that I write a book about the acts and letters of the apostles was made to me by my son, John Masefield.

"In the spring of 1947 my wife and I went to Ireland to receive the Poet Laureate of England and at that time we saw Masefield. With him at his lodge not far from Oxford.

He asked me about the radio play of "The Greatest Story Ever Told", and told him of the inspiration I had received from repeated readings of the Scriptures in three-act play on the trial and conviction of Jesus. It was then that he urged me to go on and recount the Acts of the Apostles. He told me that I had a gift, I had in mind for three books, a trilogy on the Scriptures, and that this would be the last. The idea had been mentioned by others, and when people responded to the re-telling of the Old Testament, the second book, on all of course, would be the story of Christianity as reported in the Acts and the Epistles.

"Then", said Mr. Masefield, "you must get an old book called The Voyages of Barnabas written by Paul. It was written by James Swift and published by Longmans Green in 1880, with an introduction by the Bishop of Carlysle. There, my friend, is a book about a traveler at sea, written by a man who really knew the sea. In his own sailing craft he duplicated the journeys of St. Paul. You can't do it unnecessarily helpful."

The prediction of the Poet Laureate was fulfilled. That very night I called the London selling New York booksellers to try to get the book, without success. Eventually they did. Except for the Acts of the Apostles, this volume is the research for the present volume was that recitement of Mr. Masefield's book, Voyages and Shipwreck of St. Paul."

NEVER COMPLETED BOOK.

My father wrote the paragraphs above, intending to begin work on the foreword of The Greatest Faith Ever Known. He never completed the foreword.

He never completed the book.

On the evening of May 21, 1953, he was stricken with a heart attack. Early past midnight, after he had received the last sacrament, I was alone with him at his bedside for a few moments talking. Suddenly he looked at me and smiled. He said, "April, you must finish The Greatest Faith Ever Known. I started that. I would. Six hours later my father was gone.

The morning finally came when I began to try to fulfill that promise. Alone I retrieved the green and orange box in which he always kept his writing. Inside were over 1027 pages of "The Greatest Faith Ever Known," in his handwriting, interrupted in midsentence in Chapter 56.

Alongside, in another strong-box, I found the first typed version of these pages bearing his corrections, marks, and reminders to himself. On shelves outside stood ten tall black notebooks filled with the product of years of research on the lives of Peter and Paul and the early days of Christianity.

Silently I stood by the massive table that served as his desk. It was as he left it. A row of fountain pens stood ready in his hand. A candle stood in an oilwood holder; its flame had long been a family signal that he was not to be disturbed. On the elephant hide was the glass shears. The wooden file trays. The "magic" cube he used to practice sleight of hand. The old blue "Home, Sweet Home" paperweight, and the one with the picture of our front door of our home in Bedford, and the small oilwewood crucifix he had carried home from Jerusalem.

LEARNED FROM FATHER.

Almost all my memories of my father are bound up in that desk. And as I stood there that warm spring morning, my thoughts went back over the years to a thousand other days when I sat at that desk and there working and I stood beside him, learning.

Long before I left high school I had begun to work with my father, an apprentice in the workshop of a master in the field of writing. From him I had caught the excitement of putting words on paper. I absorbed what I could of the practical details of style and construction, of plot, and research, and of writing itself. Most important. But I learned a rarer secret—the devotion that can make form the meanest drudgeries of writing into a joy and a delight.

My father was a relentlessly painstaking craftsman. In his study drafts he rarely used his ideas, feverish to imprison them on paper before they be always said, only after that could the real work begin. For weeks he would revise his manuscripts, paring and carving thoughts and sentences down to the exact words and phrases. As a result his stories lived, vivid, with grace and with love. For my father loved his work.

He loved this book. He had a full schedule and he could easily lessen other obligations. But every morning for nearly a year until his death he spent at five to work on The Greatest Faith Ever Known." His whole being was fired with enthusiasm and excited anticipation at the completion of the last of this trilogy.

It is the book my father most wanted to write. Only God can know why he was not given time to finish it—or why I was left in my unsure hands.

I can only hope that what I have done pleases him.

Stratford Story Of Cheese Sale Denied Here

Charles N. Heath, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Producers, today refuted a Canadian Press story from Stratford which quoted Nelson "Cowan, of Atwood, Perth County, as saying the Canada Cheese Exchange, as stating that cheese producers had sold another 10 million pounds or cheese to Britain.

Mr. Heath said that Mr. Cowan had apparently referred to an earlier sale of five million pounds of 1952 cheese and the reporter had carried the sale of cheese recently announced by the producers to be a second sale of 10 million pounds.

"I don't know where we would get the cheese if another 10 million pounds of cheese were sold to Britain," he said.

Mr. Cowan in his interview at Stratford was quoted as saying that cheese surplus holdings "all across Canada" have dwindled to some 30 million as a result of cheese sales to Britain. He predicted increased cheese prices as result.

W. N. Storms Hit by Diesel, Knocked Off Bridge to River Bottom, Critically Injured

Pushed off the Canadian National Railways bridge crossing the Moira in the north end of the city after being struck by a slow moving diesel, William N. Storms, age of 77 Grier street, was critically injured this morning and was taken to Belleville hospital with multiple skull fractures and other injuries.

Dr. F. R. Ross who attended the injured man said his injuries were "very critical". Mr. Storms was taken to Toronto by Rush's Ambulance late this morning.

Storms, an employee in the car department of the C.N.R. who was on his way to work, was walking the railway bridge when he was struck from behind by the diesel of an eastbound freight which was travelling on the west-bound track. After being struck by the locomotive Storms dropped through the bridge to the flat roof of the river about 20 feet below.

Railway officials stated that the train crewmen had seen the man walking on the bridge while they were still some distance away. A warning was sounded on the diesel horn and when the man failed to move off the tracks the brakes were applied. The train was said to have been moving very slowly when the man was struck.

The eastbound train had been halted on the westbound tracks due to track repairs.

Mr. Storms and his wife husband had been walking the bridge to work for over 40 years but that he usually got a ride.

Rebekah Lodge Sponsors Successful Tea, Bazaar

Reminiscent of autumn's last stand were the colors of the Jacqueline Patterns, Bittersweet and orange and green festoons which decorated the pretty booths yesterday afternoon at the Rebekah's bazaar and afternoon tea, held in the I.O.O.F. lodge rooms, on Front Street.

The various booths, each with its own display, were arranged around the outside of the assembly room, with the centre portion being reserved for tired patrons, and for those who came to renew old acquaintances.

Taxpayers to Pay $228,000 For High Schools' Operation

High schools' operation for the Bay of Quinte District High School Board will cost taxpayers of the municipalities concerned an estimated $228,000 for 1954, according to estimates approved by board members this week.

The above figure includes the municipalities' share of debenture costs, amounting to $18,000.

The city's share of the cost will be an estimated $136,250.40, an increase of just over $9,000 above that of 1953. Thurlow township's share of the net cost will be $41,953, an increase of over $11,000 over that of this year. Tyendinaga's share will be $13,-982.39 a drop of almost $600 from this year, and Ameliasburg will be required to raise $14,252, an increase of slightly over $500.

Distribution of the cost is based on assessment. Belleville being required to pay 69.96 per cent; Thurlow 16.71 per cent; Tyendinaga 5.39 per cent and Ameliasburg 6.94 per cent of the total. Thurlow township's share increase in the amount to be paid is the result of increased assessment following re-assessment of the township.

Operation of high schools will cost the city $146,916; Thurlow $32,640; Tyendinaga $11,319 and Ameliasburg $13,152. Total net costs to the municipalities for current operation is estimated at $210,000, the balance of $18,000 being made up by debenture costs.

Total estimated expenditure for high school operation for next year is set at $448,000, an increase of $76,479 over this year's budget of $371,521. From this figure is taken $238,000 which is the estimated revenue for the year, included in this amount is $24,-300, surplus from 1953. Revenue for the year is made up of various grants from the department, payments from the county and other receipts.

Although the new high school on College Street is not yet built, it is expected to be in operation some time next autumn. Four-twelfths of the estimated cost of operating the school for the year is included in the estimates.

Laminated Bats More Durable Than Solid Wood

NEW YORK (AP) — When the rules committee of professional baseball voted to permit the use of laminated bats during the 1954 season, it was the first big change in the specifications for the baseball bat since the first rule was passed in 1858. And it left a lot of fans wondering just what is a laminated bat and what effect it will have on baseball players.

Instead of being made from a solid piece of ash wood, a laminated bat is composed of four strips of ash and one of hickory glued together under pressure and then turned and sanded into shape like any other bat. That's about all it gets the same—from the strips, or laminates.

It's more durable than solid wood, a bit more resilient and capable of absorbing shocks, usually better balanced and has a better "feel."

But so far as producing baseballs, the only difference will be that a hitter isn't as likely to break a favorite bat and have one he is not quite as fond of take its place. Even so, some pitchers have begun to grow that the manufacturers do everything to help the hitters and nothing for the hurlers.

Ice Fantasy Has Big Crowd For Arena Show Wednesday

Roy Lisogar's Canadian Ice Fantasy of '54 which played before an estimated crowd of 1,800 in the Memorial Arena last night presented a somewhat disappointing performance. With the exception of two or three acts in the second half, the entire show lacked the polish and skill generally associated with ice-skating shows. Most of the costumes also appeared in need of cleaning.

Some of the comedy acts interjected at various intervals throughout the performance afforded refreshing interludes to the somewhat featureless skating of a number of leading skaters. Madame and Monsieur Dubois (not recognized on the program by any other name) gave an entertaining exhibition of trick skating. Johnny Yano and the man from Australia, Neville Murry, were both good in comedy routines.

Joyce McFarlane, star of the "Maidens from Mars" sequence displayed some of the finest free skating of the evening. Yvonne Sreders, advertised as the star skater of the show, was also good.

The story of "Goldilocks and the Three Bears" portrayed by Fran Shirley, Jerry West, Johnny Lacroix, Johnny Yano and Lorris Perkins, deviated from the original story considerably by introducing a barrage or girls as butterflies in Goldilocks' dress. The costumes in this sequence were colorful but little skating was done to display them.

Approximately 15 feet above the ice surface on a trapeze, The Flying Wendts, advertised as trapeze performers from the motion picture "The Greatest Show on Earth", took off their skates for a display on the bar. They climaxed their performance with "The Suicide Spin." The act consisted of the young lady hanging by her teeth with the strap clenched in the teeth of her partner. He hung by his heels from the trapeze as she spun in rapid circles beneath his head.

The Ice Fantasy concluded an exhibition of free skating by the entire cast.—J.B.

WHO ARE OUR ASSOCIATES?

"The people who are in the same type of occupation as the one we choose are usually the people with whom we will associate on a social and personal basis."

That statement is from an article by E. C. Hulsander, originally published in the University of Michigan School of Education Bulletin and reprinted in "The School Guidance Worker" published monthly by the Ontario College of Education.

The thought behind that statement is easy to discern. Students are being told that, when they select their occupation, they also select their leisure-time companions.

Reactions to that statement may differ. Perhaps your first thought is a violent rejection of the statement. If it is, is this rejection not founded more on distaste for the existence of such a situation than it is on a careful judgment, after mature consideration, of the statement's accuracy or inaccuracy?

For, although each individual can immediately offer examples in his own experience of exceptions to such a rule, it is still, by and large, a true statement.

We all know how the doctors, the teachers, the clergymen, the engineers and the lawyers of any community tend to flock together during their leisure hours. Even if this association was not with another, an inter-mingling of these groups, it might still be argued that they were in occupations in the same type. But, in actual fact, there is very often a sharp cleavage between these different professional groups.

What is true of the professions is also true in the business world. Manufacturers find it easy to associate with other manufacturers than they do with grocers and the haberdasher is unlikely to eagerly thrust his way into a group of women's wear salesmen.

Employed groups, too, tend to form their little cliques. The sailor is not generally an associate of the salesman, nor does the bricklayer cling to the bricklayer.

None of this, of course, is as it should be. Fortunately we have clubs and lodges and churches to break up this division into occupational groups. Holidays shatter barriers.

All these barrier-breaking influences are needed, for the men and women of every occupational group—with one exception. That one exception is provided by newspapermen. The fact that journalist clings to journalist as staunchly as actor to actor (or actress) is, of course, no evidence that newspapermen are provided by some plague of occupational association. Perish the thought! Rather obviously, the journalist is a true cosmopolite, with a catholic taste in people and pleasures, and if he consorts chiefly with other newspapermen it is because people of other occupations are blind to his unique distinction in being under no inner compulsion to seek his own kind.

Or, at least, that's our story.

CHARGE MUST BE INVESTIGATED

Clarence Gillis, C.C.F. member for Cape Breton, has charged that the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation has sabotaged eastern Canada's steel and coal industry.

Mr. Gillis says that the operations of the company should be investigated.

On that point, at least, every thoughtful Canadian will agree.

The charges by Mr. Gillis are much too serious to be shrugged off as part of the peculiar type of outlook on economic questions which could be expected from a Socialist.

Either his charges are untrue or they are true. If they are untrue, the company deserves to be completely vindicated. If they are true, it is essential that the Federal Government take appropriate action.

Mr. Gillis maintains that Canada has come under the control of United States financiers who, instead of attempting to develop coal mined in Cape Breton, are pushing sales of Kentucky coal.

Now such a procedure, however harmful it might be to the coal industry of Nova Scotia, might be considered legitimate tactics on the part of a private company which had never sought government assistance.

But Mr. Gillis says Dosco received $4,000,000 a year from the Federal Government in interventions and the company has also received a $7,500,000 loan from the government. Surely that gives the government a type of "vested interest" which it cannot ignore.

And, in any event a sixth of Nova Scotia's population depends on the firm for its livelihood.

Obviously such charges as Mr. Gillis has made are no laughing matter to Nova Scotia, nor to Canada as a whole.

WHAT MAKES AN INTELLECTUAL?

The average Englishman is said to read three times as many books as the average American.

That fact is frequently cited as proving concern about the educational system of the U.S.

It is said that while Americans have more leisure and more education, they read less before, there is little evidence of an increase in intellectual interests.

This begs the question—are leisure and education conducive to intellectualism?

A man needs some leisure and some formal education before he can indulge in intellectual pursuits — but an excess of either is perhaps as likely to turn him into a pleasure-seeker as into a member of the intelligentsia.

THE PUT-OFF LETTER

The letter which to write
I meant
A single three-cent stamp had been sent.
But now, too late
Would be that simple cheery letter of mine.
Because that good old friend of mine
No more could wait.

I needed but the time to think.
A sheet of paper, pen and ink.
But not somehow . . .

I put it off an hour to gain.
(An old escape) and 'twould be vain
To write it now.

That letter which you mean to send,
Sit down today and get it penned;
No longer wait.
Don't let the precious "now" abate.
Tomorrow, you may learn, as I.
May be too late.

Owing to the unusually warm, freeze-up commercial fishermen have been caught with their nets still in the bay waters and they are loath to leave. The thickness of the ice prevents boats reaching the spots where the nets are. A man with a soft spell of weather comes along the fishermen stand to lose considerable money. The government nets placed in the channel from the bay to catch fish for spawning purposes are also frozen in the ice.

TODAY'S TALK

BOOKS AND THE QUIET LIFE

What a pronounced segment of life people live in books—people of stirring a love of books! Real people live in books—people of all sorts and from every quarter of the earth. They live in these books of theirs, many of them after certain varieties have long gone. A pattern of life is spread out in books.

There are books for every mood and taste—books to cheer and inspire, books to instruct and entertain. I feel alone in crowds of people, but not in crowds of books. In my library of thousands of books I never feel alone. From my shelves the great of this earth look out at me in a welcoming gaze.

And what a democratic sight is a room full of books! The greatest fools at home with the humblest. They all live side by side in their colorful bindings. I have arranged many of my books by subject. For example, all my nature books are in one place, for I have an idea that they like to be among their kind. Yet they do not object if they are placed otherwise, for books have no jealousies, no selfish pride. They will exist not one another when placed by others.

All of books is a great library. It is the quiet life with books. I am really companionable. I have a small row of brief books that are big in thoughts, near at hand, for they are so handy to slip into my pocket when I go on a journey, or when I feel a little lost and want to find my way back to myself. I like to run over my shelves and touch these books of mine with my fingers, in a sort of affectionate greeting. It makes me feel akin to them.

I have been drawn to first editions, for they embody so much of the dreams and the hopes, a poverty of the author. My first edition of Gissing's first book was written in a London cellar, when he was so poor that he had a race with hunger. My first edition of Stephen Crane's first book was in a yellow wrapper under the name of Johnston Smith. None bought it at its published price of but 25 cents! Today it is locked up as a classic.

In the wonderful world of books we may find peace, hope, and companionship. I once read of a lover of books who had it in his will that the book shelves of his library should be his covering in his grave.

How We Got Time Units

(Stratford Beacon-Herald).

Answering the question, "Why are days divided into 24 hours, and hours into 60 minutes?" the science editor of Unesco features says that these factors were decided days into hours and hours into minutes, they contented themselves with simply dividing the lods at sunrise, morning, midday, afternoon, sunset, evening and night-time. These obviously lacked the precision required by society as life became more complex and a more elaborate system had to be developed.

It apparently owes the concept of hours and minutes to the Chaldeans. It is certain, at least, that comparable time intervals were well established eight centuries before Christ, and that they were subsequently adopted by the Jews, the Greeks and the Romans.

The Babylonians divided the day into twelve equal parts, each part being known as a "gesh." Each Kasgu therefore equalled two modern hours. The division of the day into twelve parts resulted apparently from the fact that the Chaldeans based their arithmetic on a sexagesimal system (with sixty as the base) and not on the decimal system (with a base of ten). The number 12 is half of sixty, is sixty, has various practical advantages. It is easy to see, then, that it is divisible by several small whole numbers — by 2 and by 3 and by Ten, on the other hand is only divisible by 2 and 5.

Even at the present time, there are many who urge us to throw overboard the 24-hour day in favor of decimal system, based on the number ten. Others, for various reasons or conservatism which causes them to shudder, would adopt the twelve-hour day, which, descended directly from the ancient 12 Kasgu day. Both the Chinese and the people saw the advantage of a day which could be conveniently divided into 2, 3, 4 or 6 equal parts. In the case of the twelve-hour day, we could not, for example, divide the twenty accepted conception of a day into more than three equal parts devoted, respectively, to work, play and sleep and rest.

During the French Revolution in 1789, the Convention approved the calendar under the day into ten hours and the hour into one hundred minutes. This calendar survived for only thirteen years, after which the ancient usage was re-established.

Neutrality Over-Done

(Ottawa Journal)

"There are," notes the Lethbridge Herald in a recent editorial pbic resignation, "two sides to every story, and the story of winter is no exception.

Most of us like it and others hate it. As far as we are concerned we're neutral. There are some things about that we like, other things we dislike."

That's a pretty complaisance pretty far. A spirit of benevolent neutrality can be over-done. Can we not, for instance, have pumpkin spinach, strawberry shortcake, or doughnuts on the river? Are they this matter of winter, one hates it—so to speak. The Lethbridge editor may sit on the fence comfortably as we have our doubts about that.

Confronted by a nipping 30-below zero he may take the point that it's hard on the coal bin but there will be solid ice for skating on the pond; on the one hand there is the risk of frozen ears but on the other hand this should be good for next year's crops.

Perhaps our Lethbridge friend balances his views delicately for and against, weighs the against that, for and against, and is able that either he denounces the weather for its severity or lauds the plainsman and prays for a moderating influence or he throws off his topcoat and embarks gaily on his office through the frigidity, exhilarating to the inhabitants of less hardy humans. He likes the weather, in fact.

There is, as we have said, too much of this neutrality nowadays. We are all inclined to take sides in things we hate, or mad often enough to do something about it. Life would come to take for granted — the sunshine, the down fire and brimstone on the head of a political opponent, but we say that no good would be done is doing his best and after all there is room for all kinds of people, whether it's a general election or the side of a city hall or the length of a women's skirts we tend to throw backwards to see the other fellow's point of view.

There can be too much of that kind of thing, too much indecision and circumlocution, too much call for a spade a broad-bladed digging tool, too much soft and fuzzy thinking.

How Do Humans Grow Up, Old?

(Gait Evening Reporter).

How does the normal human being grow up and grow old? A study of top flight scientists in Denver, Col., have been quietly seeking the chain of answers to this complex question over more than two decades. Some 160 citizens, mostly grandfathers, are cooperating as guinea pigs.

The study centers on a note scribbled in the margin of his textbook in 1921, "Why?" asked Dr. Alfred H. Washburn, now directory of the Child Research Council of Denver, "hasn't medicine been more concerned with the problem of understanding the whole life cycle of a human being during healthy growth?"

It is not indeed! There is a vast pile of material information on the anatomy, physiology, psychology, behavior and diseases of the human system, but never has anything been done to study all of the life cycle of one human being from conception through a gangrene pen or a hog or a laboratory test tube and adapt to varying environmental conditions," said Dr. Washburn, "than we do about the life cycle of a dairy cow. Yet we oppose the kind of adult he is."

In 1930 a number of scientists and public spirited citizens of Denver undertook to answer Dr. Washburn's question and invited him to assemble a group of scientists to do the job.

"Today, the council, which is not the scene of the great test diseases, is in full operation. The first report of the 20 years' careful observation is 32 years of age, and the youngest was born last month. Occasionally we publish a report on a subject; a family moves away, a child is born, or a child dies, and it takes a distant job.

"The council reports for regular examination, a procedure which sometimes fills a day. Everything is measured, weighed and analyzed, physically, psychologically, psychologically.

"I borrow a portable falls off sharply, an expert nutritionist looks into the why of that change. Perhaps, after physical tests give a negative response, a Rorschach test, or ink blot test, or apperception test will turn up a psychological factor in the situation.

"We have to realize," says Dr. Washburn, "that most of our children we are now studying will probably live to see 100 per cent efficient. Other investigators will complete the observations that we begin and will be able to report what we have sown.

"Dr. Washburn is able to report at least one fact of more than passing interest: By the time a girl has reached the age of her growth is substantially complete. A boy, however, reaches the same physical maturity until the age of 18.

Personal Health Talks

HERE IS A GOOD HEART TONIC

Dr. Brady

Before we begin wrangling about heart tonics — does anyone as though the best suggestions offer you poor souls arouse the greatest enthusiasm mostly on the part of the medical profession — first let us state stipulate that a tonic is a remedy which increases or restores energy, efficient function or vigor.

This is, I think, a fair composite of the definitions given by Webster, Stedman, Dorland. Now when it comes to understanding stimulant from tonic, these authorities are not precise. But let us proceed on the assumption that a stimulant excites temporary activity — such as whipping a tired horse, whereas a tonic restores flagging strength or renews function for a considerable period of time—such as a good (or bad) break for the physical worker, a good (or bad) oxygen on the roof for the white collar or "executive" type or the optimal daily ration of vitamin D for growing children.

That's it. Simple, eh! It is only yet there is a lot more to it in my opinion. Preparations of digitalis or strychnine drugs purporting to be heart tonics, heart stimulants, perhaps, but that is the second half of the twentieth, century and we ought to put aside such fancies and apply newer knowledge of physiology and therapeutics to the treatment of heart trouble.

I am well aware that most good physicians have given up "digitalized" (that is, beneficial) in present-day British banking and exchange. When you step ashore in Great Britain in these times, you must not have in your possession any more than ten pounds of British money. You can pack in a backload of Canadian money, but you cannot go to a Liverpool bank to change a Canadian $100 bill, you are really put through the wringer. Forms are necessary, and passport numbers or other information of a "vital" character. Till finally you get to the bank clerk: "Why, I thought Mr. Churchill was eager to get dollars. Well, here are some dollars — what's the hold-up and why all the questions?" And usually the bank clerk, being an intelligent and reasonable person, replies: "Don't blame us; these are the regulations we have to follow." And so the process of the cheque drawn in good language, but the transaction simplicity itself.

Truly, it's a strange world!

Bank Tactics In Liverpool

(Halifax Chronicle-Herald)

Over in Liverpool, England, a chosen customer in what looks like good language or gobbledygook has been honored by a bank clerk receiving credited to the loose-leaf book. The cheque was made out to "NWEGLLGCHRESLI".

The accountant of the gas board deducted that the cryptogram consisted of a collection of the initial letters of North Western Gas Board, Liverpool Group Headquarters, 24 Lord House, Bold Street, Liverpool One.

This will interest people who have had to do business in the Old Country, say, after years of having their experiences with

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Just to needle the needle trades, let us consider the umbrella. How much handier an umbrella is than a raincoat, slicker or other device for fending off the inclemencies of the weather! The umbrella is the only one that does not impose direct contact between the lather and the rain. We mean bumbershoot, brolly, the great big black or plaid contraption that is a shelter, its ribs sticking out like those of an ancient horse, its handle a fine curved piece of horn or bamboo which a man can erect like a sanguine cave in the head, so that he is protected not only on the head and shoulders but right down his legs. In this it transcends cuffs are safe, unless he mine, for he walks and hicks the wet up his ankles with his heels. In any case, the umbrella is hardly at all, a few steps to the garage, then a few steps to the parking lot to job, with perhaps a walk of half a block to lunch and back, a raincoat is a sort of handler mechanism than an umbrella. A raincoat is two-purpose. You can wear it in crowds days as well as on wet. It can be carried over the arm. It is difficult to overlook or forget. You can hang your hat on the peg at home or at the office. You can't do that with your cover. It does not protect the head or hat. It soon soaks up moisture and becomes a real wearer in clammy dampness. The umbrella is not at all good always exposed by it to the "rain" ment in which to operate in a motor car, street car or bus after it is wet. It is a horrible garment in dribbles.

We also does an umbrella; for you can make it dribble off to one side and to somebody else's disadvantage. What you can't do with an umbrella, at least-you are dry, is to make it dribble off to one side. The umbrella is that it is a one-purpose article. It is only for wet. It does not keep the wind off in a dry day. And so fickle is the weather, that the umbrella is usually at home or at the office when it is needed at the other place. But most often it is neither at the lost and found office of street car or bus company, or else at the home or office of somebody else.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

BLINDNESS

Before me as I write lies a page of Braille—the type of raised letters used by the blind. I run my fingers over these sterecutped sheets. They mean nothing to me. I have two good eyes. I pause and thank God for blessings which are unobserved.

Blindness is a terrible affliction, yet it has always been my observation that the blind themselves do not regard it with nearly so much horror as we do. I think of the cheerful blind people I know, and they have a wonderful spirit. You and I feel that a blind sight seems to be taken away, certainly three-quarters of our lives would be gone. But many of the blind do not feel this way. They have cultivated compensations. They have learned to use the unequally sacred as a handicap.

Then blindness, no matter how brave the blind person may be, is terrible to endure. No blindness is more surprising; these are spiritually blind. There are people who go daily through life and never think of God and what He might mean to their children.

No blindness is dreadful — but no blindness is so dreadful as this kind of blindness.

Tweed Residents Turn Down Beverage Rooms in Village For Second Time in Five Years

TWEED (Special) — For the second time in five years residents of this village in a beverage room vote turned down men's beverage room; for this Hastings county centre.

Likewise defeated in yesterday's close vote were women's beverage rooms and a dining room liquor licence. All questions failed by a few percentage points of obtaining the required 60 percent vote.

In the 1948 vote approval was given for a liquor store and warehouse but the question of a men's beverage room was defeated by the slimmest of margins. At that time there were 494 "yes" votes as against 323 "no" for a percentage of 59.7.

Yesterday's vote saw were lose a bit of ground in their campaign to have a men's beverage room in Tweed. The vote was 509 yes and 404 no, for a percentage of 55.7. The question on women's beverage rooms was 498 "yes" votes and 418 "no", or a percentage of 54.3. The vote on the dining room liquor licence was 54.5 of the voters approving. The vote was 536 yes and 370 no.

Wednesday's vote at Tweed was asked by E. J. Courtyes, proprietor of the Tweedsider hotel.

An intensive campaign was carried on by supporters both for and against beverage rooms with the drys putting a special effort into the campaign.

Yesterday's result at the polls was not known definitely until after midnight, the delay said to be caused when officials at No. 1 disagreed on one question as whether certain ballots were spoiled.

BCI Teachers And Caretakers Want Higher Pay

Teachers and caretakers at the Belleville Collegiate will ask for wage boosts for next year, according to members of the Bay of Quinte High School Area Board.

The request, asking for increase in maximum and minimum salaries has been placed before the board which has named a committee to consider the matter and report back to the board. It is understood the request calls for an increase in salary for all teaching staff members and for custodians.

Board members will choose a name at their December meeting for the new 32-roomed high school to be constructed on College St.

Organization of the school setup has already commenced and the department of education and local board members had decided to operate separate departments in both the new school and the present collegiate.

Department grants will be paid for agricultural classes at both schools, with departments in each school to work closely together although they will be under separate direction.

In fact all departments in the new school with the exception of the guidance department will be under joint management. Mr. James Musgrove will have overall supervision of guidance at both schools, it was stated.

C. E. COLEMAN, employed in the Bell Telephone Company's plant department at Belleville, this month marks the completion of 30 years of service with Bell.

Mrs. C. Saragar was in charge of the special devotions and the musical arrangements. Mrs. Collins gave the Bible reading and Mrs. Robert Ellis led in prayer.

GUEST SOLOISTS

The guest soloists were, Mrs. Warren and Mrs. Morrow, who sang beautifully "Ave Maria" and later as a duet. They were greatly enjoyed.

Mrs. Beaver's topic, taken from the study book was "Who Is Your Neighbour?". The new way of living along with new Canadians from many distant lands was discussed at length. A new note was added by discussions from members. It was decided a warm and sympathetic stand must be taken and also exertion be made to be more friendly to the stranger within the gate.

BUSINESS MEETING

Mrs. Weir again took the chair and conducted the business meeting. Also, she read a short article entitled "The Aspect," on "Scottish Links With the Royal Family."

Visits were recorded. The missionary for whom the W.M.S. prays this month is Mrs. Neil Anderson, of British Guiana.

Bridge St. United Church W. A. Bazaar, Tea, Most Attractive

Tall evergreens adorned the spacious Sunday School room in Bridge Street United Church, yesterday afternoon, while the windows, with their glistening branches of pine, reminiscent touches of Chinese pink, green and silver, added their Christmas message in a most lovely manner. This was the annual bazaar and afternoon tea held under the sponsorship of the Woman's Association of the church.

Receiving at the door were, the Reverend Miriam Collins, assistant pastor of the church; Mrs. Duncan McTavish, and Mrs. Harvey Wray, president of the W. A. who welcomed the guests with a gracious smile and a friendly handclasp.

LOVELY CENTREPIECES

The tables were most pleasingly and most appropriately appointed with two long tea tables, each of pine, placed north side, backed by tall, seven-branch candelabra, and stained glass windows through whose mauve-lined, x-grape-adorned panes the afternoon light was filtered. The snowy, cut-work cloths were centred with posy vases of lovely pieces of driftwood from whose branches hung tiny animals, insects, and massive florets emerging from cocoons. Also on the eagles were tri-branch silver candelabra holding tall, ivory tapers, flanked by two more delicate guest tablets, each with its lily-of-the-valley and fern filled tiny spring of pine needles embellished with real flowers, and little gleaming globes or bells in gold, crimson or silver, bearing the name of a guest.

Those who invited the guests to the tea table were, convener, Mrs. P. McGuire; Mrs. E. Fairman and Mrs. Ross Gordon who also presided at the silver services included: Mrs. H. Acker-man, Mrs. A. E. Clare; Mrs. J. Marsh and Mrs. C. Hyde; Mrs. F. Dennis and Mrs. W. Fisher; Mrs. Northcott and Mrs. R. Morden.

THOSE WHO SERVED

In charge of those who served the dainty sandwiches and delicious cups of tea, and one-bite cakes, were: Mrs. Don Williams and Miss Lyla Dack. Those who served were, Mesdames Gordon Anderson, C. E. Meyers, C. Chaplin, B. Crook, B. Robbins, R. D. Arnott, R. Edwards, D. La France, T. Colden, Tamblyn, H. Fuke, Hoard, D. Greer, J. Dennison, D. Hall, L. Reid, A. McKinney, E. Lahey, A. Lazier, T. Richman, Clare, R. Kostashuck, V. White, R. Eastman, J. W. Flatt and Miss Norma Reid.

Replenishing tea pots, Mrs. W. Robbins and Mrs. E. Gordon; Mrs. V. Grestrix and Mrs. Mary Coun-sell, Mrs. Wise, while Mrs. Mrs. Tice were in charge of the tea making, and Mrs. D. Stanton, Mrs. T. Linscott, Mrs. R. B. Bateman, Mrs. Tice and Mrs. Lennox Smith, Mrs. W. Robbins and Mrs. Leslie were arranging plates.

Mrs. Bellamy received the tea room tickets.

ATTRACTIVE BOOTHS

The attractive booths of merchandise were arranged along the south wall, and in the side rooms, while an unusual and eye-catching booth was that of the country store holding a spot-light on the platform. Here, one, at a moment's notice, was whisked back to the gay nineties for a time. Bustling attendants donned one of the song, "A Bicycle Built for Two," with their black silk aprons, high, stiff collars and neckties, their large ostrich-trimmed black velvet hats and their poke bonnets tied beneath voracious chins. Add to this the long, white, embroidered aprons and the picture of the days with their casual hours—that are no more; when life was centred around the fireside and the old parlor organ, made for a feeling of nostalgia. But, whilst the picture was one of much charm, and most pleasing.

Here were hampers of vegetables, packed ready for supply, bags of onions, Hubbard squashes, potatoes, and sheaves of wheat and corn, all of which added the rustic touch. For sale on the counter were many tempting jars of jelly, relishes, pickles, chili sauce, canned pears, peaches, raspberries, cherries, canned tomatoes, corn relish, beet pickles, homemade mince meat, fresh eggs, a whole cheese, and sitting back in the corner, a large cider which bore the inscription, "3 cents a glass." On the shelves were also jars of salad dressing, and relishes.

Shops in charge were, Mrs. W. Holmes, Mrs. H. Hyde, Mrs. I. Schryver, Mrs. B. Leslie, Mrs. N. Mitchell,—Mrs. W. Holmes and Mrs. J. Kuntze.

FINE HOME COOKING.

The homecooking booth was thronged both with fine samples of the cooking and with the art, as those seeking purchases. There were chocolate squares; nice-sized cookies with scalloped edges, light golden in color—like mother used to make, chocolate cakes with floral almonds, apple pies, angel cake, fruit jelly, taffy tarts, vegetable salads, lemon tarts, and lattery tarts, lemon pies, date bread, tea biscuits, and a host of other delectable foods. Convening this booth were Mrs. McBurney and Mrs. J. Little, assisted by Mrs. H. Parker, Mrs. W. Osmond, Mrs. Fetterley, Mrs. C. Massey, and Mrs. Hamilton.

The invitine Mission Clrice had as its theme, the artistic animals, elephants, dogs, cats, donkeys, and clowns, while the half-moon decorated booth had balloons of blue, red, yellow, and other attractive hues. Mrs. Morden was convener, with Mrs. J. Dunlop and Mrs. Mitchell assisting.

The Explorers Group had charge of the post office, with packages from all over the world, each bearing some one's name. Mrs. Fred Ellis and Mrs. Marshall were the smiling postmistresses.

TASTY CANDIES

The candy booth with its pretty decorations was in charge of Mrs. E. Denyes, Mrs. F. Pringle as convener, Mrs. Bert Hall and Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Hurlbut, Mrs. W. A. Campbell, Mrs. Boyce, Mrs. Douglas, Mrs. Hoard, and Mrs. Cook. There were boxes, and all manner of candies, such as fudge, penuche fudge, maple creams, some with nut tops, and some having nuts in the centre, and delicious candy canes, all bespeaking the joy of Christmas, which is near at hand.

The children's wear, as usual, had a splendid showing of children's needs, knit sweaters in various shades, caps, mitts, pixie, wine, and green, little socks and mitts, baby dresses and tiny jackets, all beautifully made and waiting by the little face to grace them all. Mrs. C. Chapman, Mrs. Madden, Mrs. Montgomery, Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Dennis, Mrs. W. H. Burley, Mrs. H. Allan, Mrs. W. Brown, Mrs. S. Crook and Mrs. Garnett had a fine line-up arranging and making change.

The hobby craft, in charge of Mrs. C. Scott, Mrs. Parrott, Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Mrs. Smith, was also most attractive with its tiny African violets in several shades, and beautiful wild flowers and weeds which make winter months less lonely with their cheering colors. Other articles were also shown, all deserving of appreciation in their workmanship.

CHRISTMAS GIFT MECCA

The apron booth like a gift flower garden was the mecca for Christmas gift buyers as well as for everyday needs. There were aprons in prints, in organdy, and in factory cotton, some plain with contrasting trim, others in colors and some were in half styles and all over denim, while others were for both mother and daughter, all nicely made and durable breadcloth as well as some in fancy materials for the afternoon tea. Convening this booth were Mrs. Selden, Mrs. Dallas, Mrs. Moon, Mrs. Burgoyne, Mrs. A. Clare, Mrs. F. Vaughan, Mrs.

Like all white elephant tables with their multitudinous array of oddments, which were seeking bidders, the English china table, that convened by Miss Solman and Mrs. Kuntze had all sorts of knick-knacks, pictures, dollies, costume jewellery, book-ends, vases, bead necklaces and bracelets, and tea cosies, candle holders, books, and many others. Those assisting here were Mrs. D. Grills, Mrs. V. White, Mrs. Currie, Mrs. C. Burr, Mrs. J. Wood, Mrs. A. Gilmer, Mrs. P. Meredith, Mrs. C. Miller, Mrs.-W. Fluke, Mrs. A. Mitchell,—Mrs. W. Holmes, Mrs. Vermilyea, Mrs. J. Rollins and Mrs. R. Morden, Mrs. E. Salisbury and Mrs. R. Hibberd.

A most delightful bazaar and charming tea, bringing acclaim to all those whose time and talents were so willingly given, bringing in a most successful conclusion.

The bazaar was officially opened by the pastor of the church, the Rev. Duncan McTavish.

'Camp Hyanto' Topic At Christ Church C. C.

Archdeacon the Venerable J. H. Creegan was guest speaker at Monday's meeting of the Contact Club, Christ Church. His subject was "Camp Hyanto", which is owned by the Diocese of Ontario, and is a summer school where children and young people from all the parishes in the diocese may enjoy a week's holiday in happy surroundings.

Camp Hyanto was founded in 1946 in Lyndhurst, north of Kingston. Its name,"Hyanto" meaning "Sit in the shade beneath the pines sleeps well" is aptly chosen as there are many beautiful pines on the property and the program is so designed that by bedtime even the most lively camper has little trouble sleeping.

PROVIDED BEGINNING

In the beginning the camp was composed solely of tents, had no running water and little convenience. However, steady progress has been made, each year new improvements have been added and at present there are six large sleeping cabins, nurse's quarters, office accommodation for a large number of tents and running water in the washrooms and kitchen. Sixty children and fifteen adults comprise a average camp and in 1953 there were eight camps during the season, including a clergy camp and an A.Y.P.A. camp, five junior camps and a chorister's camp.

There are two chaplains at each camp, a camp mother, a swimming instructor and qualified counsellors. The program is varied and includes religious instruction, handicraft, swimmigg and fun of all kinds. Meals are bountiful and well-balanced. The campers attend services at St. Luke's Church, Lyndhurst, and during the week the isters' camp provided the music.

FEES FOR COMFORT

The fee for each camper provides only for their care and improvement. In addition to the camp are made through generous donations of interested friends. The camp is accredited his talk by saying that much loving work goes into the camp, practically all help is voluntary, and campers find that religion plays a large and definite part in heeds a happy time.

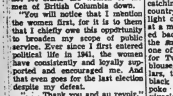
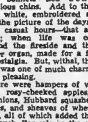
Senator Hodges Bids Farewell To Paper Work

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia's newly-appointed senator, Mrs. Nancy Hodges, has written her 2,350th and final column—"for the time being at least"—in the Victoria Daily Times.

The former speaker of the British Columbia legislature started column "One Woman's Day" Oct. 5, 1951, and refer to that had a long and distinguished career as a newspaper woman.





"After being so long in the provincial sphere of public affairs, she wrote, "to find oneself suddenly elevated to the national scene, causes one much of heart-searching. It inspires a feeling of humility. . . and is a challenge. I only hope I shall be able to rise to that challenge and that I shall not let either the women or the men of British Columbia down.

"You will notice that I mention the women first, for it is to them that I chiefly owe this opportunity to broaden the field of public service. Ever since I first entered politics, in 1941, the women have consistently and loyally supported and encouraged me. And that even goes for the last election despite my defeat.

". . . Thank you and au revoir."

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

HOW TO SIGN CHRISTMAS CARDS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a widow, and I live in a large apartment house. The two years ago this house changed from being rental to co-operative, and during the negotiations there were some meetings of the tenants and we got to know one another. Last Christmas I received quite a few cards from other tenants. Most of the married women signed their cards "Mary and John Robinson" or "John and Mary Jones," etc., but a few signed "Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson." Several widows sent me cards signed (for example) "Mary Allen," and one signed "Mrs. John Graham."

I had always signed my Christmas cards to the tenants I know "Mrs. John Clark." Before I send them my cards this year I thought I'd better find out if my form of signature is correct. Perhaps I'd better add that these tenants and I don't use first names for one another.)—Widow.

You should never sign your Christmas cards with your formal name, "Mrs. John Clark" . . . and this is true no matter how little you know the person to whom you are sending the card. Your correct signature is your informal name . . .

Mary Clark, or if you prefer, Mary Davis Clark. Like this: Greetings to you for a Happy Christmas

Mary Clark

BE WARY OF ASKING FOR THE RECIPE!

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

"A" says that it is quite correct to tell the hostess how very much you enjoy a certain food she is serving, but that it is not correct to ask her for the recipe. "B" says that it is not only correct to tell her how much you enjoy the particular dish, but that it is flattering to ask for the recipe. Who is right about this?—A and B.

Words of approval and praise of her food are a joy to a hostess. But while some hostesses are pleased and flattered when a guest asks for the recipe, others resent sharing the recipe yet find it difficult to refuse. So, unless we are absolutely sure about the recipe-inclination of the hostess we should watch our step about making this request.

BEST MAN AND USHERS DO NOT STAND IN RECEIVING-LINE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Thank you for your answer in your column yesterday to my questions as to the correct formation or the receiving-line at my wedding reception. But in your reply you did not mention the best man and the ushers. Shouldn't they too stand in the receiving-line? —Kate M.

No. . . no best man or ushers in the receiving-line. The best man stands within speaking distance," so that the bridegroom can summon him to do any service he has in mind. And the ushers act more or less co-hosts, escorting or directing the guests to the receiving-line, directing the guests to the room in which the refreshments are being served introducing guests who seem to be stranded to relatives or intimate friends of the bride or bridegroom, and otherwise making themselves graciously useful.

GROMYKO AT MOVIE

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Andrei Gromyko, Soviet deputy foreign minister, Tuesday night attended a private showing of the Coronation movie "A Queen is Crowned" at the British embassy. The show, given by ambassador Sir William Hayter, was followed by a champagne party. Most of the leading figures in the diplomatic colony attended.

Want To Make A White Fruit Cake This Year?

By Mary Moore

If you want to know what's going to be cooking in plenty of Canadian kitchens this month take a look at the letters on my desk.

There's an epidemic of Christmas cake-itis spread over the country. I'm infected too. The kitchen floor is what terms us in spots though—red too—but it was from me walking on a cherry.

Last week I gave you a medium-dark fruit cake recipe (November 13). This week I have a recipe for an elegant white fruit cake that you should make now, for if it is stored in a cold place for a month it slices in lovely neat sharp fingers that do not crumble or break.

SUPERIOR WHITE FRUIT CAKE

Batter—3-4 cup each butter and shortening (both should be room temperature), 2 cups white sugar, 1 tablespoon almond extract, 4 egg yolks, 1-2 cup each milk and pineapple juice, 6 egg whites, 1 teaspoon cream of tartar. Cream the butter and shortening until they are blended and very light, then pour the sugar over them and pour the almond extract over the sugar, let it soak into the sugar a minute, then cream the sugar into the butter until both are thoroughly blended and light and fluffy. Beat the egg yolks in very well. Sift all-purpose flour and measure 4 cups. Hold out 1-2 cup of this to sprinkle over the fruits and nuts (see below). Add the flour, about 1-3 of it at a time, alternately with the milk and fruit juice, beating well between additions. Beat the egg whites until foamy then sprinkle the cream of tartar over them and beat until the whites will hold their shape but are not stiff.

Fruits and Nuts—3-4 lb. each blanched almonds and candied cherries (mixed green and red), 1-2 lb. each candied diced citron peel and very light dry seedless raisins, 1 1-3 cups well drained diced or crushed canned pineapple. Mix these fruits and nuts together and dredge them with the half cup flour held out for the purpose.

Add the floured fruits to the batter, then fold the beaten egg whites in last.

Grease and line cake tins with 3 layers of heavy brown paper which is buttered too. A 10-inch tube pan will hold this batter or the 1 large and 1 medium-sized tins available for Christmas cakes. Pour batter into prepared tin or tins, pressing it toward sides and smoothing top. Bake at 275 deg. Fahr. This is very slow oven. Have a pan of water in oven bake cakes, with water in it at all times. Add boiling water to pan as it boils away. Stand pan at centre of oven. Large cake requires three hours at least—may be a little more. Medium cake a little more than 2 hours. Let cakes cool in pans. When you remove them from pans let them cool some more on cake racks. Wrap in wax paper. Do not remove wax paper. Wrap again in heavy towelling. Store in tightly covered tin box or crock until Christmas.

LETTER

. . . In your column you have scalloped potatoes . . . may I suggest that it is the adding of the salt that makes the unbolted milk curdle? My method is: Allow the milk to come to a boil (over the potatoes) then sprinkle with salt over the top, and it works down in with the process of boiling. I hope you will find this helps. I know I never have milk curdle when I do it this way. Thanks, E. W.

ANSWER

Thank you Lillie. If I interpret this method correctly you pour boiled milk over the sliced potatoes and bring them to a boil on top of the stove. (Those who bake scalloped potatoes in glass or earthen baking dishes, would have to do this precooking in a metal utensil.) Then they are sprinkled with salt and transferred to oven to bake and become tender. Right? That is what I did and as you say the milk did not curdle.

SHOES FOR MOTHER

Wise mothers realize how important it is that the kids be properly shod. But blame isn't always wise about selecting her own shoes. She can't look into the shoe on the subject or, what is oftener the case, go hybrid on ideas at all—looking only for style.

When trying shoes on in the store, remember that feet can be as much as a size smaller when you are sitting than when standing. So don't make the mistake of buying footwear that will turn out to be off-the "sitting-down" type. Walk around the store before you put your money down.

See that the widest part of the foot rests comfortably at the widest part of the shoe. The big-toe joint should rest at the turn of the leather sole if you are to get the best heel-to-ball fit. Run your thumb along the joint; if it is slightly forward, you need a longer shoe. If the shoe is too narrow, the flesh will be forced to bulge over the sides or press uncomfortably against the welt of the shoe.

For the average working-and-walking day, you should have neat, streamlined all-leather oxfords, with contrasting two-tone leather to provide surface interest, and leather heels of moderate height, you can have style appeal as well as comfort.

Of course every mother in the land must have a few pairs of "dress-up" shoes and for best bet here is a pump or spectator. The offering along these lines are so numerous that you are bound to find something exciting and smart.

RESTORED TO LIFE

LONDON (Reuters)—Soviet scientists experimenting on blood supply to the brain have put dogs to death for 20 minutes and then restored them to life, the Soviet news agency Tass reported today. Until recently it had been considered certain that cells would perish after 10 minutes, Tass said.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A "SHIFT" IN THEIR CLUB—WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

There is a girl in our club who is very attractive. She is 21 years old and does not act her age. The boys don't like her, but still they are nice to her. At parties, they ask her to dance but she won't. When my kid with her she has a temper tantrum. We are ashamed to go places with her because she doesn't fix her hair. She goes to parties and wears dresses above her knees. She is not poor. She starts to cry when you don't ask her to do things with you.

Please tell us how we can either get her out of the club without hurting her feelings, or how we can change her.—S. E. C.

Dear S.E.C.:

I think your second suggestion is better than your first; that is, to try and help the girl become more companionable rather than to ease her out of your group, which, because she would certainly be very hurt, would only tend to make all her faults get worse.

You don't say how old the rest of you are, but I assume you are probably about the girl's age yourselves, or possibly some old you may be a little older and so don't want to think that, after all, a girl of 12 is still pretty young, and perhaps you are expecting a little too much-of her right now. Have you ever tried to find out tactfully what the reasons may be for some of the things with which you find fault in this girl? I'm inclined to believe that there is something wrong in her home life which makes her unhappy and oversensitive. She may feel as ashamed about going to parties with her dresses above her knees, as with her hair not fixed right, as you are ashamed to be seen with her, yet it might be entirely her mother who is to blame for these things, not herself.

It seems to me you other girls have a fine chance to be real friends to this one and to help her become an acceptable and appealing member of your club. If you put yourselves out a little bit, real effort to find out what's behind the things you find wrong about her, you will be doing something that will not only help her, but will make you more understanding and more worthwhile girls yourselves.

What I think would be a good thing to do is to go to one of your teachers in school who might help you figure this whole thing out. Ask her to visit this girl's home and see what she finds there. Then you can all work together on the problem, bringing happiness to a child who must certainly now be extremely unhappy.

Who'd you think this would be a worthwhile thing to do?

HE "JUST QUIT" COMING AROUND—SHE WANTS TO KNOW WHY

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19, and have been going with a boy 20 for quite awhile.

About a month ago he just quit coming to see me, and I haven't any idea why. He told me more than once that he loved me, and I believed him, but now I'm beginning to doubt it.

I would like to find out what's wrong and why he seemed to change toward me so suddenly.

A pie social was held in Melrose United Church on Tuesday evening, sponsored by the W-

-bot I just don't know how to go about it. Please give me your advice.—Helen T.

Dear Helen:

All right, here's my advice: Drop the whole thing.

Nothing could be more foolish than to try and do a post-mortem on a dead romance to find out what it died of. I'm quite sure that if you make any attempt whatever to question this chap, no good will come of it, and you will only find yourself greatly embarrassed.

Any young man who "just quits" coming to see a girl, does so for the simple reason that he has lost interest in her. Do you want to be humiliated by forcing him to tell you this plainly?

men's Missionary Society.

The Rev. L. W. Scott acted as chairman for the program. Mrs. Duncan, of Frankford, was present and favored with two humorous numbers.

The little Misses Marlene and Caroline Mitchell delighted the audience with a duet, "Playmates," and Marlene also favored with a solo, "Chesting Heart."

Their mother, Mrs. M. Mitchell, accompanied them and later favored with an accordion solo.

Solos by Mrs. Al Gardner and Mrs. A. Reilly and a reading by Mrs. S. Milligan were also much appreciated. A one-act play, "Among Us Girls" was presented by five local ladies and caused much merriment.

After words of appreciation by the chairman to those who assisted with the program an abundance of sandwiches, pickles, pie and coffee were served.

Proceeds of the evening were $18.

Women's Activities

BRIDGE ST. JUBILEE W.A.

The November meeting of the Jubilee Evening Auxiliary of Bridge Street United Church was held in the church parlors. Mrs. Duffy's group served a delicious supper after which the president, Mrs. L. Jones, welcomed everyone.

Mrs. Holmboe told of the new Canadian pamphlet held recently and invited all to attend these meetings.

Mrs. C. Calnan gave a message on Temperance.

Miss D. Young had charge of the program, the theme being, "The Church—The Body of Christ." Miss Collins favored with a solo.

Mrs. T. Colden reviewed the first of the study book "Where'er The Sun," by Dr. Moffat. She told of the strength of the Christian church in the Far East, Nepal Tibet and Afghanistan have nothing to do with Christianity. The church in China, which was once flourishing is now under Communist rule. India and Pakistan are the strongholds of the Christian Church in Asia.

ST. MARGARET'S GUILD

The regular meeting of the Guild was held in St. Margaret's Church on Monday evening. There were 23 members and one visitor present.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. R. Davis was in the chair, and opened the meeting.

The regular business meeting was brief, and the evening was spent making preparations for the bazaar to be held in the near future. There were several work groups carrying out a variety of activities under the direction of Mrs. F. R. Clarke.

The meeting closed with refreshments served by the hostesses, Mrs. C. Partridge and Mrs. W. Bradley.

SHANNONVILLE W.C.

The regular meeting of the Shannonville Women's Guild was held Thursday evening, at the home of the president, Mrs. Fitzgerald.

The meeting was opened in the usual way. Eleven members and one visitor were present.

The business period followed. It was decided to hold a euchre party this Thursday evening, at the Milltown school. Plans were made for the next meeting.

After the close of the meeting, refreshments were served and a social chat enjoyed.

CAMMPTON W.M.S.

Camnpton W.M.S. held its November meeting at the home of Mrs. D. Brenton with a good attendance.

An interesting letter was read from Mrs. C. Callery, Toronto, a former member of the society who has reached the advanced age of nearly 91.

OFFICERS RETURN.

The officers of 1953 will return for the year 1954 except for a couple of changes.

The theme of the worship service was "The Church", taken from the September missionary meeting.

The Study Book "Where'er the Sun" by Dr. Samuel Moffett, was capably taken by Mrs. Throop, who told the society many interesting things.

"One-half of the population of the world is in Asia and only one in a hundred are church members. In Asia there are 13 million Protestants and 34 million Catholics.

"Most of the Protestants of Asia are in India. Their motto is, 'every Christian an evangelist.' If you are not an evangelist, you are not a Christian. India needs 1,000 missionaries. In North America there is one doctor to each 700 people. — In India there is one doctor to each 7,000 people.

India needs all kinds of missionaries as the need is great. The Indian churches are next to the richest churches in the world, the oldest ones are the churches of the Bible Land.

Mr. Throop closed the meeting.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her helpers and a social half hour spent.

MINOR OUTBREAKS

LONDON (CP)—The health ministry announced that 2,986 persons were affected by cases of food poisoning this year. The list included outbreaks in 28 schools causing illness in 1,970 children.

Coat Interest

By VERA WINSTON

New touches and embellishments bring interest to the latest straight line coats such as the model depicted here. Done in imported wool in an interesting basket weave, the fabric combines with matching velvet for a novel effect. From above and below the flat cape collar comes an additional collar, a rolled one in matching velvet. This continues down the front on both sides like a facing. Nice detail of slit pockets on the cape collar.

Eight Windsor School Boys Formed Unique Fraternity Quarter of Century Ago

By ROD CURRIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Eight high school boys organized a friendship fraternity here 25 years ago. The fraternity became the cornerstone of a unique service club through which thousands of boys have taken part in organized sport.

The students called their group the Alpha Kai Omega fraternity.

Last Saturday, Windsor AKO, a dominant force in junior football for two years, entered the Dominion final by defeating Verdun Stars-Cats 26-21. Nov. 21 they will play Saskatoon Hilltops in the western city for the Canadian title they won last year from Edmonton.

Since the group was formed it has sponsored teams of teen-age lads who have carried the AKO insignia into junior competition in hockey, baseball, basketball and boxing as well as football.

WIN MANY TITLES

AKO teams have claimed several Canadian junior championships, a number of eastern Canada titles and many district crowns.

Earlier this year the fraternity took over a city playground, renamed it AKO Memorial Park, and erected a $10,000 building equipped with dressing rooms and other facilities.

First president of the fraternity was Norman Ihll, assistant executive editor of the Windsor Daily Star. He now is vice-president. He and Jay Love, an office manager, are the only members of the original group still active in the fraternity. Others were killed during the Second World War or have moved from Windsor.

"We were simply high school pals who didn't want to lose contact after graduation," Mr. Ihll said. "The service aspect of the club started once we began to expand and took in graduates of other schools."

Later, with a membership of 25 youths, the club formed teams to enter various city leagues.

In the depression years, the fraternity, in addition to sponsoring sports for boys, went into service work. The 40 members packed food baskets for the poor and formed teams to collect funds for charity.

FIVE WAR RECORD

When the Second World War started all but four of the members joined the services. The others organized a small club to do war work.

After the war the fraternity reorganized. The members expanded their work, devoting their efforts to community service and work among youth as a living memorial to the six members killed in the war.

Since then more than 2,000 boys between 15 and 19 years of age have worn AKO uniforms. When a boy passes the junior age limit, which is 20 in most sports, the fraternity helps him to find a job and get established.

AKO finances its teams and other service activities through concerts, bingoes, car raffles and similar projects.

Next year the fraternity will join Windsor in celebrating birthday anniversaries. AKO, marking its 25th anniversary, will send all its teams into competition under the name AKO Centennials in honor of Windsor's 100th birthday.

The fraternity also will attempt to bring junior Canadian football and basketball finals here during the year-long centennial celebration.

POW SLAIN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — James Collins, 23, who was released recently after 33 months as a prisoner of the Communists in Korea, was shot to death Tuesday by a gunman in a Philadelphia bar. Police said the gunman walked up to Collins, said "You're the one I'm looking for," shot him and fled. They were unable to provide a motive.

G.I.'s in Korea to Get Turkey But They Would Prefer Eel

By WILLIAM C. RANDARD

SEOUL, — (AP) — The United States 8th Army announced with apparent gusto this week that the soldiers in Korea will be "devouring more than 150 tons of turkey" on American Thanksgiving Day next Thursday.

But the apparent gusto, it seems, was confined to the quartermastery people.

Slowly the dread news spread, from the rear echelons right up to where troops look out on the demilitarizing zone.

You could hear the wail in tent and bunker: "Oh no, not turkey again—anything, even boiled eel or turnip greens."

What is the story behind this army uprising against the tukey —that revered bird born to adorn American Thanksgiving tables.

"Why couldn't it have been steak?" asked a captain.

"Chances are we'd have got turkey whether it was Thanksgiving Day next Thursday.

"But the fact is, The army suffers from a glut of turkey. How come? A lieutenan-colonel wasn't sure. But he told about the situation late in the war.

HARROWING DAYS

The colonel recalled with fine nausea those last harrowing days —two weeks when the front-line soldiers had turkey every other day.

"It was a ration foul-up," he declared, "and it did us a lot more harm than the enemy did."

So it's situation is normal—all fowled up. Turkey on the menu twice a week, with hot turkey sandwiches and turkey salad in between.

A mess sergeant told me he became so depressed he took to drink. He wanted to put up a sign on the mess hall door:

"Caution: Turkey today." His major talked him out of it.

It isn't just the repetition that has the 8th army down on turkey. The cause lies deeper than that—in the deep freeze where the turkey is kept.

"Maybe the turkey just comes too damned far and for too damned long," the colonel said.

"Somewhere out on the ocean it loses all its flavor and arrives on my plate tasting like a roast-

'Black Abbess' Again Convicted Of Extortion

ATHENS (Reuters) — Greece's "black abbess," Mother Mariam Soulakiotis, 70, has received another four-year jail sentence on charges of running an extortion racket in a "concentration camp" convent. She had already been given a 15-year sentence.

A medical statement read to the court said 177 men and women died under hard labor, faits and penance in her convent at Keratea run by the old Calendarists sect.

The abbess, a leader of the sect, was sentenced in February to 10 years on similar charges of cruelty, enslavement and ill treatment. The court today decided the new punishment will be concurrent with the previous sentence.

At her last trial in February, the abbess was accused of building up an immense personal fortune by making converts, taking them to the convent, and there extorting land and money from them with severe medieval penances and threats of suicide.

The sect was outlawed two years ago.

FIVE CHILDREN DIE

GOULD, Ark. (AP)—Five children died near here Tuesday when their small farm home was destroyed by fire. The victims were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Hunt, Negro tenant farmers on a plantation, who were picking cotton at the time of the fire.

POWS RETURN

BAD REICHENHALL, Germany (Reuters)—A group of 117 German prisoners of war released by Russia after working in labor camps in Communist Hungary crossed the frontier Sunday to this Bavarian town. They reported treatment improved last year after being very bad.

Wheat Harvest Estimate Raised

OTTAWA (CP)—Though world markets are loaded with grain, Canada now finds she has more wheat to sell than originally anticipated.

In a final survey of this year's grain harvest, the bureau of statistics Tuesday boosted its mid-September wheat estimate by almost 20,000,000 bushels to 613,985,000, second highest in history.

The harvest, coming on top of last year's record 688,000,000-bushel crop, may tax western storage capacity, already strained by bountiful grain crops.

And it throws other government estimates out of kilter. Government grain authorities, in making surveys of available wheat supplies, have been basing their figuring on the mid-September estimate of 594,268,000 bushels.

Thus the government previously estimated that total wheat carryover from 1952 and its 1953 harvest brought total supplies to 857,000,000, up from 905,100,000 a year ago. Actually they were 877,000,000.

P. M. Says Canada Did Not Intervene in Appointment

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA — Prime Minister St. Laurent said Wednesday that he knows nothing about any "high-placed" person having intervened eight years ago against the appointment of Harry Dexter White to a post on the International Monetary Fund.

He also implied doubt that there had been any such incident and suggested that if there had been such a communication it was made part of evidence in a public hearing before a congressional committee.

However, the prime minister said in the Commons that his officials are trying to trace the so-called "high-placed" official and he would advise members of the outcome.

The incident followed Tuesday's testimony before the United States Senate sub-committee on internal security. FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover and Herbert Brownell, attorney-general, both put in evidence a heretofore secret letter Hoover wrote the White House in February, 1946.

HOOVER LETTER

In the letter Mr. Hoover said a "high-placed" Canadian official had advised him against permitting Harry Dexter White to take a post on the board of the International Monetary Fund. White at that time was under investigation by the FBI as a suspected spy for the Soviet espionage ring exposed by Elizabeth Bentley, former Russian spy courier.

John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) asked the prime minister for a clarifying statement, after referring to the Hoover letter.

"EMBARRASSING SITUATION"

"I knew nothing about the existence of such a letter until I saw the report in the press," Mr. St. Laurent said Mr. St. Laurent, obviously unhappy about the whole affair which he had earlier told a reporter came to him as "a disagreeable surprise."

"The matter has been discussed with my colleagues in the government for external affairs because it must confess I was quite surprised to see brought out in any inquiry before a committee of Congress reference to what must have been, if there was anything, confidential information communicated by a Canadian official to a United States official.

"As soon as we saw the report proceedings were immediately instituted to ascertain if there had been any such communication and how and if it had been made.

NO DISCOVERIES

"So far we have not discovered anything that would enable us to trace any such communication.

"But the inquiries are continuing and if and when we do find anything that would tend to confirm, or to put us in the position to make a positive denial, that information will be communicated to the House."

It is assumed in some quarters here that Mr. Hoover was referring to an expression of opinion conveyed to him by his liaison officer working in Ottawa with the RCMP as having been obtained from an RCMP associate. However, RCMP headquarters would say only that any information must come from the government.

The prime minister's statement implied that he had been unable to get any specific information from the RCMP. This would not be surprising because there have been many changes since the incident which occurred prior to February, 1946.

IVANHOE

Miss E. Chapman Gives 'Effective Speaking Course'

IVANHOE — A short course, "Aids to Effective Speaking" sponsored by Ivanhoe W.I. held recently in the Ivanhoe Town Hall was largely attended by W.I. members and a number of visitors.

The course was conducted by Miss Ethel Chapman, editor of the Home and Country magazine. She is also author of three books, "The Homesteaders," "God's Green Country," and "With Flame of Freedom."

Miss Chapman was born on a farm and has a wide knowledge of rural life. She attended Normal School, was editor at "The Farmer's Magazine", until it was discontinued in 1927. She then accepted a position as assistant secretary of Institutes. She is now working with Institutes teaching citizenship and aids to effective speaking.

COMMON FAULTS

This short course proved of great interest and benefit to all who were privileged to attend. The instructor pointed out some common faults in public speaking and how to correct them, faulty enunciation, rambling, monotony and long quotations.

The class read in unison exercises in voice modulation and inflection. Miss Chapman stressed the importance of preparation: assemble the material well ahead of time; then discard any unnecessary words or phrases.

Miss Chapman's closing address was read as an example of power and simplicity. He had been selected by Bible reading and the classics. Every sentence in his address has a meaning. Most of the forceful words are short as illustrated in Churchill's famous war-time quotes—"Give us the tools, and we will finish the job."

INTERESTING EXERCISES

The course was brought to a close by a number of impromptu speeches followed by criticism and responding to various toasts, nightly!, Nnl Syede

Miss Fewster, on behalf of the Ivanhoe W.I. expressed thanks and appreciation to Miss Chapman.

A delicious pot-luck dinner was served at noon.

42,675 Britons Immigrate To Canada in Past Year

By RON EVANS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — It looks as though the Canadian immigration office is headed for another record year in the United Kingdom. More Britons than ever before—42,675—were sped on their way to Canada in 1953. Indications are that this year 45,000 will take root there before the end of December.

Each day prospective settlers crowd the bright green waiting room in the department's new offices near Hyde Park. They want to know about housing and health schemes, politics and prices, weather and work.

Answers to general questions are supplied by the three officers always on duty behind the long counter or through the racks of Canadian daily newspapers ranged at one end of the large room. For questions of employment, Britons may see one of the four officials from the department of labor. If the problem is personal, there is a private interview with a department counsellor.

After completing application, the potential emigrant takes an examination, including chest x-ray, by one of four Canadian doctors. Then passage is arranged.

CLEAR 100 HOURLY

Reg Casselman of Toronto, officer in charge of the London office under superintendent L. G. Cumming, says the office staff of 40 is able to clear almost 100 persons an hour during the busy season from spring till late autumn.

The number of emigrants from Britain to Canada has been climbing steadily, except for a brief lapse in 1950, since 1949 when 22,-261 crossed the ocean. The follow-ing year the figure dropped to 13,400 but in 1951 it was back up to 21,270.

In the first seven months of this year the number of applications handled by the department was greater by 2,000 than over the corresponding period in 1952. Bears are rare. That goes for the London office and those maintained in Liverpool, Glasgow, Belfast and Dublin, Casselman said.

Emigrants today have fewer misconceptions concerning Canada and he credits this to a plan adopted in 1951 whereby group meetings for prospective settlers have been arranged by travel agencies throughout Britain. The department supplies films and settlement officers to answer questions on life in Canada. Such meetings have attracted audiences of more than 1,500 and are held as often as nine times a week.

Vishinsky Has Added H-Bomb To Weapons He Would Ban

By OSGOOD CARUTHERS

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) Andrei Y. Vishinsky had the floor in the United Nations today to present once again Russia's oft-rejected peace package. This time he has added the hydrogen bomb to the list of mass-destruction weapons he proposes should be banned immediately.

Vishinsky was due to put the Soviet peace proposal before the UN General Assembly's 60-member political committee.

Western spokesmen earlier had voiced their continued opposition to the Communist proposals and predicted the assembly would reject them as in the past.

WANT CONTROLS FIRST

The West maintains international controls must be set up and working before any weapons ban can be effective.

There were some differences in the resolutions the Communists asked the international organization to approve this year, but generally it was along the lines of the Polish package plan voted down last year and the Soviet plan before the assembly turned down the year before.

One deletion was the former Red proposal for a Big Five peace pact.

DRAFT RESOLUTION

Vishinsky's draft resolution handed to the UN as a proposed agenda item when the assembly started its eighth session last September, is titled "measures to avert the threat of a new world war and to reduce tension in international relations."

It urged that the Korean armistice "is an important contribution to the reduction of tension in international relations." But despite this, the statement said, the arms piling is being continued on an even greater scale."

FAVOR PRIVATE TALKS

The committee voted 54-0 Wednesday in favor of a United States-backed resolution urging renewed up efforts for world disarmament, and proposing that the major powers get together privately to try to bring this about. The five-power Soviet bloc abstained. Burma said it saw no prospects of agreement, and also did not vote.

In the other hot UN issue, the Big Three Western powers formally demanded Wednesday that the Security Council vote the "strongest censure" of Israel for the killing of 53 Arabs in the Jordan village of Kibya last month.

Farm Income Dropped Twelve Per Cent in '53

OTTAWA (CP)—Farm income in Canada will drop by 12 per cent in 1953, the second consecutive annual decline from the 1951 peak, federal agricultural economists estimate.

In a 106-page report prepared for the annual federal-provincial agricultural conference opening here Monday, the economists made these points:

1. World agricultural prices have softened and this softening will continue into 1954.

2. The flow of cash to Canadian farmers has declined, but so far this has not "seriously" affected consumer spending.

3. World food production, for the first time, has returned to levels attained before the Second World War, but the balance is sharply distorted to favor the food exporters and not those in the far east who still require food desperately.

4. Production prospects for 1954 are generally good, but "one or two years of bad weather would set back the world food situation considerably."

The economists estimated that net farm income in Canada will drop by 12 per cent which, on the basis of 1953 figures, would mean a drop of about $223,000,000 to $1,672,000,000 from $1,900,000,000. The peak was $2,300,000,000 in 1951.

All 7 Members Of Catalina Crew Rescued by Ship

PEARL HARBOR (AP) — All seven crew members from a United States navy Catalina flying boat which ditched in the Pacific Wednesday have been picked up from a life raft by the transport Daniel I. Sultan, the navy announced today.

Navy officers said three of the men were injured, but none is in serious condition.

The Sultan was heading for Midway Island, about 240 miles south of the point where the airmen were rescued, and was expected to arrive some time today.

The flying boat ran out of fuel and was ditched in the ocean while on a long-distance flight from Alaska to Midway.

Wants $10,000 As Bathing Suit Too Eye-Catching

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Everybody looked when pretty Mrs. Patricia C. Muncy stepped out of a Santa Monica pool. They looked again. Then Mrs. Muncy looked sad.

What she saw, she said in a suit Wednesday asking $10,000 damages, was that her bathing suit "became transparent and pervious to light" after contact with water.

She has sued the garment manufacturer, claiming she was exposed to public gaze and ridicule, and suffered extreme embarrassment and shock.

Seven Companies Plead Guilty In Combine Case

TORONTO (CP)—Seven rubber companies and the Rubber Association of Canada pleaded guilty Wednesday to charges of operating a rubber combine in the footwear division of the rubber industry.

The companies are: Dominion Rubber Company, Gutta Percha and Rubber Ltd., the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company of Canada Ltd., Alfred Lambert Incorporated, Kaufman Rubber Co. Ltd., the Miner Rubber Company Ltd., Norther-Woodstock Rubber Ltd.

This was the third case in which rubber companies have been charged with operating a combine. The first was in mechanical rubber products, the second in tires and tubes.

Some $50,000 has already been paid in the first combine, in which five firms were convicted. A prohibition order made then will be appealed.

Mr. Justice W. F. Schroeder reserved judgment and said he will simultaneously hand down his decision on this case and the one concerning tires and tubes. The decision will be given next Monday or the following Monday.

Bags His Bear After Five Years; Auto Is Weapon

HOUGHTON LAKE, Mich. (AP) R. C. Mulholland was cross as a bear when he returned to Ohio from the Michigan woods.

For the last five years he had gone up there hoping to bag a bearskin rug on the hoof. He never even came close. Then, going home, his car hit something and spun around. The object hit and bounced high in the air.

Mulholland recovered first. He raced to his groggy victim—a 400-pound bear. Then the bear got up and Mulholland took off. He sped back to his car and grabbed his rifle. One shot did it.

All the way home he kept thinking about his inexpensive new rug. With the bear draped over his hood he never even thought about the 900 he will cost him to have his car repaired.

Quebec to Amend Its Labor Act To Bar All Reds

QUEBEC (CP) —The Quebec government has tabled draft legislation outlawing any bargaining agent any employer or employee organization tolerating one or more Communist officers.

The measure was one of 34 tabled Wednesday as the second session of Quebec's 24th legislature opened.

The government also proposed a statutory speed limit of 60 miles on Quebec highways and life cancellation of driving permits for persons convicted three times of driving while under suspension.

The proposed amendment to the Labor Relations Act concerning Communists says:

"An association which tolerates among its organizers or officers, one or more persons adhering to the Communist doctrine or a Communist party or movement cannot . . . be regarded as a bona fide association."

A provision stipulates that certification may be refused or revoked by the labor relations board.

In another labor measure, a bill proposes that any union calling a strike in public services will automatically lose the right to represent its members.

Abolition order of the four-year margarine ban would do away with the present system of encouraging any person to lodge complaints against violators.

Prosecution would be in the hands of police and persons appointed by the minister of agriculture. The latter would share in the payment of fines.

Urge Better Signs

BARRIE (CP)—A regional conference of Chambers of Commerce Wednesday urged more and better highway signs for the area.

Said W. L. Kinzie, Barrie representative at the conference:

"With the coming of these new highways, we are not allowed to advertise. If tourists coming up highway 400 did not see the road sign pointing to Barrie, they would never know we are here.

The conference decided to complain through the Ontario Chamber of Commerce about provincial policy on road signs.

RCAF Reaffirms Faith in CF-100 Jet Fighter

OTTAWA (CP)—The RCAF has reaffirmed its faith and confidence in the CF-100 jet fighter, three squadrons of which have been assigned to the air defence of Canada.

More familiarly known as the "Canuck," the all-weather two-seated Interceptor was designed in Canada and is being produced in Canadian factories. Following two recent crashes, it was referred to in some quarters as the air force's "problem child."

An RCAF statement Wednesday noted that there have been six "major" CF-100 crashes since the plane's first test flight in January, 1950. Four of these resulted in fatalities to crew members.

Commenting on these crashes, the statement declared:

"No RCAF aircraft is allowed to go into service or continue in service, if any doubt or question exists as to its performance or safety characteristics. Unfortunately, certain phases of military flying, particularly fighter training, present hazards."

The RCAF said the incidence of CF-100 crashes has not increased its accident rate established over the years with all types of planes.

Senators Probing White Case Call Temporary Lull, Give No Sign of Abandoning Efforts

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators investigating Harold Dexter White case called a temporary lull today, but gave no sign of abandoning their efforts because of President Eisenhower's suggestion that the need for such inquiries may soon be ended.

Senator William E. Jenner (Rep. Ind) said he does not know where or how far the inquiry by the internal security sub-committee he heads will lead. The group's next session is set for Monday.

Jenner told reporters that "for the first time we have been able to show" that FBI reports on suspected individuals "reached the hands of top officials," and it was impossible to say now what development might follow.

Some Republicans and most Democrats backed Eisenhower's hope, expressed at his press conference Wednesday, that security firings may so completely solve the problem of alleged Red infiltration of government that the issue will be forgotten by next year's congressional campaign.

Eisenhower said he was not suggesting that current congressional probes be called off, however.

DECLINES COMMENT

The president declined to comment directly on the case of White, who Attorney - General Herbert Brownell says reported in 1946 by former president Truman in the face of FBI reports which, Brownell asserted, tagged White as a Soviet spy.

While Jenner's sub - committee planned to go ahead with its hearings, the House of Representatives un-American activities committee showed signs of stepping out of the case.

Representative Kit Clardy (Rep. Mich.) said Wednesday he sees no need now for a sub-committee to take testimony from governor James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, who was Truman's secretary of state at the time of White's promotion. Clardy had been named to head the sub-committee.

Members of Trenton Churches Pay Visit to St. Paul's Centennial

RAWDON — Ministers, officials and members of Trenton United Churches converged on St. Paul's, Sidney, on Sunday evening. The large group journeyed by chartered bus and private cars and were royally welcomed on this special Centennial occasion.

Mr. A. R. Kendall, ARCO, presided at the organ and rendered "Paul Angelicus" by Pronck; Handel's "Aria from Semelee" and the well known "Gavotte."

About thirty members of King St. choir occupied the choir loft and contributed two anthems, "The Day Thou Gavest" and "Bless the Lord, O My Soul."

Mrs. C. Smith sang a vocal selection "Let Not Your Heart be Troubled."

The male quartet of Grace United Church, Messrs. H. Berryman, E. McPherson, J. Kirk and A. Boyce, with Mrs. C. M. Baker as piano accompanist, were heard in "The Galilean Call."

The Rev. A. E. Baker, U.E. pastor of St. Paul's United Church opened the service with "The Church's One Foundation." Mrs. Walter T. Elliott graciously extended a warm welcome to the folks from the two Trenton charges, which also includes Johnstown and to all other visitors from nearby points.

100 YEARS CHRISTIAN SERVICE

The Rev. G. J. Miniely, B.A., minister of King Street United Church, read a portion of the 145th. chapter of Romans, and offered a prayer of gratitude for 100 years of Christian service.

The offering was gathered in the historic collection boxes by Messrs. Jack Bush, Robert Patterson, Cecil Macklin, Meigben Rodgers and Mrs. Earl Wightman.

The Rev. G. H. Puttenham, B.A., B.D., minister of Grace Church, Trenton, and Johnstown brought the evening message, based on "No Man Liveth to Himself."

The speaker pictured Jeremiah as being absolutely fed up with Jerusalem and he wished to leave all the intolerable burdens and go to some wayfaring place in the wilderness where he would not be intimately acquainted with the people who passed by and would never need to hear about their troubles. However a little retreat by the side of the road does not guarantee a life of ease.

God does not want His people to live to themselves. The speaker challenged his audience to live for Christ, take up His cross in the world of today and go forward, and thus find joy in His service.

THANKS TENDERED

On behalf of the Centennial committee, Mr. Harold Hagerman voiced thanks to the Trenton folk who had furnished such a worthwhile service.

Approximately 150 people enjoyed the "Fellowship Hour" in the Sunday School rooms following the service.

Folks were in attendance from almost all of the ten provinces, from England, Scotland, the United States of America, and various parts of Ontario.

Mrs. A. E. Baker, ARCT, presided at the piano and two musical numbers were enjoyed, with Mrs. Baker as accompanist.

Messrs. Bob Hulin and Garnet Thain gave a cornet duet, "The Holy City". Mr. Jack Bush delighted with a trombone solo, "Bless This House."

St. Paul's W.A. served light refreshments and all enjoyed a social half hour.

MORNING SPEAKER

On Sunday morning the Centennial speaker at St. Paul's, Stirling, was Rev. Harry G. Tuttle, M.A., B.D., D.D. secretary of the Department of Pensions of the United Church of Canada.

In 1953, $277,500 has been budgeted for pensions, thus assuring a modest retiring allowance for the "veterans of the Cross" and making economic provision for their widows and dependents.

Mr. Tuttle chose as his theme, "Give God a Chance." He urged that God be given a chance to spread Christian fellowship throughout the world and challenged his audience to remember that "Jesus and His way of life is needed in the world of today."

Mr. Baker presided for the service.

The Royal Junior Choir sang "Angry Words, O Let Them Never." The senior choir contributed "Seek Ye the Lord" and Mr. Douglas Fyear delighted with a tenor solo.

Mrs. A. E. Baker rendered Armstrong's "Prayer" Bach's "Saviour of the Heathen Come" and "Ecce."

The boys and girls participated in a Bible drill.

The hymns included a request number, "Faith of Our Fathers."

SUNDAY QUEST SPEAKER

The Centennial services continue on Sunday, Nov. 22, when Rev. Ernest Calhoun, Grand Secretary of the Ontario Temperance Federation will be guest speaker in the morning.

In the evening Canniffon and Madoc will have their fraternal night.

Rev. J. F. Lane and the congregations and choirs of Madoc, Eldorado and Union; Rev. L. S. Throop, B.A., B.D., chairman of Belleville presbytery, and the congregations of Canniffon, Bethany, Carmel and Gilead St. Andrew's will be the special guests at St. Paul's.

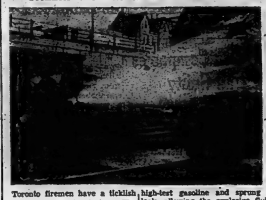
Chrysler Denies George White's Charge About Car

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Chrysler Corporation of Canada, Ltd., has denied a statement by George S. White (PC—Hastings-Peterborough) who charged Tuesday the company did not issue a warranty or guarantee on new cars for a given period of time.

Mr. White said a client of his law firm had purchased a "lemon" and Chrysler Corporation declined to replace it.

The company's statement follows:

"Chrysler Corporation of Canada, Limited, in common with other manufacturers, issues a warranty through its dealer, with each vehicle it manufactures and sells.



HAD 90-DAY WARRANTY

"The car purchased by Mr. G. S. White, MP was covered by this warranty during its first 90 days of ownership or 4,000 miles of driving.

"In accordance with the warranty, our dealer or factory representative on repeated occasions offered to make repairs to Mr. White's vehicle. He refused to make the car available and demanded that he be given a new vehicle.

"Press reports intimate that by bringing the matter to the attention of the House of Commons, Mr. White had been acting on behalf of a client. Chrysler Corporation files reveal that the client was Mr. White himself."

Ticklish Moment in Life of Firemen

Toronto firemen have a ticklish problem on their hands here. The oil tank car they are spraying is in danger of blowing up with a force great enough to blow them sky high along with the roofs of houses within half a mile. The tank car contained 8,000 gallons of high-test gasoline and sprung a leak, allowing the explosive fluid to soak into the ground, where it could be ignited by the slightest spark. The firemen here spray the tank car with water while what remained of the gasoline is pumped into another car.—Central Press Canadian.

Four Young Scots Plotted Blast, Detective Says

EDINBURGH (Reuters) — Four young Scots plotted to blow up a government building in Edinburgh last June but armed police guards chased them away, chief detective Edward Ferrier testified Wednesday.

He told the Edinburgh high court the four Scots—accused of conspiring to set up a republican regime—tried to dynamite St. Andrew's House a few days before the Queen was due to visit it on a Coronation tour. St. Andrew's houses several Scottish government ministries.

Ferrier said armed police, tipped off about the plot, surrounded the building and gave chase to the defendants' car when it was seen in the neighborhood. The four men, rounded up in the following few days, claimed the alleged explosives plot was a pure "hoax" on an Edinburgh police informer.

SAYS PLOT GENUINE

But Ferrier, head of the investigations, said he was convinced the plot was genuine. He said police treated the activities of the secret group, calling itself the Scottish Republican Army, with "utmost gravity."

He testified in the second day of the trial. Ther four men, also accused of collecting arms and ammunition for their activities, are Raymond Forbes, 23, Owen Gillan, 27, Robert Watt, 22, and Malcolm MacAlister, 34.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop's head started to bob after dinner, and ma said, William, are you failing asleep?

I should say not, pop said. I'm just getting a kink out of my neck, he said, and ma said, You're getting one in it, more likely.

I just read a case in the paper where a judge almost granted a wife a divorce because her husband fell asleep after dinner every evening, she said.

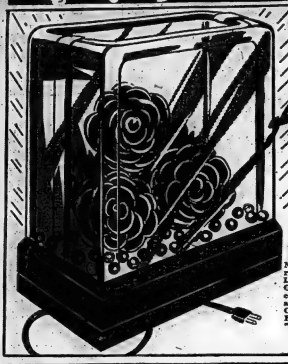
It must of been a woman judge, pop said. Anyway, she was probably quite justified, because I'm sure the husband in the case slept with his mouth open and fired off an occasional loud snore. He couldn't of been a quiet graceful napper like me, pop said and ma said, Never mind the loopholes and alibis. Anyway, the judge finally settled the case by making the husband promise to go out and walk around the block as soon as he started to feel sleepy, she said.

By golies, I'll promise to do the same thing without expensive divorce proceedings, and you can use the money to buy yourself a nice mink coat, pop said, and I said, G, pop, I'll walk around the block with you every time you go.

I'll appreciate your company, and if I fall asleep while I'm walking, you can leed me gently home without waking me up, pop said.

And pritty soon his head started to bob again, and ma said, William.

Heh! I'll start walking tomorrow, pop said.



Saying it with his eyes closed, and I said, Shall I wake him up and walk around the block with him, ma?

Oh, let him suffer in comfort, ma said.

Which we did.

CNR to Re-Order Nova Scotia Coal If Request Made

MONTREAL (CP)—A Canadian National Railways spokesman said here that whether the company will order more coal from the Drummond mine in Westville, N.S., will depend on the Dominion Board.

Earlier, the railway placed an order of 40,000 tons with the Drummond mine but the International Coal Company, operator of the shaft, closed down before delivery because of operating difficulties and scarcity of miners.

The spokesman said the order had been placed in accordance with a request of the Dominion Board. It would be reserved if the board made a similar request.

It was announced Tuesday night at Westville that Henry Thompson Pictou county banker, was planned to re-open the mine.

The CNR spokesman was reported to-day to be a major factor in his plans.

CLUB FORMED

In 1942 when the director for Indian affairs came to suggest the formation of women's clubs, only Mrs. Brant and one school teacher attended the meeting. Mrs. Brant told him to go away and come back in a month's time. When he returned he found Mrs. Brant and 140 other women there to meet him and the first club was formed.

There is no "overnight cure" for irregularity

But there is a simple, natural answer to the common problem of irregularity due to lack of bulk

There are men and women (perhaps you're one of them) who won't let "nature take its course". THEY TRY TO SUBSTITUTE UNNATURAL "FORCING ACTION" FOR THE NATURAL REGULARITY WHICH SENSIBLE DAILY HABITS AND SUFFICIENT BULK IN THE DIET COULD PROBABLY MAINTAIN.

Many fall into the habit of using laxatives in a way laxatives where never intended. They take "big doses" willy-nilly without even reading the directions on the label.

Naturally, such overdosing—with products intended only for overnight relief of a temporary stoppage—can upset the delicate digestive system as unnatural strain.

There's nothing wrong, of course, with taking laxatives occasionally. If you feel you have to take a laxative, just be sure you take it wisely—as an occasional recommended dose.

BUT THERE IS A WAY TO AVOID TAKING DRUG-TYPE LAXATIVES AND TO PLACE YOUR DEPENDENCE ON NATURE, IF LACK OF BULK IN THE DIET IS YOUR TROUBLE.

In many natural foods—such as certain vegetables, fruits, and grains—nature gives abundant natural bulk which normally and naturally aids the rhythmic process of elimination.

In no other natural food is natural bulk so ideally found as in the outer layers of the whole wheat kernel, known generally as bran.

Bran is nature's "laxative food instead of a medicine" for conveniently processed and shredded, whole wheat bran with its smooth natural bulk that the digestive system can handle in a natural way.

The Kellogg Company has made whole wheat bran into a delicious breakfast cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran.

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN PERFORMS NATURALLY WHAT DRUG-TYPE LAXATIVES DO CHEMICALLY. IT HELPS CLEAR THE INTESTINES OF WASTE IN A NATURAL WAY. IT PROVIDES SOFT NATURAL BULK FOR EASY NATURAL ACTION.

There is no stomach upset, no bad taste, no after-effect except the feeling of satisfaction and fulfillment that comes with natural, normal elimination.

To obtain lasting relief, of course, Kellogg's All-Bran must be eaten regularly. You can have it for breakfast every morning secure in the knowledge that it isn't habit-forming.

More than one million servings of Kellogg's All-Bran are consumed each day. This popularity of itself is proof that this natural laxative cereal lives up to what we say about it.

But even better proof comes from thousands of satisfied All-Bran users. They write of their own free will to tell us what natural relief they receive from eating Kellogg's All-Bran daily and drinking plenty of water.

EAT KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN EVERY MORNING FOR BREAKFAST FOR 10 DAYS. THEN, IF YOU'RE NOT COMPLETELY SATISFIED, SEND THE EMPTY CARTON TO THE KELLOGG COMPANY, LONDON, ONTARIO—AND GET DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK.

Remember—Kellogg's All-Bran has helped millions. Why not you?

International Body Trying To Get 'Very Best System' Of Regulating Lake Level

HAMILTON (CP)—Members of International Joint Commission attending hearings here on St. Lawrence waterway and power project.

Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian chairman, told 17 spokesmen for waterfront interests that the IJC is working "to get the very best system of regulation for shore owners as well as others who might be affected by Lake Ontario levels."

R. B. McWhorter, United States commissioner, asked the spokesmen for property owners to "be patient and realize that the commission is trying to provide conditions that will be beneficial to you."

Spokesmen for lake-front property owners and municipalities asked that the lake level be kept down to at least 247 feet above sea level. IJC engineers said such levels for the power project are designed to keep lake levels under the 248.3-foot mark recorded last year.

HEARINGS ADJOURNED

The commission, studying fluctuation of lake levels with particular reference to the power project, adjourned after hearing representations from property owners on the western side of Lake Ontario. No date was set for further hearings.

Gen. McNaughton described the International Lake Ontario board of engineers established by the commission to study lake levels. He said he felt that as a result of the studies the excess flow of water through the power works could be carried off "without hurting anyone."

Most of the witnesses expressed fears that the power project would artificially bottle up Lake Ontario water with recurrence of the heavy damage recorded in 1952.

Gen. McNaughton told them, however, that until the proposed St. Lawrence works were in place only protection for property owners against high lake levels would be the protection afforded by nature.

GUT DAM REMOVED

Gen. McNaughton referred to the Canadian Gut Dam in the St. Lawrence which was blamed by New York property owners for causing heavy flood damage a year ago. He said that in Rochester, N. Y., there had been a statement that the Canadian government had not completely removed the dam last January.

"On the recommendation of this commission, in the form of an order, the government of Canada removed the whole of this dam," he said. "It was completely taken out as ordered."

Practically all of the witnesses, representing interests from Toronto to the Niagara peninsula, told of heavy erosion and past damage by high water.

EROSION TOLL HIGH

George Otter, Saltfleet township fruit grower, said that since 1940 about 40 feet of land had been lost to the lake. C. N. Bonham, on behalf of the Grimsby-Saltfleet Lake Shore Erosion Protection Association, asked a guarantee of 30-foot security from high water.

"Many still fear that there are interests within sight or stage to artificially raise and hold the level beyond the point where shore owners could live," he said.

Charles Wright of the East Lincoln lake shore erosion committee said that more than 1,000 acres of land have been lost to the lake in his area since erection of the Gut Dam more than a half century ago.

Since the dam's destruction there had been no evidence of extensive erosion.

Miss V. C. Onslow of Niagara township said landowners had been accused of attempting to block the seaway and power project. This was not true, all the landowners wanted was compensation for water damage.

Three Candidates For Leadership Of CCF Party

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario CCF meets in Toronto Friday and Saturday to name a successor to E. B. Jolliffe as provincial leader. At least three candidates will seek the post, which carries an annual salary of $6,000.

Mr. Jolliffe, 44, who resigned last Aug. 15 to devote his time to his Toronto law practice, was first elected in 1942 and was re-elected at annual conventions ever since. He is the only official Ontario leader the party has had, although it first began contesting Ontario elections in 1934.

The three men who have announced they will be candidates are: F. Andrew Brewin of Toronto, whose maternal grandfather was Liberal premier of New Brunswick and a member of the Laurier cabinet; Donald C. MacDonald of Ottawa, national organizer and treasurer of the CCF; and Fred Young of Toronto, political action representative of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL), which supports the CCF.

VETERAN WORKER

Of the three announced candidates, Mr. Brewin has had the longest connection with the party in Ontario. A 46-year-old lawyer, he unsuccessfully contested one provincial and three Dominion elections, starting in 1945. He was chairman of the provincial election committee in 1943 and Ontario president from 1944 to 1946.

Mr. MacDonald, 39, has been a full-time CCF worker since 1946. A native of British Columbia, he worked on the Montreal Gazette and served overseas with the Royal Canadian Navy in the Second World War.

His CCF activity began at Ottawa where he was president of the Ottawa and District CCF council before taking on his national post. He was defeated in his only election bid as a candidate in Kootenay East in the Aug. 10 federal election.

ONE-TIME MINISTER

Mr. Young, 46, is a former United Church minister, he was a public school principal and teacher at Woodstock, N.B., and was general secretary of the Halifax YMCA during the war.

He was active in the CCF at its beginning in Toronto. For a time he was the party's provincial organization in the Maritimes and served eight years as a national council member. He unsuccessfully contested Toronto Davenport riding in the 1949 federal election.

About 300 delegates are expected at the convention, which opens Friday night with leadership nominations and a speech by M. J. Coldwell, national leader.

CANTERBURY, England (CP)—The greatest public house in the country is being modernized in line with Canterbury's 20-year development plan. Landlord Eddie O'Connor serves drinks in the historic bar, 18 by 14 feet, while walls of the new building go up outside.

BRUSSELS (CP)—The first Belgian television station, equipped with the latest British instruments, opened here with the first British standard system of TV operated. The station can switch from the 625-line picture to the 819-line an inch system, accommodating receivers accustomed either to the existing Dutch or French systems.

600-Pound Bear Destroyed After Bitter Battle

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta. (CP)—These are the bare facts of a meeting in the wilds between a lumber camp operator and a hungry 600-pound black bear.

The short meeting between Del Ackers, owner of the camp, 30 miles west of here, and Mr. Bruin, resulted in flaming loss of the camp cookhouse, possible serious injury to the operator, and death to the bear.

The story began two weeks ago when Ackers and his men moved into the bush to prepare their site for winter operations. The bear was apparently waiting for this visit, especially for the lard, honey and other stores.

Every morning for two weeks, boards nailed over windows were torn off and huge bear tracks were left on the table and the floor of the cookhouse. These paws carried away a considerable amount of supplies.

As the bear headed for him, Ackers heaved a can of coal oil at the cookhouse, went up in flames, the well-singed bear waddled off into the bush and Ackers had his clothing burned.

The story ended a week later when the animal returned. This time he was shot dead before he reached any food.

French Believe Churchill Wants To Visit Moscow

By HAROLD KING

PARIS (Reuters) — Sir Winston Churchill is likely to seek American and French support for a new visit to Moscow and an informal talk with Premier Malenkov, informed diplomatic sources here said today.

The view that the British prime ministers' reported plan will be an outstanding feature of next month's Big Three conference at Bermuda is based on recent exchanges between the French foreign ministry and Rene Massigli, French ambassador in London.

Premier Joseph Laniel is expected to emphasis in the Indo-China campaign, which is stepped French military and economic strength, when he meets Churchill and President Eisenhower. He may also advocate talks with Russia on all Atlantic problems as the proper way to settle the Indo-China problem and end the costly campaign there.

In London today, an authoritative source said the United States, Britain and France will soon ask Russia again to meet them in a Big Three attempt to conclude a treaty giving Austria independence.

Renews Attack Upon Queen's Race Attendance

LONDON (Reuters)—Dr. Donald Soper, president of the 1,000,000-member British Methodist Conference, has renewed his attack on the Queen's attendances at horse races.

His opening address in London replied to newspaper criticism of his speech two days ago urging the sovereign to stay away from race tracks because of turf gamblers and racketeers.

Soper said that although Elizabeth showed "queenly and Christian qualities of a very high order," she should not as a Christian give her patronage to a sport involving gambling.

RECENT FAMILY

"You may disagree," he told the meeting, "but don't go away saying, 'Here are a lot of Hillbys taking every opportunity to have a crack at royalty.' That is stupid and absurd.' . . . I believe we have an excellent Royal Family."

The press attack on his original criticism of the Queen's interest in racing came today from two of Britain's mass circulation tabloids.

Big Powers Asked To Boost Efforts To Control Arms

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) The UN political committee called on the Big Powers Wednesday to intensify efforts toward disarmament and atomic control. It suggested that private talks might help break the deadlock.

These were major provisions of a resolution sponsored by the Big Three Western powers and 11 other countries. The proposal, was approved by a vote of 54 to 5 after the 60-nation committee rejected a series of Russian amendments. The Soviet bloc abstained and Burma did not vote.

The main Soviet proposal called on the UN's 13-nation disarmament commission to submit plans by next March 1 for a substantial reduction of armaments and for the prohibition of atomic and hydrogen bombs. This amendment was rejected 36 to 5 with 17 abstaining.

The majority for the 14-power resolution was enough to assure its final approval by the General Assembly.

POLITICS TOUGHER ON MR. MAGSAYSAY THAN HUK FIGHTING

In front of a cheering mob of followers, Ramon Magsaysay, newly elected president of the Philippines, presents a cheerful, jubilant countenance, top. But the figures of his election campaign took its toll even of his admittedly strong constitution, so, before going to sleep he carefully doses himself, above, with the kind of medicine recommended in avert stomach ulcers and jumpy nerves. Even his tough military campaign against the rebellious Huks wasn't as tough as his political schedule—Central Press Canadian Photos.

MARSH HILL

Newly Decorated Church Holds Opening Service

MARSH HILL—On Sunday ideal autumn weather prevailed and several friends joined with the members of Marsh Hill United Church in the reopening service of their newly decorated church.

A beautiful carpet for the centre aisle of the church was presented by the Harmony Club.

Rev. J. W. Platt of Belleville, assisted the Rev. H. Giffin during the service. Mr. Giffin based his message on "The Church in Which We Worship" with 1 Chorn. 28:10 as text, "Take heed now for the Lord hath chosen thee to build a house for the sanctuary, be strong, and do it."

"By nature man is a worshiping creature, the first and most primitive centre of worship was outside in the surroundings of man's nature. Secondly in the story of the Children of Israel the worship centre is under a great tent, not outside any more. Thirdly King Solomon built the beautiful religious temple at Jerusalem. That was the beginning of worshiping the true and Holy God within a church building.

"Today, churches have sprung up all over the world wherever the seed of the glorious Gospel took root and grew.

"Today we need the church and its teachings as never before, through these very vital years of historic value."

The Frankford male quartet favored with beautiful selections.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Campbell and family of Guelph.

Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Platt, of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Burton Bateman of Springbrook, were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. John Brown.

Sparing Rod Filling Jails Says Chairman

TORONTO (CP) — Sparing the rod only fills the jails, chairman W. J. Scott of the Ontario legislatures committee on reform institutions said Wednesday.

He took issue with A. R. Virgin, director of the reforms department, on the merits of corporal punishment.

Mr. Virgin took the position that spanking or strapping does not cure the wrongdoer. He maintained that an across-the-table discussion attitude is more effective with children verging on the delinquent.

Mr. Stewart contended there should be a return to the era when erring children were taken to the woodshed and soundly spanked. Members of the committee agreed with him.

Tobacco Worms Become Menace

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—The tobacco hornworm is rapidly becoming a menace to southern Ontario tobacco growers, the Entomological Society of Ontario was told Wednesday.

F. G. Manson and R. J. McClanahan, of the Chatham laboratory of entomology, told the society in a paper that until 1952 the hornworm was rarely seen in Canada. Believed to have been introduced into Canada by moths flying across Lake Erie, the worms were first discovered at Leamington. A year later, they have spread along the lake to St. Williams and north to Byron. Their damage to the tobacco crop is increasing rapidly.

The scientists were told the hornworm is under control in areas being treated with DDT, but were warned that many tobacco farmers were not aware of the danger.

Judgment Reserved

LONDON (CP)—Judgment was reserved by Mr. Justice W. F. Potter in a case in the Exchequer Court of Canada here Wednesday in which Clarence Walker, St. Thomas, is seeking damages from the federal government.

The claim stems from collision of an army truck driven by RCAF Cpl. J. J. Steinke, with a car driven by Walker in St. Thomas Nov. 12, 1951.

The crown admitted Walker was in no way to blame but asserted no civil responsibility on the grounds that Cpl. Steinke was not driving the truck under authorization.

Fleming Gives Reason for Early General Election

OTTAWA (CP) — Donald Fleming, (PC—Toronto Eglinton) said Wednesday the government called a summer election so it would not be embarrassed by the bumper wheat crop this fall.

Speaking in the throne speech debate, he said the government had chosen about as inconvenient a time as possible for the election. It wanted the vote before the bumper Prairie crop had its pressing effect on the wheat market.

He said the governments legislative program was "thin and puny as outlined in the throne speech. There was no mention of a national health plan though Liberal candidates during the election campaign had predicted such a scheme would be introduced at this session of Parliament.

The throne speech contained no mention of the "infamous" Esmerger Powers Act, which expires May 31, 1954. If the government had made up its mind to renew the act, it should have the courage to tell the house.

CREATES NEW POWER—Ontario and New York State plan to turn the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence river into a lake, in a dramatic plan to develop 2,200,000 horsepower of electrical energy which they will share equally. This map shows a closeup of the area where the lake will be located. Part of the $700,000,000 St. Lawrence seaway and power project, a dam will be built at the eastern end of the proposed lake from the upstream end of American-owned Barnhart Island to the American mainland. A powerhouse will be built a short distance farther east, near Cornwall, Ont., from Barnhart island to the Canadian shore. It will be split at the international boundary into two equal-sized structures. (CP Photo).

TOWN TO DISAPPEAR — The town of Iroquois, eastern Ontario, is one of the communities which will disappear beneath the swirling waters of a new 35-mile lake to be created as part of the St. Lawrence Seaway and power project. People will leave the doomed shoreline in a district west of Cornwall, Ont., and everything moveable taken away. Trees will be cleared from the countryside as the huge program gets under way. This is a Malak photo. (CP photo).

Dramatic Construction Job To Turn Rapids Into Lakes In Seaway-Power Project

The big job in building the deep St. Lawrence Seaway will be in the International Rapids area below Cornwall, Ont. This story, one of a series, describes the engineering plans for this multi-million dollar power and canal project. Tomorrow: What the seaway means to Canada.

By FORREST RHODE

Canadian Press Business Editor

Ontario and New York state plan to turn the international Rapids section of the St. Lawrence river into a lake, in one of the most dramatic events ever to occur within sight-seeing distance of human populations.

They plan to develop 2,200,000 horsepower of electrical energy which they will share equally.

It is part of a project which also includes Canada's plan to make a deep seaway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic by replacing 14-foot canals with 27-foot canals in the 115 miles between Prescott, Ont., and Montreal.

The International Rapids section runs 47 miles from Chimney Point, N.Y., four miles below Prescott and Ogdensburg, N.Y., to St. Regis, N.Y., below Cornwall, Ont. Its turbulent waters drop the river 85 feet through the Galops Rapids Flat, Terran Point and Long Sault Rapids.

PRESENT PLANS

Plans are not final, and opposing American interests have instituted court action in an effort to hold up the project, but what is proposed is about as follows:

Some nine miles below Chimney Point, a dam will be built from Iroquois Point on the Canadian side to above Point Rockaway, N.Y. It will have a 2,180-foot concrete section and an over-all length of 3,600 feet; will rise 118 feet above foundations; and have 40 gate openings, each 50 feet wide.

It will regulate the flow of water out of Lake Ontario and cause some increase in the water level some five miles back. It will pour Great Lakes water into a narrow lake some 35 miles long and four miles wide.

At the eastern end of the proposed lake, another dam will be built at the foot of the Long Sault Rapids, from the upstream end of American-owned Barnhart Island to the American mainland. It will have a 2,850-foot concrete section and an over-all length of 7,240 feet; will rise 145 feet above foundations and have 30 spillways, each 50 feet wide.

BIG POWERHOUSE

A short distance farther east at the downstream end of Barnhart Island and about 3½ miles above Cornwall, a powerhouse will be built from the island to the Canadian shore. It will be 3,500 feet long, 125 feet wide, 145 feet above foundations, and will be split at the international boundary into two equal-sized structures. Each half will produce 1,100,000 horsepower from a head of water averaging 84 feet.

The structures will have a 50-foot sluiceway between them and 75-foot shiplocks at each shore end to clear winter ice.

This dam and powerhouse and the dam at Iroquois 35 miles upstream, along with some shore dikes, will contain the lake.

Temporary coffer dams will be built and temporary channels cut to divert the river flow sufficiently to give "dry" working conditions at the dam and power installations.

NO DIFFERENCE

These things must not interfere with present local power installations, such as that at Messena, N.Y., at least until the new power is ready to replace them, or with operation of the existing 14-foot canals, until the new ones are built.

The work will give us much of the drama usually reserved for frontier works like Labrador iron ore and Kitimat aluminum—with something of the wide-sky, camps will be erected, construction roads built, railway sidings put in.

People will have to leave doomed shorelines, saying good-bye to old homes and scenes behind them, their communities of up to 1,000 population will be torn down and everything moveable taken away. Trees will be cleared from the countryside.

At last, the scene will be set for our lake. About three years after construction starts, the waters will build up rapidly.

RAPIDS TO VANISH

The Long Sault Rapids, which now fling themselves through a 42-foot, two-mile descent, will fade into silence.

Islands will disappear or become smaller.

The water will inundate some 16½ square miles on the mainland, about equal to the area of Hamilton.

Near Iroquois dam, the 1,000 people of the town of Iroquois will be in new homes elsewhere and Iroquois will be engulfed.

A few miles down from Iroquois, the town of Morrisburg, population 1,800, will watch its former main street go under and turn to do business on a new thoroughfare. The sites of the smaller communities of East Williamsburg, Aultsville, Farran Point, Dickenson Landing, Wales, Moulinette and Mille Roche will disappear.

2,000 AFFECTED

More than 3,000 persons, 2,000 homes and businesses, 50 farms, 300 summer cottages, 30 miles of railway and 45 miles of main highway will have been relocated.

All this is on the Canadian side which has most of the affected settled land. On the American side, the lake water will creep up the shorelines and touch the town of Waddington.

The new lake will provide not only water for power but a seaway for ships. We will enter it near Iroquois through one lock with a small drop. We will leave it near the Barnhart powerhouse, and drop more than 80 feet in two locks. These three locks, with 27-foot depth, will take the place of the 11 present 14-foot locks.

AT HALFWAY MARK

Our 80-foot drop has placed us just upstream from Cornwall, near the entrance to Lake St. Francis, an expansion of the St. Lawrence river about half-way on the 2,200-mile trip from the Lakehead to the Atlantic. We have descended from the 602.2-foot elevation on Lake Superior to 153 feet above sea level.

From Cornwall we pass through Lake St. Francis, with a gentle drop of one foot in 26 miles, then through 13 miles and five locks of the Soulanges Canal on the north side of the St. Lawrence river, dropping 83 feet into Lake St. Louis, another expansion of the river.

When our project is finished, however, we shall probably go through Quebec's vast new Beauharnois power canal on the south side of the river, built with navigation needs in mind, and drop into Lake St. Louis through two new locks.

We pass through Lake St. Louis, some 15 miles, to Lachine and drop 46 feet through five locks into Montreal harbor. We probably shall have two locks there under the project.

FUTURE DEVELOPMENT

Several schemes have been suggested for the Lachine and Montreal harbor developments, depending somewhat upon whether Quebec undertakes to harness the 1,200,000 horsepower available in the Lachine Rapids.

Among the proposals for Montreal and vicinity are:

A power dam below Victoria Bridge for the prospective Lachine Rapids power; long dikes on either side of the harbor to protect property from flooding; creation of a harbor pool from below Victoria Bridge to Longue Pointe, by construction of a dam near Ste. Therese Island. The pool would mean that the entrance to Montreal from downstream and and upstream would be by lock.

Further schemes envisage reclamation of flooded land on the south side of the river between St. Lambert and Boucherville; expansion of harbor facilities on the south side of the river; and opening of a new industrial area between Montreal and Varennes.

Leaving Montreal there is for 120 miles a 25.5-foot - channel through the winding river to Quebec. It is planned to deepen the channel to 35 feet.

This stretch and the deeper river beyond drop us another 12 feet until we enter and pass through the Gulf of St. Lawrence and head out into the Atlantic.

UNDERWATER HAZARD

The pressure at 30,000 foot ocean depth is equal to about 4½ tons to the square inch.

Mustangs Place Five Men On Intercollegiate All-Stars

By JIM BATTABLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — The University of Western Ontario Mustangs, who didn't give coach Johnny Metras many playoff berths when the college football season started, dominate the Intercollegiate Union's all-star team this year.

The 1955 "dream" squad, selected for The Canadian Press by coaches, sports writers and sports broadcasters in the five Intercollegiate cities, lists five Mustang players, three more than from any other team. Not bad for a club that had graduation blues.

The Mustangs, who meet University of Toronto for the college championship here Saturday, were almost unanimous choices for the five positions. Varsity, McGill Redmen and Queen's University Golden Gaels each took two.

MACS LAND ONE SPOT

The only McMaster University player to hit the mythical team was quarter Joe Kosakowski, a strapping 22-year-old sophomore. Despite his great play, the Macs' studes failed to win in six games.

The selectors all but overlooked the Western backfield. They chose the Mustangs' big Gino Fracas, who made the team last year, for a halfback spot and went to the line for the other four Western stars.

The team has four repeaters from the 1953 all-star team. Fracas, Western's Jack Wyatt at guard, McGill's Fred Wilmot, a place-kicking specialist, at end, and Steve Oneschuk, Varsity halfback.

The teams:

Flying Wing—Al Halg, Varsity.

Halves—Gino Fracas, Western; Steve Oneschuk, Varsity; Ron Stewart, Queen's.

Quarter—Joe Kosakowski, Mcmaster.

Centre—Gary Lewis, Queen's.

Guards—Jack Thompson, Western; Jack Wyatt, Western.

Tackles—Ted Roman, Western; Clyde Whitman, McGill.

Ends—Bob Turner, Western; Fred Wilmot, McGill.

VOTING WEIGHTED

The selectors, whose votes were weighted to give equal balloting strength to each city in the union, weren't unanimous on any player but voted the backfield a runaway margin.

Fracas was given 54 points of a possible 60, mainly on his scoring performance. He won the scoring title with six touchdowns and 44 singles for 44 points. Oneschuk and Ron Stewart of Queen's tied for second with 40 points apiece. Al Halg, a 22-year-old product of Toronto schools and one of the best ball-carriers in the league, got only token opposition from three other players nominated for the flying wing position.

TWO-WAY VOTE

Gary Lewis of Queen's, a first-year medical student from Belleville, Wash., polled 33 votes for the centre spot. Western's Doug Drew was the only other nominee for the position. He received 27 votes.

Kosakowski got quite a run from quarter Don Getty of Western. Getty polled 30 points—seven fewer than Kosakowski.

Western's Jack Thompson and Jack Wyatt were far ahead for guard positions. Ted Roman of the Mustangs and McGill's Clyde Whitman were shooins for tackles.

Wilmot, a flying wing with McGill last year, was an easy winner for an end position. Western's Bob Turner was threatened only by Don Smith of Varsity.

CLOSE, WHAT?

In a high scoring, dizzy-doodling battle the Doran-less Mexes dropped a close 5-7 decision to the rejuvenated Kingston Cooleyers down east o' here last night. The Mexes blew a four-goal third period lead as the Goodies, always a last-minute squad, reared back to score a trio of markers within three minutes of the amen beat. The Goodies were spurked by George MacGregor, who fired home four payoff shots and was credited with an assist. "Red" Doran was not among those present, being in Toronto on a recreational course, but the merrel lop expects to be around Sat. eve when the Orillia Pontiacs are the guests of the Mexes. It seems as though there is not a "weak" goalie in this high-powered senior "B" group. Last night Ken Johnson rose to some kind of heights in kicking out the Mexe drives and the same goes for Rolly Sarault in the Belleville nets. Kingston fans are supporting their team but good. Last night over 2,000 saw the 111 and Art Casterion informs us that is the average for the games played thus far in the young season.

"OKEY-WA-WA"

A flaming touchdown-hungry horde of Tiger Cats flashed out on the Hamilton Civic Stadium gridiron yesterday afternoon and ripped, torn and clawed the already injury-riddled Montreal Alouettes in a 37-12 fracas.

It was the first game of the best-of-three Big Four final series and if the halo-crested Ti-Cats play the same calibre of football, get the same breaks, takes and opportunities next Sunday "they warn't be no third game, boh."

Grumpy from a two-day knockdown from "Kid Fix" we radio'd the game and board a team that could do nothing wrong, with the exception of a couple of first-quarter fumbles, ramp over a squad that lacked, but definitely, its seasonal color, effect and both offensive and defensive power.

The Jungle Cats were clicking like Carmen's castanets. Pitch, pass or plunge, the rampaging Tigers caused rounds of thunderous "Okey-Wa-Wa" to echo in the mountain air. Their defence was superb. Their offence was pay-dirt plus while the gifted toe of Tip Logan, Queen's University's gift to Hamilton, smashed the pigskin through the uprights five times to bring his total of consecutive converts to 77.

But do not sell these Larks short. It sounded as if they had gotten one of the worst games of the season off their shoulders. They mixed the smiles of Lady Luck, Old Man Breaks, and mainly the power to get themselves properly organized. The team that broke the Argonauts' hearts is not out of the picture by a long shot. You'll see or hear a lot different game next Sunday, we betcha.

UNDKE WAY!

Artificial ice in the Hamilton Crawford Arena at Marston, which gets the official ceremonial opening tomorrow night, is a boon to minor hockey in the mid-section of the county. And Doug Patterson, Stirling exec. member of the OMHA, lost no time in getting things under way. The Hamilton officials concluded with their end that result was the hockey moppets of the district will get in a pre-season league, that should whip them into shape for the OMHA League play and playdowns.

Patterson has organized teams of bantam, midget and juvenile squads from Stirling, Marmora, Tweed, Havelock, Coe Hill and other points and the various loops have already gotten in a night's play.

Note here says the annual confab of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association is set for the King Eddy, Toronto, December 4 - 5th. The annual sees the election of officers among other important items. It is hoped that "Lower Canada" will send a strong delegation to the pre-confabber. Over 300 delegates are expected, and with minor hockey on a definite upsurge in this part of the province, it is only right that the various clubs' associations send representatives to see what goes on. Doug Patterson will likely be up for election again, and we can't think of a better guy to represent Eastern Ontario than the likable fellow. He won his spurs last year and this, and has done a grand job for his part of the province. He is extremely popular with other members of the executive and made a distinct hit with delegates at the 1952-53 session.' Let's have him back.

Inspired Bengals Rip Through For 6 Converted Touchdowns; Als' Bobbles Play Big Part

HAMILTON (CP)—A defensive wingline loaded with all-star material took up the "self-rescue" battle cry of Tiger-Cat football fans Wednesday as Hamilton mauled Montreal Alouettes 37-12 in the opening game f the best-f-three Big Four final.

It was the worst licking the high-powered Als have taken all year and victory gave hope to Tiger-Cat supporters that this year, after four frustrative seasons of watching the Argos go out in the playoffs, they might succeed to the Nov. 29 Grey Cup final at Toronto. If Tiger-Cats' duplicated their performance in the second game at Hamilton Sunday, the Als are dead.

With 13,000 fans in the Civic Stadium stands and countless thousands others viewing it via television, Tiger-Cats powered for six converted touchdowns, four of them in the second quarter. And they partayed six Montreal mistakes into 31 of their points.

Directed by quarter Ed Songin, Tiger-Cats ripped through the Montreal line, shirted the ends and snared passes for 424 yards, 132 rushing and 291 passing.

DEFENSIVE STARS

Tiger-Cats, who had seven men chosen on The Canadian Press Big Four defensive team this year, permitted the Montreal backs a net field most of the afternoon in toss quarter Sam Etcheverry for losses on attempted pass plays. And the Tiger-Cat line held the Als to a net gain of 13 yards rushing, harried them into errors and miscues that set up the majority of Hamilton scoring plays.

And while the tank brigade did a tremendous job on defence, the backs poured through to take three touchdown passes from Songin, one a 100-yard pass-and-run play to rookie Ey Brown.

Lou Kusserow, former Columbus University half, scored three touchdowns. He took two touchdown passes from Songin, tossed a touchdown pass to Ralph Tenby and figured prominently in the other Hamilton major scored by hard-plunging Merle Hapes on a seven-yard smash.

Ted Urban, formerly of Queen's Golden Gaels and a three-year player with the Ottawa Rough Riders, all six touchdowns to run his string of conversions to 77 in a row. Fraser scored Hamilton's other point with a single in the first quarter.

End Ray Poole, placement-kicking specialist, and end Ted O'Quinn caught touchdown passes from Etcheverry for Montreal's only majors. Poole converted both.

Experts Stumped on Trafton Strategy For Sat. Bombers-Beaches Battle

By AL VICKERY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP)—Everyone is trying to predict coach George Trafton's strategy for Saturday's Grey Cup sudden-death semi-final when his mighty Blue Bombers take on the light but speedy Toronto Balmy Beach.

The experts already have declared Bombers a "shoo-in," but they've stumped as to what method Trafton will use to try to eliminate the champions of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

Most guess that Trafton will send his first-stringers in at the start and try to build up a comfortable margin, then come back in the second half with his Canadian bench.

If that's Trafton's system then some 16,000 fans on hand will get a glimpse of the squad which sidelined Edmonton Eskimos 30-24 in the thrilling-packed western final at Edmonton Saturday night.

Some rabbinits insist the Canadians, led by former McGill quarterback Geoff Crain, will get into the game at the opening whistle. If they aren't clicking, then first squad, with either Jack Jacobs or Joe Zaleski at the helm, can be called in.

HOT RIVER IMPORTS

The "Canadians-first" advocators claim Trafton will not take a chance on his starry imports being injured unless necessary. The latter side says a player can be injured just as easily in practice sessions as in regular games.

The coach isn't saying until game time. He's had the whole team working out at least once since their day off Sunday, with all three quarterbacks getting an equal share at calling the shots.

Emphasis Wednesday night was on passing, and the ball-handlers and receivers looked sharp.

After the hour drill, the team went back to the field house.

On the bulletin board was a clipping of an eastern sports-writer's column. Underlined was a paragraph which spoke of the Beach's terrific spirit.

After reading the clipping, Neil Armstrong, offensive end and all-star defensive half from the Philadelphia Eagles, remarked:

"You can't take a club like that lightly. I hear they're light but can run all day. You never can tell about these sudden-death affairs."

Their opposition was again the Norwood Rockets Legionaires, the same club that defeated them in the, western final last year and went on to win the Dominion title. The Legionaires held an unbeaten string of 24 games extending over the last two seasons before losing to the Redskins 16-13 here 10 days ago.

NO INJURY JINX

The Redskins' jinx far Redskins survived an injury jinx that dogged them from the pre-season training camp right on to the finals including the western final. Despite a long string of casualties the Redskins finished their five league starts but finished up in a three-game losing streak.

Coach Jack (Gabby) James says most of the injured have recovered sufficiently for the Montreal series. Lineman Bing Adams who suffered a broken jaw in the western final.

The Redskins will pick up a former Redskin in Montreal—Dennis Brophy, star quarter for the University of New Brunswick who played four games with the Redskins this season and was registered with the Canadian Rugby Union which makes him eligible to compete in the final.

Bombers Warned 'Be On Time' By CRU Prexy

SARNIA (CP) —The Canadian Rugby Union said Wednesday it will caution Winnipeg Blue Bombers not to be late for the Grey Cup classic.

Norm Perry, CRU president, said secretary Harry McBrien of Toronto has been told to advise the Blue Bombers about having their departure time for Toronto to the last minute and take the chance of being held up by bad flying weather.

The action came after the Blue Bombers, heavily favored to whip Toronto Balmy Beach in the Grey Cup semi-final game in Winnipeg Saturday, said Coop planned to fly to Toronto Nov. 27, the day before the game. McBrien is in Winnipeg.

Western clubs usually make the four-hour plane trip last five days or a week before the game.

Come from Behind in Third To Score Trio of Quickies In Wide-Open Senior B Battle

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 19. — Three fast goals, two of them packed up by swift George Macgregor, turned impending defeat into victory last night in the Community Memorial Centre when the sternly challenged Goodyears shaded the Belleville Memos by 8 to 7 and put Oshawa's group-leading mates into one game. It was the most exciting O.H.A. Senior B contest of the season and it was attracted an attendance of 2,279, only three below the high mark for the loop.

Attackers were knotted at three all in a kaleidoscopic show in which the rival goalkeepers were heavily assailed. Ron Hesult, an Ottawan guarding the twine for the Memos, made twenty saves while Ken Johnson turned aside or stopped a total of eighteen. The visitors who led at the end of the second period by 4 to 3, were tripped by a hurricane of all-out attacking early in the final session and before they solved the riddle Ron Murray and George MacGregor, the latter a two-way counter, had salvaged the points.

In securing the Goyermen lost an opportunity to force a second place decision with the whipping of Oshawa. They did, however, make a favorable impression and showed that, regardless if Cecil Doran, coach and centre ace, had been in action, Dorans will be Toronto and his absence was unavoidable.

FIRST PENALTIES.

Only eight penalties were inflicted by the referees, Maurice Walsh and Louis Locompte, and five of the sentences were meted out in the first period. Vernon Gogwer, who directed the team, took the lone trip to the cooler on two occasions but won none of the debates.

George MacGregor, skating and swerving in old time form, paced the attackers with four goals and an assist, it was the finishing effort of the second. Ron Murray, playmaker on the MacGregor-Callin line, checked in with a total and three assists while the wily Callin set up two scoring plays. The line, accounting for five goals and eight assists, far overshadowed all others.

Eight counters were registered in a wide open first period and each team netted four. MacGregor, aided by Murray and Callin, set a see-saw scoring parade at 4.16 but the Belles struck back for two swift counters when Keith McDonald hit the rigging at the five minute mark and "Duke" Doran found the range at the thirty-two seconds later. Jack White with Bob Loudry and Clint Tinkess assisting, got the equalizer.

FAST ACTION.

The end-to-end rushing continued at a brisk pace and there were no penalties. Pete Jones, attacking in conjunction with Dave Jones and Jake Wade, shot the visitors ahead at 8.28 but MacGregor, with Callin and Murray collaborating, got that one back fifty seconds later. Edwin Duncan replied at 11.55 but Goodyears again drew up on even terms with Don Bellringer the marksman at 16.02. Two minutes late Tommy Goodfellow drew the lone penalty of the session the offence being holding.

Following the intermission the rival "offences exhibited much the stand-off improvement that attacking gunners were turned back empty-handed until Jack White, aided by MacGregor and Ted Murray, Jr. Nicholson broke the spell at 12.40 while Pete Jones was serving a penalty. Sciences by Richardson, Bob Taylor and Jones had altered the former trend of play.

At the 17.26 mark Pete Jones redeemed himself when he got the tying counter unaided. The reaction was electric as both teams took turns in showering rubber at the cagemen.

Sarnall and Johnson made several fine stops. The Duncan twins and Doran combined and broke the stalemate on a shot by Erwin Duncan at 18.45 after the close play of the session Jack Wardhaugh drew a penalty for high sticking and it proved very costly.

Forty seconds after the final period began Murray took a pass from Nicholson and banged the rubber behind MacGregor, aided by Joe Watts, lifted Goodyears into the lead at 1.50 the second counter aided against the short-handed Memos. Wardhaugh returned but Goodyears were in full flight and maintained the advantage to 5, were tripped in a hurricane of all-out attacking early in the final session and before they solved the riddle Ron Murray and George MacGregor, the latter a two-way counters, had salvaged the points.

In securing the Goyermen lost an opportunity to force a second place decision with the whipping of Oshawa. They did, however, make a favorable impression and showed that, regardless if Cecil Doran, coach and centre ace, had been in action, Dorans will be Toronto and his absence was unavoidable.

Record Crowd Will See Junior Final

SASKATOON (CP) — With the thermometer reading about 25 degrees above zero, Saskatoon Hilltops didn't cherish any thoughts of an outdoor practice Wednesday as they got ready for Saturday's Dominion Junior football final against Windsor AKO at Griffiths Stadium here.

But coach Bob Sirn said:

"If you think it is too cold out there, just run a little faster" and it was the team's motto as they worked for more than an hour in the chilly weather. The club ran through plays, passed and started setting up a variety of defences against the attack after the close game between champions.

Halfback Bill Trout is on the sidelines with his back injury and won't hear any medical advice until Friday. He was joined by Ernie Gulka, one of Saturday's stars, suffering an injured finger.

Before the practice ended, starry tackle Ray Syrnyk suffered a charley horse but treatment will probably cure the club captain before game time.

A paying crowd of some 7,200 fans will see Hilltops and Windsor battle for the Canadian championship. It will be a record football crowd here and probably the largest ever to witness the national title.

Ordinarily Griffiths Stadium will accommodate 5,000 customers.

SEASONAL SEATS

An additional 1,300 seats have been installed on the east grandstand will stand or watch from benches.

Ticket sale was stopped Tuesday after 3,000 reserved and admission tickets had been sold.

Sport in Brief

OPEN FORECAST

TORONTO (CP) — What's the weather outlook for Grey Cup day, Nov. 28?

Fred Turnbull, head weather man at the public weather office in Malton, says it's too early to start guessing about the day of Canada's annual football classic.

But he did the best best thing and dug back into Toronto weather records for Nov. 28 over the last 70 years and came up with this information:

It will it rain or snow? That's a 50-50 chance. It rained or snowed 35 times in the last 70 years Nov. 28 so the Canadian Rugby Union championship may be in for a wetout.

2. It.it snows, how much? Maybe just a flurry—a tenth of an inch or two; or it could be like 1887 or 1910 when the fall was 4½ inches. By way of extra information Turnbull mentioned that 13 inches fell before the 1950 Grey Cup game, played Nov. 25.

3. How cold is it? The safest guess is the long-term average, about 38 degrees. But it it's like 1871, look out! It was 14 above. On the other hand, it was a sunny 60 in 1909.

4. Cloudy or bright? The odds, on the 70-year run, are for cloudy but there's a fair with a same law of averages it could be sunny—for five straight years Nov. 28 has been a cloudy day.

What does the past records mean? "Not a thing," says Turnbull. "On Grey Cup day, anything can happen."

GAY TIME ON SEA TRIP

LONDON (AP)—Gay Time, four-year-old gelding with a long race price tag who once raced in the colors of Bing Crosby, won his first sea trip—12,000 miles to Japan.

Now owned by the Japanese government, Gay Time is due at Yokohama Dec. 15 after a 31-day voyage.

The colt ran in the Queen's colors this year after the national stud, administered by the ministry of agriculture, bought Gay Time for $140,000.

It was planned to retire the colt to stud, but officials decided to keep him one more season at the four-year-old. He won one race in five starts and developed a throat infection.

He was sold to the Japanese government at a loss of $86,000.

Frontenacs Face Suspension If Goalie Used

TORONTO (CP)—W. B. (Baldy) George of Kemptville, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said in a telephone interview from Picton that he had ordered the Quebec branch to suspend Quebec Frontenacs if the club continued to play goalkeeper Jacques Marcotte in the Quebec junior league.

"I told the Quebec branch last Friday to suspend the team if the boy plays with Frontenacs," George said, "it haven't had a report since then and I don't know if he has played with that club or not."

Much fuss has been made over the youngster since he signed with Frontenacs. He played last season with Quebec Citadelles, champions of the Quebec Junior Hockey League and now operating in the junior A division of the Ontario Hockey Association.

Citadelles claimed he was still their property and carried the case to the CAHA which ordered Marcotte back to Citadelles.

The Quebec Amateur Hockey Association notified Frontenacs that the club would be suspended if it continued to play Marcotte and no report has been received. Nov. 12, a petition for an injunction by Frontenacs to restrain the QAHA from acting in a threatened suspension of the club was refused. The team is attempting an appeal.

Pegs to Get 3,000 Tickets For Cup Classic

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Winnipeg football club announced Wednesday for distributing its share of Grey Cup tickets.

Under the Canadian Rugby Union set-up, Winnipeg will receive about 3,000 tickets if Blue Bombers advance to the Dominion final Nov. 28. If Bombers lose to Toronto Balmy Beach, they will get 1,000.

Allotments will be restricted, the club said in newspaper advertisements, and "in no case will more than two tickets be allocated to any person."

Tickets will be provided to those going to Toronto for the final, with preference to: 1. Members of season ticket holders; 2. Season ticket holders only.

Applications from those going to Toronto have been filled, pay tickets left will be allocated by draw to members and season ticket holders not travelling to Toronto.

Blues' Rookies Play Big Part In 3-1 Win Over Black Hawks; Leafs-Canadiens Play Tonight

By WALTER GRAY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

The last dog sales were down in Madison Square Garden Wednesday night.

Only 8,176 fans watched Frank Boucher's fighting New York Rangers defeat the cellar-dwelling Chicago Black Hawks 3-1 in a National Hockey League game.

But a lack of spectator interest, a letdown after the recent huge crowds, didn't stop the Broadway Blues from giving their faithful followers their money's worth.

The victory was the Rangers' fourth over the Hawks this season and their third win in six starts. They tied one and lost two.

Andy Bathgate, recruited last week from Vancouver Canucks who has led the Western Hockey League scoring, notched his first NHL goal in the first period. Ron Murphy, a former linemate of Bathgate's with Guelph Biltmores of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series and rookie Camille Henry assisted. Murphy with Don (Bones) Raleigh, also assisted on Harry Howell's tie-breaker in the third period. Paul Ronty, with the help of Wally Hergesheimer and Ky Hibbard, scored the third goal in the final period.

Murray Costello scored Chicago's goal.

GOING STRONG

Tonight, Toronto Maple Leafs currently the hottest team in the league with a record of eight straight games without a loss, invade leading Montreal Canadiens in Montreal.

Canadiens have lost three, tied one and won one of their last five games. Montreal's high-priced rookie, Jean Beliveau and Dickie Moore have been skating this week. Beliveau may be on the line-up again within 10 days but Moore may not be ready for another three weeks.

Detroit Red Wings, tied with the Leafs for runner-up spot, also tries

Stewart Heads Rural Hockey

GALT (CP)—R. G. Stewart of Barrie was re-elected president of the Ontario Rural Hockey Association. He succeeds C. Y. Kessman of Tavistock.

The meeting decided that intermediate players shall be drawn from incorporated centres of populations of 1,000 and under, rural township areas and small community centres. The last loca assessment figures will be used in determining the population. No change was decided.

Among other amendments passed was the ruling that the secretary of all clubs which is being protested against should receive a copy of the protest not later than 48 hours after the game involved.

The financial statement showed the association with a surplus of almost $5,500.

Other officers elected: Ross Fenton, Ingersoll, vice-president; J.C. Feasby, Kitchener, second vice-president; Don Beer, Brougham third vice-president; J. J. McFarlane, Galt, Ontario Hockey Association executive representative; H. E. Edwards, Welland and R. J. Barrick, Wainfleet, auditors.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I love Lucy" keeps on rolling along.

The Lucille Ball-Desi Arnaz television show stays on its merry course, despite Red headlines, critics' knocks and conflicting audience ratings. Sunk of the latter show "Lucy" still holding the No. 1 spot it has enjoyed for the last year or two. Other surveys claim "Dragnet" has overtaken the Monday night domestic blues.

The "Lucy" troupe isn't worried, says Jess Oppenheimer, sharpeyed producer and named writer of the program.

"Ratings are nice, but they don't mean everything," he explained. "The important thing is audience acceptance, and I think we've got that. There was something wrong in the big lead we had over other shows last season. The situation wasn't good for TV. The other shows had to improve or something had to happen."

I asked if he thought the show had been affected by the sensational headlines about Lucille Ball's having registered as a Communist voter 17 years ago.

NOT WORRIED

"No, I don't think it has had any effect," he remarked. "We were worried about it at the time, but now we can't notice any reaction. The number of crank letters we receive are infinitesimal compared to how many we get commending Lucille."

There have been some critical raps about the sameness of some of the "Lucy" plots. What about it?

"We realize, too, that we can't go on doing the same things." Oppenheimer commented. "Perhaps we have had too many shows about Lucy wanting to get into show business or about the fights with their neighbors."

This shows how aware TV producers are of public relations. Jack Webb told me that he altered the monotoned dialogue on "Dragnet" after fan mail and critical barbs attacked it. Likewise, Milton Berle switched his whole format when sagging ratings told him something new had to be added. Now he's back among the winners.

JOCKEY KILLED

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Former jockey William (Peanuts) McCaddie, 43, of Lynn, Mass., was killed Wednesday when a horse he was exercising at the Fair Grounds race track jumped the rail and fell on him.

Witnesses said the horse, Hatfield, bore out against the rail at the first turn. Then as it completed the turn, the horse jumped the rail, spilled McCaddie and tumbled on top of the jockey. The horse was uninjured.

Right before your very eyes may be the life-saving play that you may not see. Look deep into the hearts of the cards in front of you. Some amazing things may be found there.

A honey of a play is in the deal shown here:

♦Q J 6 5
♣K 8 4

WEST
♠J 10 9

♣A J 6 5 2

SOUTH
♠K 8 7 6 5 4 2
♦None
♣A 7 3 2

South was shoved into a contract of six spades and the opening lead from west was the trump Jack. Declarer let it run to his south king, learning on the way that east started with no trumps.

A south heart was led toward dummy and the queen finesse stood up. The lead from west on this first heart trick was revealing. If east could not take the trick, west had left, the lone heart king.

West also had the two unseen trumps, south knew now. Ruff of a third heart will permit west to overruff or get a trump trick. This with the inevitable loss of a club trick will kill the contract.

Pulling the trumps first would prevent west from getting in a trump trick. But it is simply trading tricks. Because it will not leave enough entries to dummy to use established hearts.

So, declarer hits on another plan; a novel one. He simply led back from dummy a diamond. Instead of ruffing, south sluffed his remaining heart and was thus able to ruff a second heart.

The return of a club by the opponents left dummy's ace. A trump got into dummy. A small heart was ruffed by south and the west king of hearts fell. A trump was played to dummy and a return small heart ruffed.

Now a club to the king entered dummy. The ace and another heart were cashed, south sluffing both clubs. In this manner did declarer give up only one trick; a diamond he let them take. Such a play is tough to visualize; too easy to overlook. An ordinary player may live with himself after such an oversight. An expert would probably take the gaspipe.

HAWES SHIFT GAMES

CHICAGO (AP) — Two Chicago Black Hawks' home games with Detroit Red Wings, Dec. 18, and Boston Bruins, Jan. 21—will be played in Indianapolis, the Hawks' general manager, Bill Tobin said Wednesday.

He said a future game with New York Rangers also may be shifted to Indianapolis.

"We are shifting the games because of a previous agreement with the directors of the Indianapolis Chamber to help revive hockey interest in that city," said Tobin. "It is our plan to place a minor league franchise in Indianapolis next season."

U.S. Holds Key To World Trade States D. Gordon

DETROIT (CP)—President Donald Gordon of Canadian National Railways said Wednesday night the United States holds the key to international trade.

He made the statement in an address to the Detroit Bankers Club, Mr. Gordon said Canada and the United States should have a common concept about the principles of trade.

"Canada believes, however, it is the United States which is in the dominant position to take the lead in laying down such principles. The influence of the United States on the economic relations of the free world cannot be over-emphasized. In a major sense only a liberalization of United States commercial policy can create the atmosphere which will make an expansion of world trade possible."

Indians Scuttle Sarnia Tars 6-2 In Senior Clash

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa's Canadian Maroons are the fifth best team in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior B series. Defensively, Chatham is also fifth best in the loop. In the standings, Chatham occupies first.

Only the last two teams in the league have averages which justify their positions. Sarnia Sailors, who dropped a 6-2 decision to the Indians in Stratford during the league's only game Wednesday night, have scored an average of three goals a game—seventh best in the league. The Sailors are in seventh place. Their goals-against record of 4.58 is also seventh best. Niagara Falls Cataracts have a 2.22 goals-for average and a 3.55 goals-against mark—worst in the league in both divisions. The Cataracts are eighth in the standings.

OVERHOLTZER GETS TWO

Stratford, who moved into sole possession of fourth place by its victory, holds the figures of a sixth place club, but has never scored two goals to lead the Indians to their seventh victory in 15 games. They have lost eight.

Dinny Flanagan, Mickey Roth, Henry Jeopp and Lou Jones rounded out the Stratford total. McKennel shared goals for the Sailors.

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Timmins is second to Sudbury Wolves shut out Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians 5-0. Last year's league scoring champion, Gordie Bleale scored three goals. Hub Beaudry and Gerry Pollock fired the others.

Soo Indian Tigers meet the second-place Dutchmen in the only game of the OHA senior loop tonight. Sault Indians play Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds and the Soo Thunderbirds play Jasper in North Bay in NOHA action.

HE HAS FROOF

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP)—Police Inspector W. Needham can prove that the fish he couldn't land was a six-pound trout. After he hooked it, his reel jammed. The fish was quickly caught by another angler with Needham's line still hooked to it.

OLD "OLD BOY"

WALTHAM CROSS, England (CP)—The oldest "old boy" of Dewhurst school in this Hertfordshire town, 94-year-old Charles Lowin, had to pass up this year's annual reunion because of bad health. He was to have been the guest of honor.

Glad She Took Friends' Advice To Try Syntone

MRS. HARRIETT SMITH

In Poor Health 5 Years. Had To Let Everything Go, She Says — Nerves All Shot, Suffered From Dizzy Spells, Stomach Disorders Tired, Rundown, Pain of Relief.

The many friends of Mrs. Harriett Smith, 433 Lake Ave., Owen Sound, will be pleased to read of her experience with Syntone. She says that it is due to the advice of friends that she tried it. Now she is enjoying health and a feeling of well-being so many have told her they wish.

"Downward Side of Life"

"For years and years I had nervous breakdown and ever since that time I've been on the downward side of life" said Mrs. Smith. "My nerves were so bad that I was constantly on the verge of a nervous breakdown. I felt as though I'd get up in the morning but 7 just had to lie around trying to collect my thoughts. I dreaded with people or going anywhere. What food I ate seemed to set up gas and sour rising and heartburn. I suffered from dizzy spells and my stomach seemed to be troubled with headaches and nausea.

"Remarkable Improvement"

After Mrs. Smith has mentioned as one by so many of my friends I agreed to try it. Now, a few months ago, how glad I am I've been taking this medicine from day to day. Syntone has given me remarkable relief. I've gained in weight, am feeling tired all the time, my nerves are steadier, I sleep soundly and refreshed in the morning. Also, my digestion is greatly improved, the aches and pains are relieved and I am not getting nervous and dizzy spells and feeling that I must lie down.

This is not an uncommon experience with people who take Syntone. So many people have been helped by Syntone that it is now available in almost every community. It would be a wise thing to try it. Syntone are usually quickly helpful in relief of and frequently remedied in Belleville by Dolan The Druggist.

George B. Holgate Instantly Killed East Of City

Car, Transport Collide, Wife Not Seriously Hurt

George B. Holgate, 41, motor car salesman, of 15 Greenlawn Avenue, Belleville, father of four children, was instantly killed early this morning when the car which he was driving ripped into the side of a highway transport on No. 2 Highway east of Belleville.

Injured in the crash and in the Belleville General Hospital is Mrs. Holgate, both were thrown out of the car and were found beside the almost completely wrecked vehicle where it ended up in the ditch. Mrs. Holgate was said to be in serious condition, and is suffering mainly from shock.

The latest available report could be had from the hospital at a late hour this afternoon.

The fatal accident was given for the crash which took place on a wide curve in the highway. Visibility one way was dry and there was said to be no fog.

The accident was investigated by Provincial Constable Robertson.

BORN IN EDMONTON

The late Mr. Holgate was born in Edmonton, Alberta, 41 years ago being the son of Mrs. Mabel Holgate and the late Mr. George Holgate. He lived in the west until nineteen years ago when he moved to Belleville, and at the time has taken an active part in all phases of the community life of this district. He was well known and highly respected in the community.

When he first came to the city he operated a service station on Dundas Street and later travelled for the G.I.E. for a number of the past year he has been on the sales staff of Bigelow Motors and made a wide clientele in the city and district.

In his youth he was an accomplished athlete in hockey and baseball in the Edmonton district. He was a graduate of the University of Edmonton, and was prominent in track and field sports. Later in Belleville he was to be played rugby with the O.R.F.U. and was a star performer for many years in this sport. Mention he made his mark on the hockey rinks of the province and at one time was a linemate of Mac and Bun Cook.

A member of St. Margaret's-on-the-Bay Anglican Church, he is survived by his wife, the former Verna Sharland, two sons, Robert, 10, John 2, two daughters, Susan, 15, Judith 12, all at home; one brother, Allan Holgate of Toronto; one sister, Mrs. Gertrude Graham of Edmonton.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home; the funeral announcements is made elsewhere in this edition.

GEORGE S. WHITE UNDER CRITICISM IN PARLIAMENT

Charge Member Was Trying to Get New Car

OTTAWA (CP)—A member of Parliament has charged a fellow member with trying to get a new car from the Chrysler Corporation of Canada by "a form of legal blackmail."

Don Brown (L—Essex West) made the term, Thursday night in the Commons after referring to a speech made Tuesday by George S. White (PC—Simcoe East) (Protenac). He later withdrew the remark at the member's request.

Mr. White, a Madoc lawyer, had criticized the Chrysler Corporation in the government's proposals for an alleged defective car purchased by a client of his law firm. He described the car as a "lemon" and said the company provides no guarantee on its new cars.

Mr. Brown said the "client" was Mr. White himself and added:

"It certainly abhor the use of that type of term in this chamber. . . It is a form of legal blackmail and is certainly to be abhorred by the members of this House."

WHITE ABSENT

Mr. White was not in the chamber during the speech. Howard Green (PC—Vancouver-Quadra) objected to the phrase "legal blackmail" and Mr. Brown withdrew it at the request of Speaker Rene Beaudoin.

Mr. Beaudoin also stopped Mr. Brown when he attempted to read correspondence between the Chrysler Corporation and Mr. White dealing with complaints about a car purchased by Mr. Hastings-Frontenac member.

Mr. Brown, a lawyer in Windsor, Ont., said the corporation had no record of correspondence about complaints by a client of Mr. White.

He said Mr. White had used the Commons "for the purpose of airing personal grievances" and the "whole demand" had been for a new car in replacement.

GAS RAN OUT

The company had been willing to repair the car, "but I don't think there should be blackmailed into doing things beyond common sense."

Mr. Brown said dealers for the corporation give warranties backed by the company, not by "local dealmanship." The company also had been willing to have the car sent back to their Windsor factory for repairs, even though the warranty had expired with the first owner, if he could find—the axe—to dispatch the deer.

SOCIAL WORKERS

CALGARY (CP)—Forty-nine per cent of the social workers in Canada are men, it was reported here by Dr. A. E. Grauer, director of the Canadian Welfare Council. Previously, he said, this field was considered mainly the responsibility of women.

Israel Terms Big 3 Demand 'Step Backward from Peace'

BY OSGOOD CARUTHERS

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) The United States got ready today to launch the United Nations campaign that the Security Council vote the "strongest censure" of Communist Czechoslovakia for the Jordan border village of Kibya last month.

U. S. delegate James Wadsworth was prepared to present the belligerent demand to the 60-nation council supporting a resolution drafted by the U. K., Turkey and France. It terms the Oct. 14-15 assault on Kibya, in which about 53 Arabs died, a violation of the Palestine armistice.

Israel has branded the resolution as drafted "one-sided and disinclined to peace." Israeli delegate Abba Eban termed it not up to a bitter fight against it.

Jordan indicated it feels the draft is not severe enough. The Arab states are expected to push for council approval of a resolution in tougher language.

Israel, a UN member, and Jordan, a non-member, are appearing before the council as interested parties in the bitter border dispute. Neither has a vote in the council.

The Western draft held that the Kibya massacre was carried out by Israeli armed forces, as reported by the chief UN truce officer, Bernike. It expresses the "strongest censure of that action" and calls on Israel to "take effective measures to prevent all such actions in the future." It also asks the UN secretary-general Dag Hammarskjold to "explore" the need for more truce observers to watch over the touchy border area if he needs them.

Blackmore Defends Secretary Who Used Franking Privileges

OTTAWA (CP) — John Blackmore, Social Credit member for Lethbridge, says his secretary used his free mailing privilege without his knowledge and paid three "anti-Communist and not anti-Semitic" documents to the Calgary Jewish News.

He added that the anti-communist is not relevant to the work of Parliament then we had better close up this whole place of Parliament and go home."

State Secretary Pickergill earlier had said in the Commons the government is willing to have the name of Parliament whose franking privilege was used.

Mr. Pickergill explained the investigation after Edward T. Applewhaite, Jewish community leader the government is investigating an "abuse" of the franking privilege. The use of the frank for this purpose had been questioned in a Calgary Herald editorial published Wednesday in the Ottawa Journal.

ASKED FOR ENVELOPE

Mr. Pickergill said the documents included two pamphlets advertising books criticizing U.S. foreign policy under former presidents Truman and Roosevelt and a magazine published by senator Joseph McCarthy, Wisconsin Republican.

The editorial said the main object of the books advertised in the pamphlets was apparently to show that Dean Acheson and Harry Truman were subject to Communist influence in their policies.

Mr. Blackmore said most members of Parliament entrust their secretaries with the use of their frank for mailing unstamped letters to be sent through the mail free of charge. It may be used by private citizens in relation to the periods preceding and following a session.

Mr. Blackmore said that in the spring of 1953, he granted Miss Moore the privilege of using the frank provided it was for material relevant to the work of Parliament. However, Mr. Blackmore said he was not in Ottawa at the time the documents were mailed.

NOT IN ON IT

"I wasn't in on this at all," Mr. Blackmore said. "I did not discuss the franking of mail with Miss Moore between Aug. 10 and the time I arrived in Ottawa for the session.

"I can see why Miss Moore would conclude that the documents forwarded to the Calgary Herald editor would qualify as being eligible to go out under the frank when considering in relation to the rule which we had followed in the seven years of her service with me."

Mr. Blackmore said the documents mailed by Miss Moore included the September, 1953, issue of the American Mercury containing a story entitled "The Truth About Joe McCarthy, written by Harold Lavine. The two pamphlets advertised While You Sleep, by John T. Flynn, published by the Devin Adair Publishing Co., New York City, and The Truth Certain Over America, by John Beaty.

Mr. Blackmore said: "I cannot see that the franking privilege was abused in mailing this magazine." He added that the two books "are anti-Communist and not anti-Semitic." He said Jewish names are mentioned along with other names in the list, "but is no sign of anti-semitism."

Fresh Request Made to Canada On Gouzenko

OTTAWA (CP) — External affairs officials today were considering a fresh request by Igor Gouzenko to be made available for questioning by investigators for the U. S. Senate sub-committee on internal security.

The request, the second of its kind, came through diplomatic channels. Officials here said they have not been made known but some announcement concerning it and the terms under which it might be given the House of Commons justice committee.

Some days ago a similar request was made by Senator Jenner and the reply was that the Canadian government believed Igor Gouzenko, the 29-year-old Russian cipher clerk who left his post in 1945 with documents that exposed a widespread espionage ring in Canada, had nothing further to divulge.

SAME REPLY SEEN

It was learned on Thursday, External Affairs Minister Pearson told a questioner that if a second request was made the reply would receive the same answer that was given to the first request. Gouzenko had something further to reveal.

While Gouzenko is under guard of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and is a prime witness for the Canadian government, there are no restrictions on what any person he chooses to see.

It is understood the RCMP have never asked to meet Gouzenko in the limelight of an investigating committee. This process, it is understood, have nothing to do with evidence he might give.

Slice and Drain Patients' Hearts While They Are in 'Frozen Sleep'

CHICAGO (AP) — A team of surgeons described today how a "frozen sleep" treatment enabled them to slash and drain parts of the heart of human patients so they could see and repair defects inside.

They said the "freezing" technique, which drops body temperatures 20 to 28 degrees greatly lowering normal body functions and requirements, gave them a safe period of up to eight minutes to operate on the heart with a dry and view unimpeded.

The surgeons used the treatment on 10 patients. One died during the operation. The heart defect could not be corrected in another. But they said clinical results are encouraging in the remaining 13 patients.

The doctors said the technique holds promise of general advantages over the "blind" operation, in which surgeons plug a defect by the feel of his probing finger in the blood-filled chambers inside the heart.

The patients, ranging in age from three months to 38 years, were given an anaesthesia and then immersed in a tub full of ice water. They remained there until their temperatures dropped to 70 degrees.

The surgeons used the treatment on 10 patients. One died during the operation. The heart defect was corrected in another. But they said clinical results are encouraging in the remaining 13 patients.

All Servicemen Get Pay Boosts Effective Dec 1

Civil Servants Will Also Receive Salary Increases

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Claxton today announced basic pay boosts for all armed forces personnel, ranging from $5 a month for the lowest rank to $100 a month for the top officer grade.

The basic pay boosts, first in two years, become effective Dec. 1. They will cover all of Canada's 105,000 regular armed personnel, including about 80,000 reserve officers and men in the three services.

PUSH DEFENCE BILL UP

Officials estimated that the increases will amount to about $27,000,000 a year, pushing Canada's defence spending pay bill to more than $300,000,000.

The increases roughly amount to 10 per cent for other ranks and 8½ per cent for officers.

A man entering the army, navy or air force as ordinary seaman, private or aircraftsman second class will have his monthly basic pay increased to $82 from $77.

Pay for a sergeant in the army or air force or petty officer, class II in the navy will be jumped by $15 a month to $164 from $129.

Basic pay for a lieutenant in the army, sub-lieutenant in the navy or flying officer in the air force will rise by $20 a month to $230 from $210.

Pay for an army captain, navy lieutenant or air force flight lieutenant will increase by $25 a month to $290.

A colonel's pay, and RCAF and navy equivalents, will jump by $60 a month to $615; a major-general's pay and other services' equivalents, by $100 a month to $961.

FOLLOW INDUSTRIAL LEVEL

Mr. Claxton said the boosts are in line with a policy of maintaining armed forces rates on a level with those in industrial employment.

Under the new rates of pay men in the forces will have definitely better prospects of achieving higher incomes with length of service and efficiency instead of having lower through trade training and capacity to take part in responsible non-commissioned officer rank," he said in a statement.

While the starting pay for a single man in the army will be $82 a month for $87, single personnel who are eligible for subsistence allowance will get food and board in cities — will have their pay increased to $148 a month.

Subsistence allowance and the allowances for married personnel are unchanged.

NEW TRADE PAY

However, the new pay scales provide monthly increases in trade pay, ranging from $4 in the lowest group to $8 a month for the highest.

The armed forces also get increases for years of service. The only change here is that privates, gunners and other service equivalents, now will get a boost of $1 a month for each year of service but nothing further after 10 years. Now they get $3 a month after the first three years and another $3 after six years.

COMPLETELY OUTFITTED

"Service in the forces offers many additional financial advantages. The men are completely outfitted with clothing when they join and receive a clothing allowance of $10 a month after that," the announcement said.

OTTAWA (CP)—Pay boosts, estimated at about $87,000,000 a year, are being granted to Canada's civil servants and armed forces personnel effective Dec. 1.

The civil service commission today announced increases to 85,000 federal employees—about 75 per cent of all classified civil servants under government employment.

Involving almost 600 classes of workers in practically all federal government departments across the country, the increases were estimated by average about nine per cent and will amount, roughly to about $30,000,000 a year.

SERVICE PAY UP 7%

At the same time the defence department announced pay boosts for all armed forces personnel, ranging from $5 a month for the lowest rank to $100 a month for the major-general or equivalent.

These increases, amounting roughly to 10 per cent from other ranks and 8½ per cent for officers, will total about $27,000,000 annually, bringing the total civil service and armed forces' government boosts to about $57,000,000 a year.

The boosts will bring the government's salaries for the civil service and service personnel to about $307,000,000 a year. This bill may be increased still further later.

The increases apply to the first civil service salary revision and the first basic defence forces pay increase since 1950.

SAMPLE CIVIL RAISES

Here are some sample increases:

Letter carriers, residential salary range of $2,230-$2,830 depending on length of service in bracket to $2,400-$3,000. Carriers also have uniforms and boots provided.

Stenographer (Grade 2): Increases from $1,980-$2,580 to $2,160-$2,760.

Stenographer (Grade 3): Increased from $2,180-$2,780 to $2,360-$2,960.

Stenographer (Grade 4): Top category of medical officers.

A recommendation of a statement from Finance Minister Abbott said the salary increases are aimed to "maintain the present pay relationship which has fallen unnoticeably" since the last big revision of government salaries two years ago.

INCREASES VARY

The increases, Mr. Abbott said, vary according to the circumstances affecting each civil service classification.

The order includes nearly all employees of the service and almost of the employees in the larger departments.

Those in the remaining 25 per cent of civil servants—not covered by the order—are recommended for "receiving immediate consideration," the announcement said.

Queen and Duke Happily Observe Their Sixth Wedding Anniversary

LONDON (Reuters) — It was a happy anniversary for Elizabeth Mountbatten Palace today as the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh observed their sixth wedding anniversary.

Last-minute preparations for the royal tour of Australia yesterday by New Zealand and Australia prevented any special celebrations. A party tonight at the palace for members of the government and their wives will be the nature of a semi-official send-off.

Prince Philip spent the last preparations for the Royal tour have left the Royal Family's personal life, and forced them to sandwich in their private treats wherever they can.

Thus a theatre date earlier this week took the place of a night out they might have had on their anniversary. The Queen's actual birthday party had to be postponed because his parents were in Paris for a first week-end of relaxation.

Their wedding in Westminster Abbey Nov. 27, 1947, when Elizabeth was 21 and Philip 26, was the most glittering event Britain had known since the war. They have been together ever since. Their anniversary since, though celebrations have always been on a modest scale.

On their first anniversary Elizabeth was still recovering from the birth of Prince Charles six days before. On the second anniversary the Duke where the duke was on navy duty, and cut a three-tier cake with a sword at a grand ceremony.

Their third anniversary was spent apart, with Philip still on naval duty in the Mediterranean, and Elizabeth helping to entertain Queen Juliana of the Netherlands, who was on an official visit to London.

Their fourth anniversary fell the day after they returned from their tour of Canada. Last year, with Princess Margaret and other friends, they went to the theatre.

ENJOY MOTOR CRUISE IN MID-NOVEMBER

Boating strictly for pleasure on an afternoon in mid-November is not something which can be done in a normal season. But then this isn't a normal season.

On Wednesday afternoon Alderman Wilbur Argue and City Solicitor E. A. Pringle went cruising on the bay in a motor boat and said they spent a very enjoyable afternoon.

"Second only to like summer," Alderman Argue said. "I never enjoyed myself more on the bay."

GOLFERS STILL ENJOYING SPORT

The golfers in the Belleville district don't believe in giving up after one snow. After the while substance had done a disappearing act the boys of the wee ball and stick were fitted out their shoulder muscles and once more head out on the links at Quinte Golf and Country Club, hoping for one more good game. They played one more game, but the snow stayed away. If you don't believe that way you you would more than likely find a good number of them still banging away, looking for the "good" game that eluded them all summer long.

Santa Claus Coming to Town Courtesy Firemen

Belleville kiddies are going to see Santa Claus this year after all!

Local merchants decided not to sponsor a Santa Claus parade this year, but on special invitation from the Belleville Fire Department, the jolly old fellow is coming to the city anyway.

So, on Saturday morning (that's tomorrow morning, kids) at about 11 o'clock Old Santa will be seen on Front street as he rides along on his fire department's hook and ladder prepared by the city fire department. Surrounding Santa on the float will be a big collection of toys, some of which some lucky kid might just find under their tree on Christmas morning.

Santa will wind up his tour of Front street at the McCarthy Theatre where a special show is being staged for the kids by manager Willard Fawcett. The price of admission for all kids will be a collection of toys.

Following the show all toys collected on the theatre will be turned over to the fire department members of which will distribute them among the underprivileged children of the city.

Santa, Belleville and Santa is really coming to Belleville!

O. B. C. Notes

A gentleman from Toronto who visited Ontario Business College last week was amazed at the large number of students who have come great distances for the O.B.C. training.

The College records show attendance of students from all the counties of Ontario, all the provinces of Canada, Bermuda, England, Australia, New Zealand States of America, Panama, fifteen of the West Indian Islands, four countries in South America, and Belgium. Members of staff with similar institution in Canada has a record equal to this.

Since the opening of 1853 thirty-eight of those in attendances have been sons, daughters, brothers or sisters of former students. Quebec is always well represented and never will.

In reply to my view, the efforts of intelligent men and women to find their way, not out of atheism but out of the most profound disappointment in the whole history of faith. A attempt no paradox. The simple fact is that educated people had learned by pot their faith in materialism. No worship ever given to any altar surpassed the intensity of devotion in which thinking people yielded their trust to a dead illusion. They gave themselves, their whole minds and souls that by their methods, science alone could solve every problem. Science was the heirarchy of this faith and through their priesthood, man, unaided by any force outside himself, could remake the world into an increasingly ideal community. Edmonds was its creed; man had to learn to stand alone, to rely on himself, to work out his own problems.

MATERIALISTIC FAITH FAILED

But the time came when the faith of self-worship — for self is the deity of materialism could not be concealed any longer.

Education reached its highest peak in Germany and that nation of literate citizens followed Hitler. Hitler was a madman incarnate asserting that man had moral responsibility. In a world burdened with war, and fears of more war, the people looked for help. They found like the man who asked for bread, and received a stone; for a fish he got a serpent. As one man put it: "We have been reading books that begin 'I am disillusioned and end with: 'I am still disillusioned'."

The people now know there is nothing for the human soul in that false faith to which they gave their vain plations. Many years they have practiced it. That is why they read old books for faith, and the Holy Bible was always at the top of the list. That is why they read new books of spiritual exploration and will continue to do so, if the authors of such works are sincerely aware of their responsibility.

We do not expect a new prophet.

We ask only a kindly light to lead us one step forward — not backward.

Fulton Oursler Explained Why Books on Religion Sell

Fulton Oursler's last book, "The Greatest Faith Ever Known" was a remarkable story of the first days of Christianity, starts in the Ontario Intelligencer on Saturday.

Mr. Oursler's great talent for religious writing is well known to most readers of the Ontario Intelligencer. In the following article he deals with the enthusiastic readership accorded such writings in the past several years and traces the trend of spiritual revival:

One night, twenty years ago, John Erskine, Lowell Bretona and I appeared together on a New York platform to discuss the mystery of best-sellers. In preparation, I had made a small study of the list and went back as I could go and the most interesting pattern that I found was the almost unbroken popularity of two types of books — those about sin and those about religion. When the two were combined, flesh and spirit between the same covers, I was ready to expect a very high degree of popularity. It was the period of great changes in the patterns of today.

Another point: Books about those new significant. Books about the world, the flesh and the devil had special appeal in those days, while books that affirmed the ordinary virtues, the dignity and meaning of life, the goodness of God and the personal responsibility of man had not for a couple ages in public esteem. How some of us still happily persist, such as Drummond's "The Greatness," Sheldon's "In His Steps" which has outsold all other novels by many millions of copies.

HUNGER FOR FAITH

There is nothing new in the history of people for faith. New schools of writers, editors, and viewers may cram the public mind with philosophies, but the logic can never help the heart-ache and the loneliness of their customers, who if they accept the remorseless argument are still confronted with despair with Something deep within warns them that despair is fatal sorrow and flapdoodle, the food on which fools like to feed.

That is why I am not overwhelmed with astonishment because many books by fervently religious men appear on today's literary bill parade. From the tawdiest twenties through the most frightened forties, it could have been an publishers and editors had known how great was the hunger for faith, for need assurance. In the blistering summer of 1934 I published in a weekly magazine, Mary Flick-ford's "Why Not Try God?" and before the year ended the sales stands an edition of nearly three million copies in print and sold.

The wide reception now given to such books as Dr. Norman Vincent Peale's "The Power of Positive Thinking," Father James Kelley's "Just As I Am," Monsignor Sheen's "Peace of Soul," and "A Man Called Peter" and the late Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall is merely a continuation of an interest that has been with us and never will.

In repression, in my view, the efforts of intelligent men and women to find their way, not out of atheism but out of the most profound disappointment in the whole history of faith. A attempt no paradox. The simple fact is that educated people had learned by pot their faith in materialism. No worship ever given to any altar surpassed the intensity of

Dutch Mill Proprietors Want Vote for Liquor Licence

TRENTON. (Special.) — Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Bernbrey, proprietors of the Dutch Mill Inn and Motel Company, are circulating a petition among residents of Sidney township for a vote for a licence to serve beer, wine and liquor with meals to travellers and tourists.

In their petition, they point out that 99 per cent of their business comes from the transient population and only one per cent from the residents of Sidney township. However, they spend approximately 91 per cent of their operating cost in the local area, including, for the first 10 months of 1953, $32,000 in wages, and $80,000 for food and supplies.

Mr. Bernbrey has stated that he has to maintain the high standards necessary to insure a vote.

Reason for asking for the petition is that the new four-lane highway will bring about an inevitable loss of business and in order to compensate for this loss they wish to develop other sources of revenue from the remainder of their regular trade.

The petition is set forth in the following manner in the petition: "The new highway will be bypassing Trenton and Belleville with an inevitable loss in tourist trade. If we are to maintain the same expenditures in wages and food supplies we must be prepared to get the maximum amount of business possible from a lesser number of travellers."

"Consequently, we ask your kind co-operation in helping us to alter the local law in order that we may adequately serve our customers, nearly all of whom are from outside this area. In doing so we will be able to spend a greater amount in the community to the benefit of all concerned."

The Bernbrers are asking that the licence be granted only in their dining room and as an accompaniment to the sale of meals.

New 19 Roomed High School To Be Constructed

TRENTON (Special) — Construction of a new 18-roomed high school to cost approximately $600,000 the town of Trenton and the air stations, it is expected to get underway next spring, according to Grant Rathbun, chairman of the Trenton Board of Education.

The new school which will have accommodation for 600 students will have classrooms filled from the time of its opening but there are already enough schools in the area.

The high school will be constructed on a site on the former Trenton Golf and Country Club and has already been annexed to the town. The present high school will be turned over for use as a public school.

The town council will be asked to sanction construction of the building, following which detailed plans will be drawn and tenders called for building of the school. No estimate of the cost of the structure has been given.

Anglers Ready Fishing Huts

TRENTON—Just before the snow fell and colder weather set in recently fireman Gerald Lewis, a rabid ice fisherman, brushed a brand new coat of paint on his neat looking shanty. He had hoped that the winter was here to stay and was talking about the big pickerel he intended catching through the ice.

Then along came the warm snap to spread happiness among the householders facing prodigious heating bills and disappointment among those with their hearts set on a full season of shanty fishing.

Ice fishing at the mouth of the Trent River here usually attracts more than 50 enthusiasts who establish their own little village on the ice off the waterfront.

German Baroness Complains About U.S. Treatment

VANCOUVER (CP)—An almost penniless German baroness, freed by immigration authorities in Los Angeles, arrived here by plane Thursday charging she had been mistreated by United States immigration authorities.

Baroness Magdalena von Redwitz, 45, and her 23-year-old son, Eckenbert, said in an interview they had only $1.50 between them.

The baroness, member of one of Germany's most famous pre-war families, likened the U. S. immigration detention station at San Pedro, Calif., to a Nazi concentration camp. She had been held by U. S. immigration authorities since Nov. 9 on a charge of illegal entry.

She was freed Wednesday and given 10 days to leave the country.

The baroness entered the U. S. from Mexico. She said she was on her way to visit her son in Hollywood.

The baroness said her family owned a 100-room castle near Dresden, Germany and lost about everything in the war. She emigrated to Canada in 1951.

A legal resident of Canada, she lived in Toronto and Kitchener.

She obtained a travel permit in October to visit friends in Mexico. On her return she was taken off a bus and held by immigration authorities at San Pedro. She had failed to obtain a permit for the return trip.

The baroness said she married Baron von Redwitz in 1930 and divorced him in Dresden in 1932.

Accused and Victim

John Houghton (left) 26, has been charged with the murder of Sadie Davidson, (right) 32, formerly of Dartmouth, N.S., whose body was found beaten and slashed in a mid-Toronto cleaning shop. Police said Houghton and the woman had been living together. (CP Photo)

Community Chest Drive Finished

The campaign to raise funds for the Community Chest is officially over. According to campaign chairman Dr. John E. Guthridge, the chest failed to raise enough money to reach the $32,000 objective. The last figure available on the amount of money raised was $25,200 or 90 per cent.

Dr. Guthridge offered his thanks to all those who contributed and said he was gratified the chest did so well under the circumstances. He also said that any who have not as yet donated to the campaign may still do so by taking any contribution to the Y.M.C.A. building.

The new ambassador, born in Montreal, was educated there and at the University of Paris. After law practice in Montreal, he returned to Paris to teach at his old university.

He joined the external affairs department in 1925, and since then has held many diplomatic posts.

SAME PLAY, DIFFERENT CAST

(The originality of Abraham Lincoln's celebrated Gettysburg speech has been questioned.

It appears that Rev. Dr. Theodore Parker, a New England clergyman, had previously used some similar words.

At Gettysburg Lincoln said: "It is for us, the living . . . to be dedicated here . . . that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, may not perish from the earth."

At Boston on May 29, 1850, Dr. Parker spoke of "a democracy—that is government of all the people, by all the people, for all the people; of course a government on the principles of eternal justice, the unchanging law of God; for shortness sake, I will call it the idea of Freedom."

Did Abraham Lincoln read a report of Dr. Parker's address and did he fashion his address after the clergyman's ideas?

Perhaps he did. But that makes his pronouncement no less memorable. Nor is it certain that Dr. Parker himself did not borrow his phrases. For the Encyclopedia Britannica credits Charles I of England with the statement that Parliament was "of the people, by the people, and for the people" as early as the 17th century.

Whatever the case, the world today is plagued by tyranny and cruelty. True, but these too, like Lincoln's ideal, were known of old. There is nothing new in the tortures of the concentration camp, although it is safely true that the scope of the organization of evil has developed.

We need to be reminded today that our problems are not entirely new, that earlier generations faced them, that if there be added danger it is of a technical sort, the result of scientific discoveries vastly increasing the power of those who have the hands of ruthless tyrants.

But the decision will not be reached by men's hands but by their minds and there is no evidence that in that field the champions of freedom are less well armed today than of yore.

AN ENCOURAGING SIGN

The action of a group of students at Victoria College at the University of Toronto in burning an effigy of Senator Joseph McCarthy provoked varying reactions.

"The Canadian Register," in commenting on the incident, says that "the general comment seems to be that the technique used by this group to express its opinion on Senator McCarthy's anti-Communist activity smacked of Communism itself."

But the Register, we believe, made a more important point when it later observed that the group's action shows "that university students are taking an active interest in the political problems of the day and the world" and that "the existence of this interest is encouraging.

In many lands university students are among the most politically active segments of the population. It is trite to say that they will be the leaders of tomorrow, but it is still a true statement. It is highly desirable that they should take a keen interest in all aspects of world affairs. In many lands where this is true, there is a regrettable tendency for them to take violent action, to riot and to revolt. The mere burning of an effigy, by comparison, is an extremely mild form of what seems to be a youthful necessity to dramatize political opinions. It is a small price to pay for the advantage of students turning their minds to the serious problems of society. To regard such action as evidence of Communist infiltration scarcely seems reasonable.

HURRAY FOR FIBBER AND MOLLY!

Fibber McGee and his ever-loving wife Molly say radio is good enough for them.

"We'll probably do TV one of these days," says Fibber but one may reasonably hope that this observation is just another of Fibber's exaggerations.

The fact that we have no TV set, far from prejudicing us in favor of radio, would make us accept the prospect of Fibber and Molly on TV if anything could. But there would always remain the danger that we might be invited to a friend's house, TV-equipped, on the evening on which Fibber and Molly were performing. Then there would come the moment when that cupboard, which is the wonder of Wistful Vista, would be opened before our eyes. And no cupboard which could be devised by TV technicians could ever live up to that chamber of horrors which our imagination paints every time the radio starts to shiver and shake with its weird and wonderful assortment of bangs and crashes.

Until the day that Molly cleans out that cupboard for keeps, she and Fibber had better stay off TV.

Barley Sold To Rice-Eaters

(Hamilton Spectator)

There's not much being said about it, but a new business for Canada's farmers is being developed barley kernels gives some clue to our current wheat dilemma.

More eye-catching is the kind of figure Senator Arthur Roebuck and Coldwell makes: Why not get the Canadian wheat off the farms (created by government) through a $500,000,000 advance by the taxpayers?

Now it is revealed that without much fuss Canada has been and is being handled by private trading on the Grain Exchange, has been getting into new markets through wide awake selling techniques. Striptease to its kernels, Montreal Herald relied, it provides a full grain that cooks at the same rate as rice and is much cheaper. The barley-for-rice deal became the most popular staple to fill the lunch pail of the working man in Japan.

Canadians first awakened to what was happening when Japanese demand for barley brought Canadian experts to that market. They found in Japan and Canadian officials began looking for the reason. What they found in the Japanese barley processing plants of Japan opened up a wide vista of possibilities. If Japanese demand could create a market for 100 tons from Canada, other rice-eating countries might be falling in line.

There is a conviction among all veterans of the trade that the government wheat selling agency has been responsible for dealing with bulk allotments under international agreement but they have forgotten how to sell. The barley story more than hints that this is

Dutch Offer Diesel Auto

By VOLNEY D. HURD,
(Writing from Paris in The Canadian Business Monitor)

Plastic or fiberglass bodies are the stars of the French Auto Salon this year. The public is flocking though the finished bodies look like sheet steel.

This is the outstanding technical advance of the year in the established line. Automobile makers are much the same as last year's except for some styling changes and very little of this on the French entries.

At the same time, a lone Dutch firm is exhibiting a diesel-powered car driven by hydraulic turbines. This is designed to give Europeans a car with the interior size of a Cadillac at the price of around $1,800, and 20 to 40 miles on a gallon of fuel.

Since this depends on fuel oil, selling at about one-third the price in gasoline, the car appears to be a winner. This, in fact, was the sensation of the little firm that is exhibiting the turbo-engine automobile and has won so many friends that it could not hope to fill them next year.

The car is built with a welded-steel, large-diameter tubular chassis which serves as the transmission channel for the liquid driving the turbines, as well as the propeller shaft. The heavy diesel thus needs no radiator.

The engine is mounted in the rear, with the propeller shaft running to each rear wheel. The pumps feed special liquid under pressure to two turbines, mounted in rubber driving independently of each other, which run one through a shaft and two universal joints.

Parliament Young Again

(Ottawa Journal)

Parliament is getting away drinking at the well of perpetual youth and Ottawa has the pleasure of welcoming a new generation not only the veterans of many debates but the new members who move diffidently and unfamiliarly into the buildings where they will spend almost half the next four years.

General Vanier's address to the Commons fresh enthusiasm, new ideas and, above all, new faces. Not the same as those faced by the last one—the maintenance of defence, the provision of homes, the safeguarding and expansion of markets, the display of wisdom in foreign affairs, examination of the outlays and revenues of government, the imposition of taxes and how desirable social programs can be financed.

In debates on these subjects older members base their views on hitherto familiar trails where every idea and every tree has been long since travelled. But new members, we trust, will view the landscape of our legislatures, assistant managers, floor leaders and all the rest of them as can jam into an assembly room, and then report.

Their youthful store we have! How great and airy and unencumbered by dead policies it is with the most attractive goods, shrewdly bought, attractively priced! What a great staff we have! And the best intelligent managers, the most experienced staff, and what a great old firm we have to be proud of!

Here they all applaud him vociferously.

"But look: if we haven't got customers, we haven't got one damn thing!"

And then he proceeds to drill into them, by illustrations and anecdotes, epigrams and boo mots, the fact the most important single thing in the Buch-and-Such stores is the customer. And we know that anybody in the organization who forgets in any of its aspects that

Fee, Fi, Fum, Ho Hum

(Toronto Telegram)

The recommendation by a textbook committee in India that Robin Hood should be banned on the ground that it encourages Communism, of course draws attention to the insidious nature of Communist propaganda and the subtle way in which it is introduced in seemingly innocent works.

Few people, for example, see anything sinister in the tale that little Miss Muffet was frightened, by a spider while eating curds and whey. With a little study, however, it becomes apparent that Miss Muffet, actually a peace loving comrade of the people's democracies, is the victim of gangsterism warfare waged by capitalists represented by the dairy industry.

The propaganda in the story of Cinderella is somewhat more subtle. She is plainly the victim of monopolists who enrich themselves by slave labour and who have never heard of overtime pay. The fairy godmother episode desires corrupt her and she becomes a deviationist.

The Girl Who Lived in a Shoe is, of course, a denunciation of the appalling conditions created by greedy landlords who have successfully evaded rent control.

In Jack and the Beanstalk the giant represents the North Atlantic Treat Organization waging unprovoked war on the people's democracies, represented by Jack. The story, cleverly, provides Communist agents with a course in sabotage and instruction in methods of undermining imperialist foundations.

Children, and, it must be feared, adults, are oblivious to the fact that Mary had a Little Dumpity from the wall symbolizes the Marshall Plan, designed to destruction of capitalism, private enterprise and the western economy.

Neither are they aware that much that is publicized as the exploitations of the workers, particularly in the coal mines of Drumheller, the environs of Calgary and Vancouver, is contained in the story of Little Boy Blue and Jack and Jill.

These are but a few examples. Those who are interested, and it is to be hoped that every child will be interested, would make a similar analysis of the nursery rhymes and legends freely circulated as suitable for young, susceptible minds. On guard.

THE PRIDE OF THE PEASANTS

Even among the poorest peasants, in oriental countries where beri beri (polyneuritis due to vitamin B1 deficiency) takes the lives of many infants and children is prevalent, it is a matter of pride to eat white (refined, polished) rice instead of the coarser brown, unpolished grain. The latter is thought only the peasants eat the milled and polished grain and feed the bran to their chickens. The seed heart or germ and the outer coat of the kernel contain nearly all the vitamin B1 and other vitamins as well as the minerals naturally present in the whole grain.

Asian peasants are so precious about "refined" food as most Americans are. In this country everybody but a few "nuts" or "food faddists" regards refined bleached white flour as superior to any grade of flour which has even part of the germ or bran.

I died limited largely to white breads in the eastern people were classified as beri beri. This disease, known to medical science as Encephalopedia Berianeuros, by adding the Greek prefix and suffix translates to the diet.

It is when these sources of vitamin B1 (thiamin) and other vitamins are not available to supplement the white rice diet that beri beri diabetes and other deficiency results.

Likewise in America a diet limited largely to toast and coffee, bread and tea, "breakfast food" and cocoa, doughnuts and pop or "groceries" renders the important portion of the population liable to beri beri or most Americans are ignorant of what constitutes good nutrition. The diseases can be avoided, authorities theorities generally agree, by increasing the consumption of milk and wheat. That is to say, every growing child needs at least 1½ pints (three full glasses) of plain fresh milk every day to maintain standard of growth development, physical and mental efficiency for one of his or her age. This is not just a theory. It is a fact, established by studies of groups of growing children of various economic classes in the United States and England.

In regard to the consumption of wheat, I mean plain wheat and not any proprietary product.

Now, if beri beri is a prevalent in America as I say it is, why haven't you heard more about it?

Simply because few physicians know enough about it to diagnose the early symptoms when they see cases of mild beri beri in everyday practice.

No, this is still a health column and not a medical journal and our symptoms have to try on. I stick to plain words. I use a peculiar "ethical" principle but simply for the good of your health. You don't have to remember it. If I presented some symptoms which might be those of beri beri you'd drop into the corner drugstore, buy some proprietary vitamin tablets recommended by the salesman, take them home for a week or two, feel little or no better, and drop the whole thing as another of the pipe dreams. And the chances are that if or when you consulted a doctor, he or she, the doctor will laugh with you and discuss the very thought of beri beri as absurd.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON FEARING FAILURE

People these days ought to read more about Henry Ford. He said a great many things about life, and live, but people could not understand him. He did and said so many remarkable things, while a few called him an ignorant fool, he was a man of genius. And he was a great thinker and a genius. He was laughed at for his early beginnings, but no one laughs now.

He is one of Henry Ford's wise sayings: "One who fears failure limits his life. Success is the opportunity more infrequently met by those who fear failure than by those who do not." Intelligent and vision marked their way of life.

If we paid much attention to failure, or great failures in our experience, we would get nowhere. When the idea of a motor car occurred to Mr. Ford's mind, he presented it to his associates and set them to build it in one piece. They considered the idea ridiculous, but that made no difference to Henry Ford. He insisted, "The thing can't be wrong." And it was done.

Some people criticized Edison for trying an experiment so many times. He was told by his friends to stop. His reply was that every time he failed he meant he had learned how many ways it would not work! Trial and failure was in his hand on the way to all triumphs.

We must learn to expect success and to look for failure to us and that no failure can keep us from what it is that we are necessary enough after Columbus and his few believers, when he discovered this great Western World, but these early men had vision and faith. They did not fear failure. The great railroad builder, E. H. Harriman, conceived the idea of a track across the great plains of Nebraska. Engineer after engineer tried it and said it could not be done. Harriman said: "Build it anyway." And it was done.

GOOD HEALTH AND SOUND MORALS

There is a profound relationship between good health and good morals—between a sound body and a sound mind. The next time you are in the post office, take a look at the pictures of wanted criminals on the bulletin board. Examine their faces carefully and you will see that there is something to the matter with these poor chaps. They were born with a twist in their natures which appears to have given them a twist of features. Their twisted natures are reflected in their faces.

Liquor and dope producers more criminals than all other factors combined. But it is also probable that a large part of the people now in prison had had enough wholesome food and good medical care in the early years of their lives, they might have been different. Many criminals appear to enjoy the best of health, but this does not disprove the fact that their twisted moral natures may correspond to a twisted physical nature which is abnormal but which does not produce either acute or chronic disorders.

The children of a nation constitute its most valuable resource. If we could make and keep all children healthy and if when they become adults they could be persuaded to make good health a hobby, most of the broken homes would be intact and the prisons of our country half empty.

Good health and good morals belong together and usually are found together.

Local Assoc. Belleville Guides, Brownies Hold Interesting Meeting

On Tuesday evening an interesting annual meeting of the Local Association of the Belleville Girl Guides and Brownies was held in St. Thomas' Anglican Church house, when the Division Commissioner, Mrs. E. D. Arnett, presented the Guider's annual report, a condensation into one of the various reports which are made for simplification, and brevity.

NEW EXECUTIVE

After welcoming the Guiders and the Guide mothers who were present, the Commissioner read the names of the new local association executive for 1953-4, as follows: honorary chairman, former Belleville Commissioners, Mrs. M. Haig-Mrs. M. Brancombe, Mrs. W. Ponton, Mrs. L. Biggs, Mrs. J. Watson, and Mrs. H. Amos, chairman Mrs. H. Brown. Executive members, Mrs. E. McCallum, Mrs. Price, Mrs. J. Belair and Mrs. J. Tooth, as secretary. Treasurer, Mrs. D. Steward; badge secretary, Mrs. A. Lewis; social convener, Mrs. E. Shier; Camp convener, Mrs. G. Campbell.

The annual report followed and was most interesting telling of the various badges won, and the various activities during the year from September 1952 to June 1953. There were four companies with approximately 97 Guides enrolled.

BADGES WON

The badges won were as follows: 11 second class, two first class, three astronomers, 13 hostesses, five laundress, two needlewomen, seven child-nurse, four little house seven child-nurse, four little house keepers, five first aid, seven cook, one hiker, one religion and life emblem, two homemaker, one home nurse.

Tests were also passed and badges won, while the Guides were at camp.

There were six Brownie Packs, with approximately 140 Brownies. The badges won are, 39 Golden hair, 11 Golden hand, ten toymakers, five minstrel, seven needleworkers, seven artists, seven skaters, two swimmers, four collectors and two thrift.

These badges required a lot of application and hard work on the part of the girls, as well as an equal amount of time and effort by the Guiders in teaching the necessary knowledge.

YEAR'S ACTIVITIES.

The year's activities included: the Coronation tribute, when Guides and Brownies undertook projects in honor of the Coronation, cleaning and keeping clean the auditorium where the meetings were held, sewing for needy children in the ward at the hospital, the growing and giving of flowers and plants, visiting the sick, piecing and making a quilt to be given away.

In October there were many Hallowe'en parties; in December many of the Company and Packs helped with baskets, dressed dolls, made toys, and sent clothing to various families.

On the World Day of Prayer, they met at the Tabernacle Church, and on February held their Thinking Day in honor of the founder of Guiding. May was the annual cookie day, at which the Company and Packs use to make money for camp expenses. Last year 1,272 packages of cookies were sold at 25 cents a package. The packages cost 18½ cents per package, which left a profit of 6½ cents, five of which goes to the L.A., leaving 1½ to the Company and the Packs.

CHURCH PARADE.

In June they joined the Scouts and Cubs in the church parade which took the form of an open air meeting. In May, Miss Beaubien, a Guider from South Africa, visited the city, and spoke to nearly 400 Guides and Brownies Picnics and hikes were also enjoyed.

There was also a training day last March when two trainers from Toronto spent a day in Belleville, and nearly 80 Guiders availed themselves of the opportunity of learning more about Guiding, program and running the Company and Packs. The trainers teach ceremonies, games, songs, tests, how to keep the children interested; help with Guiders' problems, and bring the Guider up to date on the latest method of teaching her children.

GUIDING INCREASING.

Guiding is increasing in Belleville. Last year there were four Companies with 97 Guides, this year there are five companies with 110 Guides registered, six packs with 140 Brownies, and this year, eight Packs with 201 Brownies, and there will be two more Brownie Packs opening soon.

Gaiters Donaldson and Marion Elliott told of their camp experience this past summer, the former at Doe Lake, situated 16 miles from Huntsville, with its lodges "Sunset" and "Birchcliffe" at which there were 24 Guiders and three leaders. Guide Donaldson told of pitching the tent; cooking breakfast and supper; of the visit of the commandant from Africa; of doing pioneer work which including woodcraft, lighting fires; caring for the camp; of Mrs. Wishart's talk on guiding; and of how the camp was run.

The latter camp was at Madoc, known as Quin-Mo-Lac. Guide Elliott told also of doing cooking, making of engraving rope handicraft; badge work; boiling of campfire; and of cooking of meals; of patrol duties; and of fishing and striking tents; swimming. Both guides enjoyed their stay and felt that camp life was an educational and needful asset to guiding life.

Two Brownies, Judy Bradford, of the first Belleville Pack, and Heather Duree, of the fifth Pack, both gave interesting talks of what they had learned, and of the several duties required of Brownies, and of their deep interest in the Pack as a whole. The activities included rope tieing; cooking; addressing parcels; knitting and learning of traffic rules.

TWO HIGHLIGHTS

The two highlights of the evening were the talks by Mrs. Brancombe, early leader of the Guides, who told of the Dr. Grenfell Mission work in Labrador, and by Mrs. A. G. Tooth, former Brown Owl of the first Belleville Pack, who told of her recent visit by air to England, and of attending the Coronation.

Regarding the Dr. Grenfell Mission and the wonderful work done by its founder, Mrs. Brancombe gave a detailed talk, telling of the great distress Dr. Grenfell had found along the shore of Labrador, of seeing little children in a cabin with a sick man, the only furniture, a stove; of children with rickets, half starved with no medical help of any kind. Dr. Grenfell established a hospital, and later brought two doctors and two nurses to help, stationed at 100 miles apart.

GREAT GENEROSITY

Mrs. Brancombe told of the great generosity of the Labrador people, of how, from their scanty supplies, they had sent one of their number ahead for miles to get next home with food and sugar to assist in helping the stranger who had come to them, and who had wished to continue his journey, of how they went the "second mile" by breaking a road way for 16 miles through seven foot snow to further Dr. Grenfell's journey.

The Grenfell Mission is undenominational and international, with some associations being located in Canada, Scotland, and England, and in Belleville. The need today is for toys, and games for the children. "Think," said Mrs. Brancombe, "of a little child never seeing a doll." Anything as cigar boxes, metal cigaret boxes, spun socks, would be thankfully received. "The Grenfell Mission stands today as a monument to one man whose outstanding characteristic was his deep faith in God."

BY AIR TO ENGLAND

Mrs. Tooth, district secretary of the Guides, delighted her audience with a word picture of her recent trip to the Old Country from the time she left the airport to her arrival there, mentioning meeting "Miss Canada" on the plane, and of the wonderful cloud effects as they flew at 9,000 feet above the earth; of the beautiful moonlight, then into the coming dawn of seeing Windsor Castle from the air, and of the Coronation.

"London," said Mrs. Tooth, "is as different from its London I left some years ago; it was cleaned up; every one seemed happy and gay; it looked as if it had put on its Sunday best. The decorations for the Coronation were beautiful, and had been planned by the Ministry of Work into one scheme into which the large streets lifted. The stores planned their own."

The Mall was best with four large quadrical arches showing the lion and the unicorn and the crown on each. In White Hall there were mauved helmets in pairs on standards giving the impression of a parade. Outside of Westminster Abbey, there were effigies of the Queen's beasts, which were figures from the royal families.

On her homeward trip, a fine display of Northern Lights was seen and Montreal by moonlight was most lovely.

Mrs. Meagher tendered appreciative thanks to Mrs. Brancombe, and Mrs. M. Haig to Mrs. Tooth, for the fine addresses the association was privileged to hear.

Fog Aids Thugs To Escape With 10,000 Pounds

IVER, England (Reuters) — A gang of safe-blasters made a getaway today under cover of early morning fog after snatching £10,000 pay money from J. Arthur Rank's huge Pinewood film studios.

The thieves are believed to have squeezed through a hedge and used the fog as cover for the quarter-mile approach to the studio pay office.

Government May Act to Prevent One-Day Strike

LONDON (Reuters) — The government may act within the next few days to prevent a 24-hour shut-down by 3,000,000 workers in Britain's vital engineering and shipyard industries, it was learned today.

The strike, called for Dec. 2, was approved Thursday by leaders of the powerful Confederation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions to back claims for a 15-per-cent pay increase. It would be the biggest industrial weapon since the general strike of 1926. A special report will be handed later to Labor Minister Sir Walter Monckton, describing possible effects of a strike on Britain's export and defence industries.

The government is not expected to intervene immediately. Time will be allowed for reaction from the employers, who have rejected the workers' demands, and from individual members of the 14 unions in the confederation. Current average wage in the industry is £10 a week ($28.00 American).

Women's Activities

COLLEGE HILL W.A.

The November meeting of the College Hill W.A. was held in the Sunday School rooms of the church. The theme for the devotional was on "Remembrance Day." The Scripture was read by Mrs. J. Armstrong.

Mrs. Annes Dickens told how "Armistice Day" came to be and read a poem, "The Men Behind the Guns."

After a minute's silence to remembrance of those who gave their lives, Mrs. A. Dickens led in prayer.

It was decided that each member would bring 50 cents to the Christmas meeting to be spent on silverware; also each member is to be responsible for one item on the program.

Mrs. Aimee Turner held a contest at the close of the meeting.

Tea was served by Mrs. O. Tennant, Mrs. Mary Smith and Mrs. Florence Watson.

LEGION LADIES' AUX.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion held their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday in the Coleman Street club rooms.

The meeting opened in usual manner with the president, Mrs. W. Senn, in the chair. There was a large number of women in attendance. New members were initiated.

All committee reports were encouraging and received thanks from the president and members.

Mrs. Gardner thanked all who had worked with her at the Armistice banquet. The president also thanked each and everyone for their donations towards the banquet. Arrangements were made for the rummage sale to be held this week in the club rooms.

After all business was finished, the members joined in the usual manner, and refreshments were served.

Fashion Flashes.

A WEALTH of new ideas is revealed in collections and showings of holiday resort wear, with colors richer than ever. One such is a dress and triangular stole of hand-screened cotton print in a widely spaced floral design and pink flowers design, on a gray or green grounds. The draped bodice extends to a shoulder high point at one side, where it is trimmed with a self-color of crushed sequined leaves.

LIVELY BITS of silken charm add interest to dresses and act as the finishing touch for costumes. Good for dresses or blouses is a silk shantung collar ascot, with a graceful flower or scroll motif. Pin it in rhinestones and crystal bugle beads on the wide end.

LUXURY bags, for giving and getting, are many and beautiful. From Paris comes a bag of black mocha, the leather flaring out in soft lines from the clipped yoke. The heavy frame is piled high with gem colored stones, rhinestone bugles, tiny rhinestones and pearls, with a small mirror set into the jeweled rim. Gilt snake chain handle.

COZY AND COMFY, for real cold country weather go for ski-resort wear, in a blanket wool coat in a shadowy plaid that includes various shades of red, blue and gray. It wraps to the body and rises to a deeply self-fringed horseshoe collar.

ALWAYS WELCOME is the dress that is effective yet, at the same time, is simple enough so that it may be worn time and time again, always looking right and smart. One such is an informal dinner dress, a peg-pocketed sheath in black wool lace with bands of silk crepe marking the deep, wide V neckline. Tiny sleeves and self belt.

GETTING READY for Spring is the honey loss range, seen constantly in late Winter dresses and for resort wear. The tones range from very pale to deep and appear in every fabric and style, from pongee silks to heavy linen, and from swim things to evening dresses.

Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Wright, Stirling, observed the 50th anniversary of their marriage Wednesday when they were "at home" to friends in the parlors at St. Paul's United Church. The couple who received many lovely gifts are shown with their anniversary cake.

United Nations' Topic Discussed At Film Council Meeting

On Tuesday, the film council members and visitors met in the Carty Public Library. The president, Mrs. Wanda Sine, welcomed all newcomers.

It was announced that any interested individuals, who pay 25 cents, may join the council, and the films and are welcome at all meetings. On Thursday, a course for projectionists got underway, directed by R. Powell. A new projector had been ordered and all present equipment has been checked.

The report of the annual meeting was given by Mrs. W. Sine and Miss O. Delaney. Belleville was host to the Eastern Ontario Film Federation group which met at Queen Elizabeth school. The president thanked all those who worked to make this event both enjoyable and successful.

GUEST SPEAKER

"Technical Assistance and Economic Aid Through the United Nations" was the subject chosen by Mrs. S. D. Scripture, in her thought-provoking talk she said that the marked difference between the United Nations and the former League of Nations lies in the greater attempting made by the U.N. to the welfare needs of the world.

"We have come to realize that peace can never be secured while large proportion of humanity suffers from poverty, disease and illiteracy. Everywhere men and women are discovering the wonders of modern technology and are demanding that their governments assist them in sharing in its benefits. Widespread misery makes ripe soil for revolutions; therefore we find that economic planning by local politicians and more generous assistance by international agencies are needed.

PRINCIPLES OF ASSISTANCE

The principles of technical assistance are: 1. assistance is given only on the request of governments and only when it is impossible for the form that country requires. 2. it must be given to or through governments; and 3. it must not lead to distortions arising from the political structure of the country requesting assistance, or from the size of the country or its population.

Funds for economic development are available only through the International Bank. Its funds are available only for self-liquidating undertakings. On the purely technical assistance side, the forms of aid that can be given are practically unlimited in extent.

"The actual assistance given in each field takes one of several forms. The sending of experts to advise governments and to train local personnel is the most direct. The U.N. program is not a money gift. The principle is "help for self-help" and each host government must do its part.

SHORTAGE OF FUNDS

"There is a high purpose and excitement about U.N. technical assistance which cannot be conveyed by any outline of its organization. But one great problem hindering the progress of the program is the shortage of funds rather than of personal. At present we are failing the opportunity of world co-operation because we have not the imagination and the generosity to respond to the need in sufficient measure."

To further stress this point the audience was shown the film "This Is The Challenge." The destruction of war and the urgent need of peace, at all costs, was vividly portrayed.

A vote of thanks to Mrs. Scripture was moved by Mrs. Gibson.

After a short discussion, Mr. Ward, N.F.B. representative, spoke to the members. He lauded Belleville and district for promoting such a wonderful spirit among other film councils and extended the appreciation of all the other groups for their kind hospitality shown during the annual conference.

A previewer session followed and the group saw several new films; the most outstanding being "News of the World."

The social committee closed the program by serving refreshments.

The United Nations will again be the topic for discussion in December and several new films pertaining to this topic will be shown.

350 Children Legally Under Care of C.A.S.

At the November meeting of the Board of the Children's Aid Society, Mr. W. B. Meienbacher reported 350 children are legally under the care of the society, and 444 are being supervised in their own homes.

The financing of the work with this second group is entirely from private donations. There were nine new protection cases, involving 16 children. Visits numbering 368 had been made by the workers to their homes and by office interviews had taken place. Two children had been placed for adoption.

Mr. Meienbacher cited the case of a mother who left the children were satisfactorily reunited with their father, after having been legally under the care of the C.A.S. for some time. It is one of the aims of the workers to bring the families together when advisable.

Mr. J. Fred Wilson, chairman of the Board, announced the forming of a Child Welfare Committee to work in co-operation with the staff of the C.A.S. He welcomed Mr. H. R. Parks, a newcomer on the board from Trenton, to the meeting, who spoke briefly.

Christ Church AYPA Makes Gift

The highlight of the regular meeting of the Christ Church AYPA's was the presentation of a pair of cuff links to Ron Lane for the excellent job he did as local convener of the 32nd provincial conference held recently in Belleville. Ron thanked the group, accepting the gift, "on behalf of the rest of the committee, without whose wonderful help the conference could not have been the success it was."

Presentation of the gift was made by the president, Allan Gardiner. Archdeacon J. R. Creegan commended Ron for the excellent work done, "and it was work, make no mistake about it." Mr. Creegan went on to say that he hoped the experience of the recent conference would result in many members arranging to attend the next one, which is to be held in Toronto. He also hoped the delegation from the Diocese of Ontario would show as much ingenuity and "joi de vivre" as the delegation from Niagara had shown at the one held here. The Niagara group were the ones who were shredding wheat boxes for hats.

The devotional period was led by the president, with Shirley Shaw reading the Scripture. Following the short business meeting, the group enjoyed various games and dancing. Beola Pollman's group were in charge of the meeting.

Refreshments were served.

Y'S MENETTES

The bi-monthly meeting of the Y's Menettes was held last Tuesday evening at the Y.M.C.A. The president, Mrs. Eric Whitfield, read letters from World Service and the Belleville Hospital Building Fund.

Members agreed to send funds to both organizations. New projects were discussed and it was decided to have a home-baking sale in the market building on Saturday in December.

Reports of the pre-natal clinic indicated continued new interest among the mothers-to-be.

Remainder of the evening was spent making dolls for the Children's Aid Society.

Mrs. Malcolm Moffat and Mrs. F. R. Clarke served refreshments.

EVENING DRAMA is nicely expressed in a slim coat of black velvet embroidered at the shoulders with gray and pink paillettes and lined in pink satin. With it is a strapless sheath dress, also of pink satin.

IT'S A FINE SEASON for fur, not only for garments but fur trim and fur accessories. A little collar, a belt or cuffs of leopard lend charm to a simple jersey dress. For a touch of luxury there's a collar of mink, edged with pearls and tied with pink velvet ribbons.

COMING INTO THE PICTURE is the bloused back, for suits and coats as well as for dresses. Gray silk and wool sharkskin makes an easy suit with bloused back, a plain front and deep dolman sleeves. A narrow self belt marks the waistline. The skirt is smartly slender.

BRIGHT AND BRIEF is the word on the prettiest and youngest hats. Magenta velours outlined in black makes a miniature scalloped cap worn with a black veil that has black and magenta dots.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By HEATHCOTE FAIRFAX

DIVORCED, SHE CONTINUES TO WEAR HER WEDDING RING—HER FRIENDS ARE CRITICAL

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a divorcee and have a child. I still wear my wedding ring, but my friend tell me I should not do this. The reason I still wear it is because I don't feel that, since I have a child, it would seem strange and might cause misunderstanding if I had no ring.—D. M.

Dear D.M.:

Convention, of course, decrees that a divorcee's name should not wear a wedding ring, and most of them prefer not to do so anyway, since it is a symbol of something that no longer exists. Hence, I should think you would find it strange for you to be without a wedding ring when you have a child, since there are so many other women in a similar position these days.

However, if you feel more comfortable wearing a ring, feel free to do so. I don't think certainly is no vital reason why you should change your style to conventions sake if you prefer to do otherwise.

HER ILLNESS COST HER FRIENDS

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My problem started last year when I became ill and wasn't able to go to school. Ever since then, I don't seem to have any friends.

I'm 15 years old, and like dancing and going out, and I know I'm missing a lot of it. I don't see much of the girls my age because they are always busy, and I can't go to their houses. I went to a dance, but not with a boy, and I just felt funny because all the girls knew boys and I didn't know anybody. They all had fun, while I just sat there. It wasn't much like that I was sick.

I guess I've just got to find new friends, but where? My father and mother are wonderful to me, and they would let me go out on dates, but I don't know any boys. I just feel like a wallflower.—S. R.

Dear G.R.:

You don't say whether or not you have returned to school, but I assume you have, since you evidently are able to go out places again.

If you were out of school for a long time, I can understand that it might very well be hard to get back into the swing of things, since the other girls got used to being without you and perhaps aren't very thoughtful about including you in things again.

I wish you had told me more about your illness and other details of your life, so that I could judge better what the real cause of your present loneliness may be, and how you could go about remedying matters.

INVITE FRIENDS IN

It seems to me, however, that it might help you regain your place among your friends if you started the ball rolling yourself by inviting a group of them to your home. You might make a joke or it by writing each one an invitation to your "coming-out party." A light touch like that should appeal to them.

Then plan the nicest kind of party you can. If you give other people fun, you'll have fun, too, and the first thing you know you will be feeling that you're one of the crowd again. You might pick out one or two of the girls you used to know best before you were sick and ask them to help you plan the party. In this way, they will take more interest in it and be eager to see it go over well.

Don't stop with the party, however. Look around and see if there aren't some clubs you might join in your town where you would meet boys and girls of your own age and share in their activities. If there aren't any clubs for young people in your community, go to the YWCA in the large city that is only about half an hour away from you, and find out what they have to offer in the way of activities for girls your age. I know they have a great many, and I know, too, that some of those activities include boys.

Don't wait for friends and good times to come to you. Go out and find them yourself. Start with the things I have suggested and soon you will find one thing leads to another and pretty soon you won't be lonely any more.

How to KEEP FIT after 50

In the old days fifty seemed the signal to slow down—take things easy—watch your digestion—have rest. Not any more, advice. But these days you can face fifty with energy, interesting and active years ahead—active that is, if you can avoid backache and the "tired out" feeling, due to kidney and bladder disorders, that often slow down people after age. Thousands of all ages have found that Doan's Pills help the kidneys and bladder in great action—helping them to feel better, look better, work better. Don't let worn out kidneys make you miserable. QUESTION:

I enjoy reading your recipes as they are so explicit and leave nothing to guess. I wonder if you have a recipe for Orange Loaf. . .I have had lovely fine-textured ones served to me but my recipes never seem to turn out like that. . . also a nice date loaf.—Betty G.

ANSWER:

Recipe for Orange Bread appeared here Nov. 3rd. I hope you saw it. I'll send along a copy to be sure.

DATE LOAF

Into a mixing bowl measure 1 cup chopped dates, 3-4 cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon salt and 1-2 cup boiling water. Stir and let stand until cool. Then beat 1 egg well and add it and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Sift all-purpose flour and measure 1 1-2 cups and sift it with 1 teaspoon baking powder and 1 teaspoon baking soda. Add them and stir quickly. Add 1-2 cup chopped nuts and 1-4 cup melted shortening. Stir just enough to blend. Pour into loaf pan about 9 inches which has been greased and lined with buttered brown paper. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour. This cuts better when 24 hours old.

LETTER:

. . . take this opportunity of expressing appreciation of your column. . . I believe people are happier when they eat what is good for them. . . that is where you do a great deal in your planning of every day health foods . . . just discovered lately from a Chinese lady that sprouts should be parboiled before adding them to a concoction—before this, I wondered how anyone could stand their bitter taste. . . here is yet another way to get rid of our cheese "surplus: Split shredded wheat biscuits spread with butter or margarine and top with generous slices of mild Canadian cheddar. Broil in the oven until cheese is bubbly and delicious toasted. . . a good lunch for children is made from melted amber honey, peanut butter and enough powdered skim milk to produce a fudge-like consistency . . . yours for better food.—Victoria C.

ANSWER:

Thanks for your encouragement and new ideas. Let me help you out like that.

QUESTION:

I never fail to read your helpful column. . .long may you and it last. Tonight I see a worried little note from a reader attempting to make yeast buns. I too had so many failures when I first started, but like her I said to myself "yeast buns—or else . . . I found my chief trouble was getting the sponge too warm while rising. Now make either hot buns or bread on an average of twice a week and friend husband dislikes them "dope" . . . am enclosing my standard recipe. One that is ready for the table in about 2 hours and 20 minutes from the time they are mixed. I hope you will publish it for the benefit of the stymied Mrs. M. B. or any others.

JIFFY BUNS

(Contributed by C.V.S.)

(No kneading—makes 2 doz. medium-sized buns.)

Dissolve 1 package granulated yeast in 2 tablespoons warm water in which has been dissolved 1 level teaspoon sugar. Let stand 10 minutes without stirring. Mix 1-4 cup sugar—less than 1 tablespoon used with yeast—3 tablespoons soft shortening (part margarine or better may be used if desired), 1 cup warm water, 1 level teaspoon salt and 1 well-beaten egg. Stir yeast mixture well and add to other ingredients. Add about 4 cups all-purpose flour (sift flour after measuring) mix well and let rise in a warm place (around 80 to 85 deg. Fahr.). It should be double in bulk in about 1 hour. When well-risen spoon into greased muffin tins until only half full. Let rise again (1 more hour) or until they have risen to top of tins. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 20 minutes.

These never fail. Sometimes I use 3 packages yeast, increasing the water dissolving it to 5 or 6 tablespoons. The double yeast makes a quicker-rising and lighter bun.—C. V. S.

ANSWER:

Thanks a million C. V. S.

QUESTION:

(From reader who did not give her name and asks me not to publish her letter. I want to know what to do to keep fruit from staking in recipe she sent me.)

ANSWER:

Try increasing the sugar in your recipe to 2 cups, increase the eggs to 4 eggs, and increase the flour to 2 cups sifted flour plus the 2 tablespoons used to flour fruit. If this does not work write again, and include name and stamped envelope.

you two dear friends there very soon!!

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECHMAN

VETERAN AND WIFE NOW HAVE A HOME

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

My husband is recently out of the service, and now "at long last" we are to have a home together, a new ranch-type house in a nearby suburb. We expect to move in soon, exactly before Christmas. We're thrilled! Would it be proper for me to write on our Christmas cards this new address? If you approve, would you please suggest a wording for this?—"His wife."

Hearty salutations to you and congratulations for this thrilling achievement of a new home! Yes, do include on your Christmas cards the address of your dream-come-true house. It's a good way to tell the Good News, proper and pleasantly practical. I'm all for writing personal newsitems on Christmas cards, particularly when the news is so important. . . makes the cards warm-hearted, Christmas letters. You might write, for example: "Bob and I send you and Hal our dearest Christmas greetings, and every good wish for the New Year. Our big news is that we're going to spend Christmas in our new home! The new address is —(give address, and, if possible, telephone number too). We're looking forward . . . to welcoming you there."

Yes . . . today under these circumstances, when the wedding reception is held in the room of the church, paper cups and paper napkins are generally used. And there are most attractive paper accessories these days — very wedding-like — white-on-white, or white with gold or silver.

CONGRATULATORY NOTE TO HER EX-BEAU

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

A man I used to know very well here was transferred by his company two years ago to another city. I have just heard that his engagement has recently been announced to a girl in that city. I would like to write him a note of congratulations and good wishes. Would this be proper? I don't know his home address, so would it be proper to send the note to his office address?—Lydia

Of course write him a cordial note of congratulation and good wishes—but no reference, please, to "the dear old days" of your friendship with him for that is not a proper to send the note to his office.

Beauty

By HELEN JAMIESON

FORMALS ARE A FIGURE TEST

Do you feel more comfortable and happy in day time frocks than when you are all dolled up for a gala evening? If so, there may be a reason. With the bare-top dress that you can't wear, any chronic defects of which, ordinarily, you are not conscious, suppose that you regard yourself from the party dress angle.

Do you are inclined to be plump excessive fat on your shoulders and upper back will be obvious—in which event you had better put a rein on your appetite for cream puffs and the contents of the bonbon box. If your upper arms are flabby, then they need be, you need daily arm swinging exercises. And that little roll about the nape line! Clasp your hands there, turn your head from side to side. You can crush the fat cells into nothingness.

A beautiful back is an elegant asset. But you can't have one unless you carry yourself gracefully. The feminine back should be straight as an arrow, with not just little hip in at the waistline. With the spinal column extended, the chest lifts, the head is held high, arms have an easy pose and the mid-section pulls itself in to accentuate the waistline neat.

Since few women have triple, full length mirrors, few have any idea of what may be going on in the way of skin defects on the back of the neck and the upper portion of the torso. Blackheads often form there, through the friction of blouses and frocks made of stiff or harsh fabrics. Hence the need of the long-handled brush when bathing to keep the pores free of dust.

Need Deep Seaway

Construction of the St. Lawrence seaway is expected to play an important part in Canada's development. The deep seaway, permitting passage of heavy freighters from the lakehead to Montreal, will help Canada keep up with the needs of her already-strained transportation system during the next quarter-century. This freighter is loading iron ore at the Port Arthur, Ont., dock taking ore from Steep Rock Iron Mines, for delivery to smelters in Ontario and the United States, through the inland water route. Changes Proposed Seaway Will Make Outlined by Writer

By FORREST ENDUE

Canadian Press Business Editor

If Canada today needs a deep seaway from Atlantic to Lakehead, Canada of the future fairly shouts for it.

According to current estimates, Canada will by 1980 have 28,000,000 people compared with today's 14,000,000, and a production of $85,000,000,000 compared with today's $14,000,000,000.

If these estimated are borne out we will be scrambling in the next quarter century to keep up with the needs of her already-strained transportation system.

A deep seaway is part of the proposed St. Lawrence seaway and power project. In its power phase, the project would include development of 2,200,000 horsepower of electricity in the 47-mile international rapids section of the St. Lawrence river between Prescott and Cornwall.

THREE CANALS

In its seaway phase, it would consist principally of building 27-foot canals in the 115 miles of river from Prescott to Montreal, to replace the present 14-foot canals. These shallow passages allow only small ships of about 2,500 ton deadweight capacity. The reality today is transshipment of cargoes from large ships into small ones with consequent increased costs.

In the part, some parts of Canada opposed the seaway with the argument that it would take from one part of the country and give to another; that there was one national pot with just so much in it and the more one section got out of it, the less another section would get.

Even today objections remain. But the bulk of opinion seems to have swung to the view that the Canadian pot is a growing one which promises bigger helpings for almost everyone.

Here is the sort of thinking expressed by Donald Gordon, president of Canadian National Railways, when he said "Whatever tends to open up Canada and help it grow is good for this railroad" indicating presumably that what is railways may lose to the seaway in one respect they will gain in another.

DOMINION WANES

Montreal used to oppose the seaway, fearing it would cut down Montreal as an ocean port. There may still be lingering doubts there but enthusiasm is more evident.

A Montreal engineer told me: "When the seaway comes we shall have to double the facilities of Montreal harbor." And looking further east he said:

"Maritime ports will handle more Canadian goods than ever."

A deep seaway will bring more ocean ships into the Great Lakes. Increasing numbers of small, modern European freighters are already plying inland, and European shipping companies are looking for opportunities that they believe a seaway will bring.

It is felt, however, that it will be more economic to ship bulk cargoes, such as wheat, to Montreal or farther points by lower-cost lake ships. Additionally, a large proportion of the grain crop is carried as ballast in liners which won't come into the lakes.

CHANGES DOWN RIVER

The difference would be that grain would move farther east before the close of lake navigation and would be stored at ports from Montreal down.

Rimouski, Que., and Louisburg, N.S., are among ports mentioned as possibilities in this connection.

Rimouski, or a port farther up the river, might fit into a pattern whereby ships carrying Labrador iron ore to Lake Erie would proceed, say, to Port Colborne at the eastern end of Lake Erie, or even to Port Arthur or Fort William, to pick up grain.

In any event, say seaway students, the enlarged storage from Montreal eastward would increase the winter railway flow of grain to Canadian Atlantic ports.

In summer, on the other hand, they see products of the Atlantic provinces — including lumber, newsprint and agricultural products—finding low-cost water transportation into central Canada and the United States, with less dependence on overseas markets.

SPURS COMPETITION

In regard to possible injuries from the seaway, a Bank of Nova Scotia survey comments:

"The Cape Breton coal industry will be faced with increased competition from United States coal in its present Quebec market. Similarly, the inland shipyards will be subject to competition from coastal yards and perhaps from overseas yards, though they may get an increased volume of maintenance and repair work.

"The canallers (smaller ships which now operate in the 14-foot canals) will be up against most unequal competition once large freighters can freely up and down the St. Lawrence.

"Generally speaking, however, fears of injury from the seaway have probably been exaggerated. The United States coal industry, which opposed the Tennessee Valley Authority as it now opposes St. Lawrence power, found that, far from being decreased, consumption of coal was enlarged in the area served by TVA because of the industrial stimulus provided by cheap water-power."

CARRYING CARGOES?

Seaway economists estimate that five cents a bushel will be saved from the cost of grain shipments to Montreal when the big lakers can go right through; and perhaps another cent through elimination of lake transshipment cost. Further, in the words of G. G. McLeod, department of transport economist:

"Since upbound cargoes promise to outweigh the down—just the opposite of today—competition for downbound grain cargoes should lower rates to give them the greater part of the benefit."

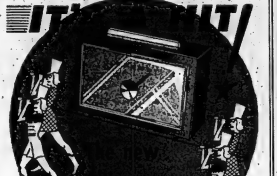
Mr. McLeod says, too, that British Columbia lumber may find the seaway a lower-cost route into central Canada.

Capacity of the present 14-foot canals between Lake Ontario and Montreal is about 10,000,000 tons a year. Estimated capacity of the 27-foot canals would be about 50,000,000 tons, and it is proposed to build them so that capacity can be doubled to 100,000,000 tons, and locks can be deepened to 30 feet if desired.

From where will such tonnages come?

As one item, Labrador Iron Ore Company, scheduled to come into production next year, says the seaway would allow it to ship 20,000,000 tons of ore a year instead of the 10,000,000 tons to which it feels present facilities limit it; and the bigger figure is by no means regarded as a ceiling.

As already indicated, a larger movement of grain is another expected item.



Probably the biggest factor, however, is Canada's expected growth.

It is this which promises bigger helpings from a bigger pot.

ATTEMPT FAILS

CHICAGO (AP) — Aubrey O. Cookman, Jr., arrived Wednesday in Chicago after a swift but unsuccessful attempt at breaking the commercial airliners. His total time was 124 hours and 45 minutes. The record: 90 hours.

A deep seaway is part of the proposed St. Lawrence Seaway and Power project. In its seaway phase it would consist principally of building 27-foot canals in the 115 miles of the river from Prescott to Montreal, replacing the present 14-foot canals and permitting ships of heavier tonnage easy passage from the head of the Great Lakes to Montreal and the Atlantic ocean. This coal freighter rounds a corner in the Soulanges canal to enter the Montreal harbor. Another river freighter is ready to load a cargo of package freight. Sunday School Lesson:

Too Many Underdogs

By ROY L. SMITH

This week's Sunday school lesson on the subject of compassion ought to remind us that there are too many underdogs in our world—too many persons who have found the struggle for existence too much for them, too many victims of industrial accidents which have robbed them of more than life and limb, too many victims of an economic system which had no interest in them as individuals.

LONG DISTANCE SINNERS

A Kansas City gangster was shot in the course of a gang war and his widow said of him, "I cannot understand why anyone would want to do that to him. He was the kindest of men. Why, he could not stand it even to see a dog, a cat, or a bird suffer." She then went on to tell how he had gone to great pains to rescue a robin that had become imprisoned in some wire netting.

It was quite natural, of course, that the widow should see the good, and even the best, in the man she loved. That there was good in him was of course true. He was kind to those near at hand, but he could be ruthless toward those out on the circumference.

There are those who enjoy the designation of "good citizens" who would go the second, the third, and even the fourth mile to relieve the distress in their own block, who would also manipulate the market so as to wreck competitors, throw whole industrial organizations into bankruptcy and leave hundreds ready for the breadlines.

MEANING OF COMPASSION

Genuine Christian compassion is the kind of spirit which will extend helpfulness to those we have never seen, who may be of another color, who may actually be competitors of ours in the industrial system, but who are in need.

Real compassion does not ask "how many votes will this mean?" or "when will I get my money back?" or "is the good public relations?" It only stops long enough to ascertain whether or not the need is genuine, whether or not the relief will be administered effectively and constructively, and whether or not it is being extended in such a way that it will not have to be extended again within a few weeks.

Christian compassion does not ask whether or not the needy are of "our" color, creed, social standing, political faith, or economic group.

THE JERICHO ROAD

There was a time when the Jericho road was no more than 30 miles in length but today it runs around the world. There is not a land or a continent on all this earth which does not stand in need.

Oddly enough, one of the greatest needs of the world is not for food, clothing, and shelter, but for patience, understanding, and sympathy.

The Christian missionary has gone to the ends of the earth teaching men that they are born in the image of God, and the backward and retrograde races of the earth have accepted that doctrine and set out on the long search for democracy. Some of them are making some tragic mistakes, but as one keen-minded young Egyptian said, "We have the right to make our own mistakes, especially if we are expected to pay for them."

No nation can expect to play the role of a world leader today without also expecting that the underprivileged nations of the earth will lay their problems at its door, asking for healing.

Cabinet in hand-rubbed walnut, mahogany or limed oak veneer, with matching tapered legs.

Picture Sentry wipes out roll-over... streaks and flutter ... automatically gives you true-to-life pictures

In the Studio—cameras pick up perfect image. Diagram represents the television wave pattern as it appears on an engineer's oscilloscope.

But man-made interference—a passing truck, a neighbour's vacuum cleaner—can distort TV waves. Such interference scrambles the wave pattern like this.

Scrambled TV waves ruin reception. Image becomes streaked, distorted, or starts to roll over. Crosley tackled this problem—developed Picture-Sentry.

Crosley Picture-Sentry (an electronic circuit using a transistor-like germanium diode) guards against scrambling. Image stays clear, sharp—as in the studio.

This popular new Crosley set combines smart, modern cabinet design with a superlative big-screen picture at reasonable cost. Other features in addition to Picture-Sentry include:

Atikokan in Ten Years Grows From Hamlet of 300 to 4,500

By DAVE STOCKAND
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ATIKOKAN, Ont. (CP)—When the iron-mining township of Atikokan looks into the future, which is often, it sees itself as a city.

In the 10 years since the iron stamped this northwestern Ontario community from its slumber as a railway hamlet the population has spiralled from 300 to more than 4,500, and Atikokan says this is just a start.

Streets are unpaved and all the plumbing hasn't been brought in—not yet; but the iron ore 70-75 ft. deep from the bottom of Steep Rock lake, four miles away, means an annual payroll of $4,500,000.

At least that is what the sacrings in wages total under present production, with 1,250,000 tons of ore shipped this season by Steep Rock Iron Mines Ltd.

BIG WORKING FORCE

Mining that much iron ore took more than 1,000 workers. Underplans mapped by Steep Rock and Caland Ore Co. Ltd., Canadian subsidiary of Inland Steel of Chicago, the need for men will shoot upward.

By 1958 Steep Rock plans to boost its annual haul to 5,500,000 tons, and says the need will be for 2,500 workers. The Caland mine, expected to take out its first ore in 1955, will produce 2,400,000 tons a year when fully developed.

Atikokan's business picture for the last year is described by Neil Edmonstone, Steep Rock secretary treasurer, as fairly stable.

"But," he says, "with the Caland arrival I think there will be other upsurge in the mercantile development of the town."

Figures aside, say the people of Atikokan, it's a good place to live.

TOP BIRTH RATE

As for the people of Atikokan—pavement is just one of many—they multiply as the population increases. And townsfolk boast that Atikokan had Canada's highest birth rate last year and talk of a population of 15,000 in the early 1960s.

Atikokan is turning miners into merchants. Gordon Edwards, a Steep Rock man and president of the Atikokan Chamber of Commerce, says "it wouldn't be exaggerating" to put at approximately 15 the number of men who have gone into business for themselves after starting out at the mine.

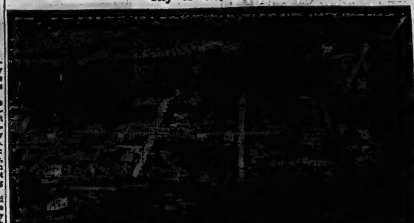
He tells of one man who came here with a packsack full of customs jewelry. Not long after that he threw up a shack, first business establishment, and today owns a prosperous hardware store.

Of Atikokan Mr. Edwards says: "Sure, it's a shoddy looking place, but it won't be a few years from now. There isn't a thing you've got in the city that we aren't going to need here."

There are tar paper-covered shanties in Atikokan. There are also modern bungalows. Built by Steep Rock in conjunction with Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, they rent to mine workers at a top of $62.50 a month. A new sub-division carries the posh name of "Dunbar Heights."

DIVISIONAL POINT

Atikokan got its first boost when it became a Canadian National Railways divisional point in 1902. It is becoming a township after nine years under the wing of the Ontario government as an improvement district.



While so classed the community was governed by a board of trustees appointed by the lieutenant-governor-in-council.

Nov. 30, however, self government begins with the township's first election day. A reeve and four councillors will be chosen.

Just about that time citizens will mark the official opening of the first road link with Fort William and Port Arthur. Next, Atikokan will press for a road westward to the pulp and paper town of Fort Frances.

Atikokan is becoming a township instead of a town for financial reasons: If it became a town, the mine would be outside the taxation district and Atikokan wouldn't be eligible for a share of the mining tax collected by the Ontario government.

City of The Future

When the iron-mining township of Atikokan, in northwestern Ontario, looks into the future, it sees itself as a city. In the 10 years since the huge development began at nearby Steep Rock iron mines, the population has risen from 300 to more than 4,500. An annual payroll of $4,500,000 at the mine still is growing and the community is keeping pace. This is an aerial view showing the railway line and the original buildings in the foreground. New residential subdivisions are being built in the background. (CP Photo)

CANNIFTON

CANNIFTON — Miss Claudia Farnham and Mrs. Manley Mitchell went to Toronto on Saturday to see the Santa Claus parade and the Winter Fair.

Mrs. George Sharpe, with Mrs. Bert Blenkman and children were in Toronto for the week-end to see the Santa Claus parade.

Mr. Bill Sharpe, of Oakville, came down to Toronto Saturday night to see his mother and sister and took Mrs. Blenkman back for a short visit as she had never been in Oakville.

Mrs. Alden Boyd is home from Kingston hospital where she underwent an operation.

The weekly euchre of the Canniton-Cordyville Euchre Club was held with seven tables playing. Prizes were won by: Ladies, Mrs. Windsor, Mrs. Simmons and Jean Lywood; men's, Mrs. Urch, Mac Palmer and Allan Smith. The lone march by Mrs. Simmons and the draw by Mrs. Windsor.

A few of the ladies of the village attended the cooking school at the Capitol Theatre this week.

Britain Studies Increasing Trade With Red China

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain is giving "active consideration" to the expansion of trade in non-strategic goods with Communist China, Trade Minister Peter Thorneycroft said today.

He was replying to a barrage of questions from Labor members in the House of Commons on reasons for restricting trade in such items as antibiotic drugs.

Labor member Barnett Stross complained Thursday that Chinese orders for pharmaceuticals and other non-strategic goods were going to other countries, while Britain was doing little about it.

Thorneycroft said today: "With conference of other countries, we are acting together with our allies in Western Europe on this matter. . . .

"I am not out of sympathy with what you have in mind," which is the desire to expand trade in non-strategic goods, and that is under active consideration at present."

Destroyer Stands By Crippled British Ship

HON GKONG (AP)—A British destroyer today was standing by the crippled British freighter Cairnross, adrift in a northeast gale 90 miles southeast of Amoy in Formosa strait.

The 1,911-ton freighter radioed Thursday night that she had lost her rudder and needed immediate help. The destroyer Bride's Bay put a tow line on the freighter, but it radioed today that the line had parted. The destroyer said it was trying to put another line aboard.

Giving Richer Life Way to Beat Reds

LONDON (Reuters)—The Times said today that the battle against Communism will be decided by the West's capacity to give its citizens "a richer and more secure, as well as freer, future than those of the countries on the other side of the frontier."

The Times was commenting editorially on a series of four articles it has carried this week in which it noted a general decline in membership of the Communist party but warned that "Communists in Europe are still full of resource."

Hit-Run Raid on Red Centre in Indo-China

A major victory was scored by French units forced to withdraw from important installations in the Northern Indo-China. French troops occupied the town temporarily, destroyed the installations, stores and then withdrew. This scene during the raid shows fire bombs being dropped from high level. The tank at left foreground was brought up to assist in withdrawal of the paratroopers who blasted a trail for the attacking force.—Central Press Canadian.

Air Ministry Says Object Was Weather Balloon

LONDON (AP) —That "huge, glowing metallic object" reported by a military radar team as hovering menacingly over Britain's coastline, probably was just a weather balloon, "the air ministry decided Thursday night.

At any rate there was a metal balloon in the area and at the precise time army radar crews spotted a mysterious object on an air ministry spokesman said.

The war office reported Wednesday night the "metallic intruder" had first been seen by F/O. T. A. Jonson from the cockpit of a Vampire night fighter. Then Nov. 3 a military radar team plotted the object on their screens, tracing its movements.

These movements corresponded exactly with the passage of the meteorological balloon released that day, the air ministry said.

Chain Store Taxes To Be Increased By New Ruling

TORONTO (CP) — A ruling on chain store taxes which will increase a $500,000 increase in Toronto tax revenues was handed down Thursday by Ontario Judge.

Assessment officials here said thanks to expected increases in revenues in other municipalities.

Judge W. H. Robinson dismissed the appeal of Loblaw Groceterias Company which, if allowed, would have permitted simplification of their Oakville premises as a grocery store rather than a department store.

This means the store pays about $1,000 more business tax, based on real estate assessment, it would pay on the entire million square feet was the store sold clothing, books and silverware in addition to grocery items.

A. J. R. Gray, Toronto assessment commissioner, said under similar reclassification taxes on Loblaw's store in Port Credit Toronto area would jump from about $500,000 to $1,000,000.

Richards said his horse was in good condition.

Big Boom Under Way Now In Home Games

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Everybody is looking for a simple, inexpensive way to get rich.

Well, we've stumbled across one possible way. All you have to do is invent a new parlor game half as popular as bingo or canasta.

There is a big boom under way now in home games. And guess who is behind it? Nothing but vision, no less.

The E. H. Barton, president of the Toy Manufacturers of America, is happy to say a kind word for vision, which has been denounced as a one-eyed viper responsible for everything wrong from the increase in adult delinquency to the rise in juvenile ulcers.

"At first we were afraid television would hurt us, but it has turned out to be a big help," said Barton. "Naturally, vision is home more now, But they can't look at TV all the time—so they play more games."

Barton heads Parker Brothers, Inc., which regularly publishes 250 to 300 different games.

"We test out a little new games each year, of which only about two per cent are put on the market," he said. "Most of them are invented by professionals, but sometimes the best are the work of amateurs."

MONOPOLY A HIT

An example was Charles Darrow, an unemployed Philadelphia heating engineer, who in 1933 invented Monopoly, one of the most popular new games of this century.

Game publishing resembles song and book publishing in many ways.

"Each game is a business gamble," said Barton. "You can spend anywhere from $10,000 to $150,000 marketing a new game—and lose it all. You never can be sure what the public will like."

"When it comes to filling a housewife with a fresh idea may make the oldest professional game inventor look like a beginner. She may be closer to new trends. The most exciting thing any game is that it must be fun."

Barton says chess is still the most popular game in the world, but in the United States is outdone by bridge, golf and poker.

"I wish I had the sole rights to checkers," he said, wistfully.

Two Injured

BARRIE (CP) — Two persons were injured Thursday following a car-truck collision on No. 27 highway four miles north of here.

Police said Coutts crashed into the rear of a transport loaded gravel truck driven by Garfield Goodson, 35, of Barrie.

Coutts has been charged with careless driving.

Communist Harangue Is Seen As Sign They Are Stalling For Orders on Korea Talks

PANMUNJOM (AP) —Communist diplomats fired a storm of abuse today at United States ambassador Arthur H. Dean, ruled out of answering his repeated demands to explain their "buzz" plan for neutrals to attend the Korean peace conference.

Dean said the Red "harangue" probably is just a stall until Peiping or Moscow send orders.

Dean said today's sub-committee session on composition and site could be wound up "as a matter of zero." Another sub - committee working out a date was reported no progress. However, both are scheduled to meet again Saturday.

The communist plan calls for non-belligerents to attend the conference without a vote on major issues. They apparently abandoned early demands that some non-belligerents have full participation in a plan accepting appeals to United Nations proposal for a meeting of only those countries which fought in Korea.

MAY COMPROMISE

However, Dean's pressure on the Reds to give details of their proposal, is to the UN approach, indicates the Allies might be willing to compromise.

Dean said the Communists would not answer his repeated requests that they explain to him "simply, clearly and specifically" what observers would do at the conference.

Instead, they delivered a "long" abusive, ill - tempered harangue . . . hand - attacked me, accused a war-monger, having lack of faith, trying to postpone the political conference.

"They warned me that under no circumstances was I again to refer to the USSR as not a neutral."

Dean said he answered that Soviet officers "participated in the interrogation and the obtaining of forced confessions" from Allied war prisoners and that "our people were advising your side on military, trade and similar matters. Machine - guns and other equipment were captured from your side with Russian lettering."

Prime Minister Malan Has New Issue on Hands

By ASTLEY HAWKINS

PRETORIA (Reuters) — South African government, demanded for the incorporation of the British-run territories of Bechuanaland, Basutoland and Swaziland into the union within the next five years may reach an embarrassing impasse if Prime Minister Daniel Malan continues them.

Britain is pledged to consult the native inhabitants as well as Parliament before any decision is made. They have demand assurances which Malan's Nationalist government could not satisfy.

In past negotiations, the native peoples have opposed any transfer to South African government.

Malan's restrictive policies for colored peoples are likely to have hardened that view.

More than once this year, Malan has told the South African Parliament that the position of the so-called high commission territories inside South Africa's boundaries was intolerable and that the country's patience for a settlement was exhausted.

These outspoken statements have suddenly and publicly revived an issue long dormant. Now, however, Malan has set no time limit for a settlement—within five years, that is, within the life of his newly re-elected government.

GREAT RESPONSIBILITY

Many opponents of the government wonder whether South Africa really wants the responsibility of another million Africans to add to the 10,000,000 colored peoples she already administers.

Malan has expressed concern that Britain may think of creating another Gold Coast or Nigeria with native government in the protectorates. He has also expressed the hope that recent British disclosures of investments point to another Britain not "digging in."

Addressing the Orange Free State congress of the Nationalist party, the Prime Minister said that South African government would consider sending a petition to the British government from the Union's Parliament.

All three territories asked to be left out of the Union of South Africa in the first referendum in 1909. Their wishes were granted but provision was made for their eventual transfer subject to conditions for the protection of native rights and interests.

Son Manouevres Mother Out Of Communist China

NIPAWIN, Sask. (CP) — Frank Choy of Nipawin manoeuvred his mother out of Communist China by the simple device of sending her an invitation to attend his wedding.

Frank's father, Joe Choy, came to Canada 45 years ago, leaving his wife and son behind. Frank arrived here four years ago.

When the Communists took over China, Mrs. Choy, 63, owned a quarter-section of land in a village near Canton where she raised a small crop. Then, because she was a landlord—her land was taken from her and she was punished by the Reds—she was forced to work. She worked a year before being released from jail, then worked detail, receiving no wages, clothes and the poorest of food. Mrs. Choy sent her money from Nipawin at intervals.

Determined to the task of getting his wife out of China, Mr. Choy saw an opportunity when his son went to Hong Kong to marry a girl he met there in 1948, Yvonne Look. Frank invited his mother asking her to attend the wedding and she agreed to get a passport. Her journey took her to Canton for three months. She never returned.

It took five months to get permission from the Canadian government for Mrs. Choy to enter Canada. The trip cost the family about $6,000.

Greenlease Kidnap-Killers To Die in Gas Chamber Dec. 18

By AL DOPKING

KANSAS CITY (AP)—The condemned kidnap-killers of six-year-old Bobby Greenlease waited today in jail cells for their last trip—the trip to the gas chamber in the Missouri state prison one week before Christmas.

Carl Austin Hall and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady will be executed together—as soon as possible after 12:01 a.m. EST Dec. 18.

They showed little emotion Thursday as they heard a federal judge, carrying out a jury's recommendation, sentence them to die. Hall, an Episcopal priest who visited them later said the kidnappers appeared resigned.

"When I saw Hall previous to the trial on two occasions his first statements were those of remorse," said Rev. George Evans. "I saw him again this afternoon and at his request talked to Mrs. Heady. She was the first time I had seen Mrs. Heady. She likewise expressed deep remorse."

Mrs. Heady, a divorcee, has expressed a desire to marry Hall before their execution, court officials said. Hall, who also was married and divorced, has not indicated a similar desire, officials reported.

The director of the federal bureau of prisons would have to give permission for such a marriage.

APPEAL UNLIKELY

There is small chance of an appeal against the death sentence. Roy Dietrich, court-appointed counsel for Hall said he saw nothing to warrant appealing the decision of Judge Albert L. Reeves.

The 34-year-old playboy and his 41-year-old alcoholic paramour snatched 6-year-old Bobby from a school yard on the fourth day of the trial.

They seemed relieved as they were hustled out of the courtroom, handcuffed and closely guarded.

At the state prison, warden Ralph Eggers reported that the public already is clamoring to see the death chamber. He said that he has a waiting list of applicants to see it.

Trieste Jobless Raid City Hall

TRIESTE (AP)—Workers protesting rising unemployment in disputed Trieste battered down the door of the city hall today in defiance of police.

An estimated 800 persons, reported by an Allied police official to b Communist-led, took part in the demonstration, the second such protest in two days.

About 50 of them broke into the locked city hall after smashing long four civil police and battering down aside door with long poles.

BREAK THROUGH CORDON

They remained inside only a few minutes before 200 police reinforcements surrounded the building. Those inside broke through the cordon and escaped.

The group had demanded to see Italian Mayor Gianni Bartoli. Earlier the demonstrators had tried but failed to see Allied military government leaders.

Shouting they want work, we want bread," the workers jeered when told the mayor was not in his office. They began breaking windows of the city hall.

CPR Rejected Chance to Share In Air Service

SUDBURY (CP) — G. R. McGregor, general manager of Canadian Air Lines, said Thursday night that the Canadian Pacific Railways was given a chance in 1937 to join with Canadian National Railways as an equal partner in setting up a cross-Canada airline but "turned down the suggestion and has regretted it to this day."

Addressing the annual meeting of the Sudbury Chamber of Commerce, he said it is "economically absurd at present for tow airlines to carry on east-west operations across Canada and the publicly-owned TCA now has a monopoly—although the time may come when it will not."

An application by Canadian Pacific Airlines to fly cross-Canada cargo planes was recently turned down by the cabinet.

3 Korean Soldiers Flee Reds To Get Refuge in U.S. Sentry Box

PANMUNJOM (AP) — Communist officers today refused a face-to-face meeting with three Korean soldiers who last night bolted from the Red prison camp and were given refuge in an American sentry box.

The three said they were South Koreans and had been shanghaied into the Communist army after being captured.

They insisted that the three be returned immediately, but the United Nations command said they will be held over in protective custody. If they refuse to go back to the Reds, all possibility will be liberated in South Korea.

An Indian spokesman for the neutral nations repatriation commission said the single man on the commission can decide this, and it will have to be discussed at the full sitting of the commission tomorrow."

REDS SPIRIT AWAY

Communist members of the Panmunjom joint observer team refused to meet today for investigation to determine the fate of 22 missing Allied captives.

The three soldiers told correspondents they were captured by the Communists in 1950 and 1951 and forced into the North Korean armies as laborers.

After the armistice, they were among 100 prisoners who picked a petition asking to be sent back to Communist China. They were promised repatriation, but later were told they were not prisoners-of-war but internees of the North Korean Red army.

They said they had walked from near Pyongyang, day and night for almost three days to the sentry box one, where they bolted to Allied lines.

SHOOTS AT KIDS

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Police Thursday night confiscated a 32-calibre revolver from a watchman at a parking lot after several children complained he shot at them. Police seized three blank cartridges, two of which were fired.

3,750,000 Dogs Now in Britain, All Have Freedom

By VALERY GIBSON

LONDON (AP) — Britain has 3,750,000 dogs, according to official population.

Dogs have free rights in London's squares and parks, for there is no dog pound. Nobody is interkept on a leash. They are allowed in most hotels and restaurants. They are carried free on London cities' buses and for only a small fare on the subway and railways.

The Royal Family keeps six dogs. The Queen has two corgis, Queen Mother one and Princess Margaret three. Their favorite pastime is to romp in the royal cattle dog with the pert ears.

Thanks to royalty the Corgi ranks high in popularity throughout the country. It is the fourth most popular dog in the Boxer and the aristocratic miniature poodle favored by Prime Minister Churchill. Above it, in third spot, comes the Labrador.

Second is the younger generation's Alsatian. At the top are the 2,200,000 Cocker Spaniels.

Kennel club officials believe the high cost of keeping a dog is causing gradual changes in breeding. While the number of dogs has remained near the 1939 count for 15 years, the number with pedigrees has doubled. Officials say prospective owners feel that if their dog is going to cost them so much, they might as well go all the way and buy a bluebood.

Official figures disclose that there is no money in dog breeding, yet the country has 20,000 registered breeders.

MONTH ON DRUNK CHARGE

WELLINGTON (Special)—The regular meeting of the W.I. was held in the town hall Tuesday evening. The president, Mrs. Walker, welcomed the members and their guests who numbered over 30 in all.

The birthday box contains more money for the Hospital Fund as six members are November girls. All are glad to hear that the cards sent were all appreciated and that those who received them are now feeling better. It was decided that the five drivers to Cherry Valley be paid.

Mrs. Walker will present the W.I. awards to the two students at the commencement next Thursday night. The highest girl and boy of grade nine will be chosen by the principal. Discussion followed how the hospital objective should be met.

The hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Jackson. Mrs. Harris had on display many cards of her valuable hobbies. One needs to see them to really appreciate the beauty of them. They are artistically arranged and classified.

PACIFIC COAST PICTURES

Miss Valleau also has a hobby. This summer she and her mother motored to the Pacific Coast. It was with great delight that the W.I. viewed on her screen the magnificent pictures all colored, of their trip. These were taken mostly from the roadside, one, in particular, was taken through the windshield, the Calgary stampede, the colorful tepees and the Indians, the pictures of the mountains in their natural colors had all the audience spellbound.

When crossing the ferry to Kelowna, B.C. they were interviewed for a radio program. Not missing such a good chance, she told about Prince Edward County and the good tomatoes canned here.

Anyone planning a trip out West be sure and visit the Butcher Gardens. The admission is only 75 cents and flowers, too beautiful to be true are shown. There was one glimpse of the Valleau running out of the ocean. It was too cold for her even in July.

Spectacular were the views of "Old Faithful" in Yellowstone Park and Mrs. Valleau didn't seem to mind sitting on a big snow bank in the "land of the world" cake.

Mrs. Harris moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Valleau for giving this grand travelogue.

Natives of Fiji, Friendly Islands Prepare Welcome

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP)—Natives of the Fiji and Friendly islands in the Pacific are planning celebrations that will be among the most colorful of the Commonwealth tour of the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh.

Arrival of the Queen at Suva, capital of the British south Pacific colony of Fiji, in mid-December will be the biggest event in the history of the islands which became part of the empire 79 years ago. The first visit by a reigning British monarch has caught the imagination of the natives to an unprecedented degree.

Plans are under way for an enormous invasion from the outlying islands to Suva, but it is one town which will not be worried by an accommodation problem. Fijians are content to sleep wherever they are served a meal.

BRAVE FIGHTERS

About half the population of Fiji consists of native Fijians, magnificent-built, bushy-haired people of Melanesian stock. Almost fanatically loyal to Britain, they proved the finest jungle soldiers in the Pacific war against the Japanese and are now fighting the terrorists in Malaya.

The other half are Indians, brought in as indentured laborers for the sugar plantations and gold mines. Today they control much of the colony's business.

For the royal visit the native Fijians will have pride of place. The two days of the Queen's visit, Dec. 17 and 18, will be a time of great feasting and rejoicing. High-lights will be the traditional ceremonies of the presentation of tabuas, or whale's tooth, to the Queen, and the kava ritual.

Kava, a drink that looks—and to Europeans tastes—like muddy water, is made from the yaqona root in a rigid and unchanging ceremony. After the powdered root has been mixed in a huge wooden bowl, the first drink will be handed to the Queen in a polished coconut shell by a cup bearer.

Enormous piles of gifts—carved island ornaments, great heaps of woven fabrics and mats, and scores of whales' teeth—will be presented to the Queen in accordance with the Polish scale that hospitable people considers the due of a distinguished visitor.

After two days of feasting and ceremonial, the royal visitors will fly to Nuniaba, Queen Salote's capital in Tonga. Queen Salote, six foot, three-inch chunky monarch who proved such a popular visitor at the Coronation, and members of her Tongan royal family, will be at the landing stage to meet the Queen and Duke.

PALACE FEAST

Dancing parties will present specially composed action songs at a feast to be held at the palace. For the remainder of the afternoon the royal party will be free to motor to drive round the island, or to swim at one of the secluded lagoon bays.

In the evening there will be a dinner at the residence of the British consul and agent. He maintains the only formal links with Britain, but has kept Tonga a loyal friend and ally for half a century.

That night 400 guests, each carrying a lighted torch, will keep a silent vigil round the palace in which the Queen and Duke will sleep. Then musicians will herald the dawn with a nose-flute symphony. The sleeping Queen is unlikely to be wakened by these soft cadences, but it is a tribute demanded by Tongan tradition and its modern times, an honor re-

Only The Rugged Need Apply for This

This is considered an easy exercise in the life of RCAF crews training in search-and-rescue techniques at Skootamatta Lake, near Cloyne, Ont. A hard day may include a parachute jump, a long trek in a blizzard, transporting an injured man by litter over rocks and muskeg. And no day could be called really tough unless someone fell through the ice of a cold, cold river and then attempted to build a fire to get dry. It's all in the course of instruction for the air force men and nursing sisters who may at any time be called to parachute into the most rugged of Canadian terrain to rescue stranded fliers.

Says Policemen Must Resist Nationalization

KINGSTON (CP) — Professor J. A. Corry, vice-principal of Queen's University said Thursday night police chiefs must take some responsibility in fighting any efforts at nationalization of Canada's police forces.

In an address to the second annual convention of the Chief Constables Association of Ontario, Professor Corry said "nothing in Europe can lead us to believe that the system of central jurisdiction is half as good as what we now have."

W. M. Nickle, Progressive Conservative member of the legislature for Kingston, said he was "gravely disturbed" at the increase in crime in the province and in the country.

"Incarceration is not the remedy," he said. "Maybe probation or a better system of parole could halt this serious . . . situation."

U.S. Dairymen Say Govt. Buying Good Butter, Bad Being Sold to Consumers

By OTTO MARTIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some United States dairymen are complaining that their government is buying the good butter and leaving low quality and undergrade butter for consumers. This practice, they say, is causing housewives to turn to substitutes.

These complaints come at a time when the secretary of agriculture, Ezra Benson, is pressuring the dairy industry to develop a self-help program that would permit the government to stop buying butter to bolster milk prices.

Under the dairy support program the department buys butter, cheese and dried skim milk when prices of these items, specified by law, fall to certain support levels. The government's holdings now include 160,000,000 pounds of butter, 258,000,000 pounds of cheese and 416,000,000 pounds of dried milk.

The government buys only the better grades—A and B—leaving lower grade butter without any attempt to the consumer market. Naturally, it is easier to sell something more better than it can sell to the consumer. Hence, it has been stuck with the grades in the government and push the other into commercial markets.

CHANGE URGED

Some dairymen are suggesting that the government change its buying program to take in the undergrade butter. They would have the government convert the low quality butter into butter oil and sell it, at cut-rate prices, to industrial food processors, who now use vegetable oils almost exclusively.

Another dairy suggestion is that butter be divided into two general classes—kitchen and cooking. The latter would be priced lower.

Before the Second World War, Americans consumed an annual average of about 18 pounds of butter. It now is down to about eight pounds. Margarine averaged for that three years before the war, but it now is up even with butter.

In a recent tour, the House of Representatives agriculture committee found dairymen generally agreed that the United States should not engage in "dumping" surplus butter supplies abroad. Such a program, dairy spokesmen said, would hurt the economy of friendly foreign nations and lead to trade retaliation against other U.S. farm products.

Prisoners Will Not Be Shackled Before Execution

PARIS (Reuters)—French prisoners sentenced to have their heads cut off by the guillotine will no longer be shackled in their cells at night.

The iron chains which bound the condemned men's wrists and ankles have been abolished "for humanitarian reasons," the justice ministry has announced.

Twenty-six prisoners are at present awaiting death in French jails. Some have been there for two or three years. Some have been shackled during the day as well as at night.

The government action arises at least partly from a strong movement for penal reform in France. The movement reached a peak recently with a motion picture entitled "We Are all Killers."

The film dealt with four men condemned to death, their lead writer under continual electric light, and finally the sudden arrival of the executioner. It described the men down the corridors to seize their victim who knew not when he was to die.

The guillotine itself, France's standard means of execution since 1792, was described recently by Prof. Jean Pradinaru as an instrument of "murderous vivacity" that never "has been the victim still beating after decapitation."

"HUMANITARIAN" METHOD

The guillotine was introduced in France as a humanitarian means to provide a swift and easy death. Its use was first suggested in modern times during the revolutionary period.

Some say it was first used by the Persians. At any rate, it was in use in England and Scotland and much of continental Europe during the Middle Ages.

In 13th-century Italy, nobles had the privilege of being executed by a similar device. In Edinburgh, it "Maiden," as it was known, is still on display at a museum.

REFUSED INDUCTION

DEN MOINES, Iowa (AP)—The Smith youths, both with beards traditional to their Mennonite religious sect, were sentenced May to three years each for refusing induction into the United States army. Emanuel J. Miller, 21, and Melvin J. Chupp, 22, both of Buchanan county, Iowa, were convicted last week.

Pope Says New Wound Opened By Red Action

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (AP) — Pope Pius said Thursday a "new wound has been opened in our hearts" by Communist actions against Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski, Roman Catholic primate of Poland.

The pontiff spoke to diplomatic representatives to the Vatican from nearly 50 countries received in special audience at the Pope's summer residence here. They presented their condolences to him for the current Communist persecution of the church and especially that against the Polish primate.

Cardinal Wyszynski was removed forcibly from his Warsaw archiepiscopal see two months ago.

The Pope declared in announcement at that time that the cardinal had been taken to a monastery, no other word of which has been heard about him.

One of the diplomats who attended today's solemn audience said the 76-year-old pontiff appeared unusually wan and grief-stricken as he read, in French, his brief message.

Wicks Resigns As He and Dewey Claim 'Victory'

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP) — Senator Arthur H. Wicks formally stepped down Thursday as lieutenant-governor of New York state after a bitter quarrel with Governor Thomas E. Dewey ending in victory claims by both camps.

The Republican row seems certain to scar party unity and endanger the Democrats in next year's election campaigns.

Wicks submitted his resignation Wednesday as majority leader and temporary president of the state Senate, through which he held the office of acting lieutenant-governor. The action was announced Thursday by Dewey following a special session of the legislature.

VENTED JAILED MAN

Dewey and the state party assembly committee had insisted that Wicks, because of visits to jailed racketeer Joseph S. Fay in Sing Sing prison, resign his leadership or be ousted as the senate majority.

Wicks maintained he had heard no word of censure from fellow senators about his visits to Fay. He claimed complete vindication. He said he resigned because his conflict with Dewey would impair state business.

But Dewey declared he had called for Wicks' resignation because of the Fay visits, and said "the resignation speaks for itself."

WANTS VACATION, TOO

The 53-year-old Wicks, a veteran of 27 years in the senate, asked why he resigned, said "One reason is that I'm taking a much-needed vacation," and did not want the responsibilities of the leadership "marring that vacation."

He made it plain that he was not resigning his senate seat. His district consists of Herkimer valley district around Kingston, about 80 miles north of New York City.

Senator Walter Mahoney of Buffalo, who once differed with Dewey but since has returned to party regularity, was chosen majority leader to succeed Wicks.

The lieutenant-governorship became vacant Sept. 30 when Canadian-born Frank C. Moore resigned to become head of a private foundation.

Wisconsin Girl Now Believed To Have Been Slain

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP)—Almost four weeks have passed since the disappearance of pretty young Evelyn Hartley, and with them have gone nearly all hope that the puzzle will be solved.

There is little doubt that Evelyn, 15-year-old daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Richard Hartley, was forcibly abducted the night of Oct. 24 from the Viggo Rasmussen home, where she was baby-sitting. Her coat, glasses and shoes were left behind and there were bloodstains around an open basement window, the lawn and a nearby home in the sparsely-settled section of town.

BELIEVED DEAD

Her continued absence is interpreted, even by her parents, as having no other possible meaning than that she is dead.

The only clues still are those found in Pettibone creek the first week after the girl vanished, when police and thousands of volunteers combed the country and poked into the tributaries and sloughs of the Mississippi river.

The best clue is a pair of black tennis shoes, stained with blood, with a soft arch matching footprints found outside the Rasmussen basement window.

SEVERAL QUESTIONED

A pair of girl's panties and a pair of men's trousers are the other clues, but they could definitely be connected with the case.

Several men have been questioned in the case, all have been cleared. On week-ends a few townsfolk still search the countryside looking for clues, but all-organized searching has been abandoned.

Unemployed In Trieste Raid Labor Offices

TRIESTE (AP)—Several hundred Trieste unemployed raided the Allied labor offices Thursday, smashing files and furniture.

Demonstrating against the firing of workers by the Allied military government, the job-hunters were chased out of the offices by civil police.

Then they rushed to the Trieste city hall, chorused "We want work," and staged a sit-down strike which obstructed traffic. A few broke into the building, were arrested and quickly released.

Allied officials said from 300 to 400 workers were involved in the raid on the labor office. They estimated damages at about $150.

A police sergeant said the crowd was Communist-led.

United States and British authorities have dismissed about 1,600 civilian employees since the Anglo-American military command in Trieste zone A of the Trieste territory took over control in Italy while Yugoslavia retains zone B.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Trans-Border Traffic Decision Is Reserved

LONDON (CP) — The judicial committee of the Privy Council has reserved its judgment on an appeal involving control of trans-border traffic on Canadian highways. The verdict probably will be known in two or three months.

Decision to reserve judgment was made on the ninth day of a hearing at which seven Canadian provinces were represented. Eleven Queen's Counsels appeared before the law lords to argue this issue:

"What are the powers of the provinces under the provisions of the British North America Act to legislate with regard to the use of the highways as part of an interprovincial bus service?"

TWO-PART APPEAL

The appeal was brought from a judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada in October, 1951. It arose from the granting in 1949 to Mackenzie Coach Lines of a license permitting it to operate buses from Boston through the province of New Brunswick to Halifax and Glace Bay, N.S.

The Supreme Court made this ruling:

1. New Brunswick held the power to restrict operations of the bus line within its boundaries.

2. The province was not entitled to control the company's movement across international or provincial borders.

Ontario, Alberta and Prince Edward Island appealed the second part of the ruling. The bus company and the two major Canadian railways appealed the first.

The federal government intervened in support of the latter appeal and Nova Scotia asked that both appeals be thrown out.

Thousand Firms Use Radioactive Materials in U.S.

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP) — A United States atomic energy commission spokesman declares that more than 1,000 firms in the U. S. already are using radioactive materials to improve industrial processes.

Dr. George G. Manov, assistant director of the office of industrial development of the AEC, said "practically all the information industry needs" is non-secret.

Among the uses of radioactive cobalt-60, a material he said is made in Canada, are: Gauging, to be listed detection of flaws in castings, welds, measurement of flow of oil in pipelines, control of refining processes and accurate analysis of quantities of impurities in oil refining.

Interest High In Intermediate Gridiron Final

MONTREAL (CP) — Lakeshore Flyers take to the field today Saturday against a highly-rated Fort William squad in an attempt to give Montreal its first Dominion intermediate football title in 25 years.

The Redskins, western Canada champions, will try to retain the Percy Robinson Memorial Trophy for the west and bring it to Fort William for the first time in four years.

The teams clash in a sudden-death affair, the first east-west intermediate final sanctioned by the Canadian Rugby Union.

The Flyers, Quebec rugby football union titists, defeated Peterborough Crebus 11-0 Saturday in the eastern final. The Redskins edged the 1952 Dominion champs, Norwood-St. Boniface Legionnaires 16-12 last week.

GOOD DEFENCE

Lakeshore is reported in fine shape, with an airtight pass-defence, a strong defensive platoon and a hard-charging backfield. The Flyers finished the season 22-game and intercepted three of 29 attempts in defeating Peterborough.

In advancing this far, the Redskins survived an injury jinx that plagued them from pre-season training to the western final. They are expected to take to the air against the Flyers as they did in winning the western title.

Coach Bill Davies' Flyers is an aggregation made up largely of players from suburban area bordering Lake St. Louis.

The team's sparkplug is Wilf O'Hagan, a running halfback who came back after a foot injury and was outstanding in the QRFU playoffs and the eastern final. Fullback Joe Siracina, formerly with Saskatchewan Roughriders, does the kicking for the squad. Reg Lamb and Ron Farrington are the quarterbacks.

CALL TO HELP

With a not-so-hot ground attack and depending mainly on their aerial offensive, the Redskins have called for Dennis Brophy, star quarter with the University of New Brunswick, who will join the team here. Brophy played four games with Fort William earlier this year and was registered with the CRU, making him eligible to compete in the final. Harold Harri will be another quarterback.

The Redskins have a triple-threat man in Bob McKie, who does the kicking. Their defensive team is sparked by captain Sherry Wishart.

The CRU has set 24 as the number of players to be dressed by each team, but both coaches are reported agreeable to using their full squads of about 30.

Sport in Brief

CAMPY MVP AGAIN

NEW YORK (AP)—Roy Campanella, Brooklyn's chunky, veteran catcher, has been voted most valuable player in the National League for the second time in three years.

When reporters tracked down Campanella—celebrating his 32nd birthday—at his Harlem liquor store, he grinned and said, "It makes a man feel pretty good. I can't ask for too much more in life, I guess."

The vote by a 24-man committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America was decisive. Campanella drew 17 firsts and piled up 227 points, highest point total since Stan Musial of St. Louis won with 303 in 1948.

Campanella becomes the fourth man to be named most valuable in the National more than once. He had won in 1951. Musial is the only three-time winner with awards in 1943, 1946 and 1948. Carl Hubbell and Rogers Hornsby were each named twice.

Eddie Matthews, the home-run-hitting third baseman of Milwaukee Braves, finished second, 51 points back at 176.

Duke Snider, Brooklyn's slugging centre fielder, nosed out St. Louis' Red Schoendienst for third place, 157 to 155.

JOHNSON WINS DECISION

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Harold Johnson of Philadelphia, No. 1 contender for the light heavyweight title, Thursday night scored an easy unanimous 10-round decision over Bobby Wright, steelworker, from Reading, Pa. Johnson at 177, conceded nine pounds to Wright, but made up for it in speed and punching power.

Hamilton Hockey Tigers Emulate Gridiron Brothers in Senior Game

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

So far this season, the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series has been pretty much in set-minders.

The goalies have only employed the disdainful task of turning, stooping and fishing the puck out of the net an average of about four times in each game.

Bill Harrington of the second-place Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen, who last night made decision 4-3 to Hamilton Tigers in the only game Thursday night, holds the best record—an average of 2.5 goals a game. This is the first season for Harrington in Senior A company. Last year he starred with Barrie Flyers of the OHA Junior A loop.

Other netminders in the OHA Senior A circuit hold averages that range right down to 5.5.

In the NOHA Senior A, Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds defeated Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians 9-1 in the Ontario city and the league-leading Sudbury Wolves were downed 5-2 by the Orangeys in North Bay.

Hamilton's victory in the OHA bolstered the Tigers into a three-way tie for second place, along with the Dutchmen and Windsor Bulldogs. Winger Eddie Bunch of the Tigers drew a match-balancer duet penalty for flaking threatening gestures at referee Lou Mascho with his fist and stick.

Bud Kemp, Ab Conick, Harvey Jacklin and Lloyd Ferguson scored for Hamilton. Ken Laufman connected twice for the Dutchies while Ron Ingram, Bill Harrington and Ken Laufman replied for Kitchener.

Hamilton Tigers emulated their gridiron brothers in the second game of the night, when they defeated Toronto Marlboros 4-3 in overtime. Marlboros had defeated Tigers 5-4 in the first game of the season.

Ron Hogan notched three goals for the Tigers, against Sudbury. George Gosselin and Ab Demarco, his linemates, bagged the others.

Frank King and Nick Tomiuk were the Sudbury marksmen.

A full schedule tonight has Windsor at the league-leading Chatham Maroons, Sarnia at Niagara Falls, Owen Sound at Stratford and Kitchener at Hamilton.

In the NOHA the Hounds go to Sudbury.

Bears Claw Providence 2-0

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—Dunc Fisher and Lorne Ferguson scored during the first and third periods Thursday night to provide Hershey Bears with a 2-0 American Hockey League victory over Providence Reds.

Goalie Gordon (Red) Henry kicked out 46 stops in earning his first shutout of the season. The victory moved the Bears into a second-place tie with Pittsburgh Hornets.

Senators Blank Valleyfield 5-0

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa Senators took over sole possession of second place in the Quebec Hockey League Thursday night by blanking the cellar-dwelling Valleyfield Braves 5-0 at Valleyfield. Quebec Aces stayed on top spot despite a 1-1 tie with Sherbrooke Saints.

Chicoutimi Sagueneens, although defeating Springfield Indians 6-3 at Chicoutimi, failed to budge from third place.

Bob Sabourin paced the Senators with two goals while Danny Poland, Dusty Blair, Hugh Bolpelle and Leo Gravelle scored one each.

In Sherbrooke, Marcel Bonin put the Saints ahead late in the second period but the counter was nullified by Ray Powell's third-period tally. Neither team scored in the 10-minute overtime frame.

Bucky Buchanan scored three goals and an assist for Chicoutimi. George Power led the Indians with two goals and Eric Poque sank the third.

Delphis Franche, Normis Dussault, Marius Groleau and Pete Taschuk were the other Saguenens marksmen.

Tiger Cats Said at Peak Form For Battle With Alouettes

By WILF GRUSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats, on the threshold of their first crack at the Grey Cup in 18 years, leave tonight for Montreal and the second game of the Big Four final, eager and confident that they appear to have reached their peak form at the right time.

They have reached that stage after starting the season in exasperating fashion with coach Carl Voyles going through five quarterbacks.

The season was well under way before Voyles decided Ed Songin was the man who could do the best job. With the pivot men coming and going, the Tiger-Cats were written off by nearly everyone who dared try to pick the Big Four champion.

But Songin's surprised everyone and kept right in the thick of the schedule. They ended up in a tie for first place with Montreal Alouettes and today, on the heels of a shattering 37-13 win Wednesday over the Als in the opening game of the series for the league title and the eastern crown, they appear headed to represent the east in the Grey Cup classic.

INJURIES HIT HARD

The injury-riddled Alouettes will have to come through with a tremendous reversal of form to prevent it, starting with the second game Sunday in Delorimier Stadium and again in the third game there should they force a deciding encounter.

Tiger-Cats, beaten in Big Four playoffs the three previous seasons, last played in the east-west final in 1935, the year Fritz Hanson won the hearts of the west by running 70 yards for a third-quarter touchdown that broke up the game and gave Winnipeg Blue Bombers an 18-12 victory.

Hamilton faces one discouraging feature: They haven't won in Montreal since Oct. 14, 1933.

The Tiger-Cats showing in the last quarter of the regular schedule and the opening playoff game indicates they are at about their peak form and the Als' advantage of the home crowd and field may not count for much.

Record Crowd Will See 'Warm-Up' Tilt Between Bombers And Beaches

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Whatever other fault fandom of this senior "B" hockey group can dig up, at least they can't say they're not getting their money's worth from a goal-scoring point of view. Up to the moment the average is nearly eleven goals per game, and if that's not shaking the rubber then Pin McCool was a Dutchman, he jokes.

Paradoxically enough, one of the feature of the young season has been the outstanding efforts turned in by the respective goalies. It seems to this department there is not a weak link in the net-minding chain, and some of the efforts have bordered on the sensational.

Even with one or more of the squads having a condition edge on their group brethren, there have been no terrific lopsided scores, the heaviest perhaps being the 10-4 defeat handed the Griffin Pontiacs by the fast-travelling Ottawa Truckmen on November 3. But it should be remembered that the loop-leading Trenkmen—"those who reel in the night"—had a distinct edge in condition, practice, not to mention a few exhibition games tucked under their belts. Griffin, which supervenity is still suffering from lack of ice, went in there practically "cold."

Taking every other angle into consideration this district senior "B" aggregation is by far the strongest to represent the area since the classification came into being. And according to reports from those who have travelled in Western Ontario and have seen the senior "B" brand down thataway, this group stands more than an even chance to cop provincial honors again this year.

As a matter of fact, and you can "Ripley" this one, one member of the satchel and notebook brigade, who travels extensively in the western part of the province, remarked that one of the outfits he saw down there was far off that being dished up by the senior "A" laddies down thataway. And that remark will probably draw busy chuckles from such fistic followers as Jimmy Ward, and other sports milkwerkits from the district where the deer and the antelope don't get the chance to roam, like hockey players.

And don't be surprised if in the not too distant future, Kingston, Peterborough and Belleville, not excluding Orillia, joined the charmed circle of senior "A" groups. As a matter of fact we have contacted officials of two or three of the leagued and they think it could be a possibility.

Another suggestion that cropped up while talking with the Oshawa management a few days ago, was that a postseason game be held between the group champions, and an all-star team of the league to be played in Kingston with the proceeds going annually to the various member clubs of the district. Oshawa, it was suggested, would take the final "pot" as we understand the Trenkmen people are dicky in need of funds to replace the terrific loss sustained through the destruction of equipment by fire when the Oshawa Arena was gutted earlier in the season. It is something to mull over between games, at least. Front here the suggestion looks like a good one.

GOOD SHOW . . .

"Miss" (The Bahno) Maurice Walsh, well known former National Hockey League referee who graduated from the cowbell ranks to whistle-tooting some years ago, stepped out of the president-whistle role last night and did a right neat job of instructing.

The Ole Ajax Perfesser, as he is now known, aided and abetted by his pretty missus, Helen, should have worn a mortar-board. Dang-it if he didn't resemble Prof. Mc-Murrich when we were doing a spot of medicine at Varsity years ago.

However, Perfesser Walsh did a grand job at the Referees' and Coaches' Forum held in City Hall. The district was well represented with minor hockey representatives being here from Wellington (Ryah, Jack), Tweed, Marmora, Madoc, Trenton, Picton, Stirling, Napanee and Kingston and other outlying points.

* * *

It was a well-conducted, highly informative meeting with OMHA executive members Albert Watkins, Peterborough, and Douglas Patterson, Stirling, being in charge. They had plenty to do, though, with the Ole Perfesser (ed, men, referees are human, too), holding the fort and coming through with a job par excellence. Perfesser Walsh may not know anything about the love life of an oyster, or how to grow onions n Zwick's Island, but, brother, just try and stick him on a hockey rule interpretation. We were always of the opinion that a referee had to know was his mileage, fees, and the shortest way out of town. "Miss" knows those answers too, but has something else in his head besides more monetary trivia.

And there was a lot of interest on the part of the good crowd in attendance. They fired questions at the "Perf" until he was pink in the face—(no, kiddies, 'twas not old age)—and believe us, they learned a lot. Mr. Walsh spoke for over an hour, interpreting rules and answering gatings and his efforts along with those of the sponsoring Ontario Minor Hockey Association and its attendant representatives were greatly appreciated. The Forum desk with behavior of coaches before, after and during games, ditto managers, which were thoroughly expounded by Messrs Watkins and Patterson.

One thing we admire about the "Ole Perfesser" is that he is not like the colored preacher of old: "Do as I say, not as I do." After watching him in action for several seasons, (once in the Maritimes where they presented him with a small whale because of his spouting ability) and listening to him in theory last night, we can readily believe that he is one of the best officials on the roll of the Ontario Hockey Association.

* * *

"Miss" didn't pull any verbal punches. He answered each and every question with preciseness and in a way that was easily understandable. Even Devine and this corner got an inkling of some of the rule twisters in the OHA "bible."

* * *

Seriously, the OMHA is to be commended on its sponsorship of these informative forums. Interest in them was evidenced by the truly representative meeting last night, we believe, as do a lot of other sports-minded people, that the forums are not only indicative of the deep-lying interest in its favorite sport taken by the OMHA, but are of tremendous interest to those who are connected with hockey in all its phases.

Pegs Coach Has Respect For Light, Speedy Ontario Champs; 16,000 Expected to See Battle

WINNIPEG (CP)—Billed only as a "warm-up" for the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Saturday's Grey Cup semi-final between the western champions and Toronto Balmy Beach is drawing plenty of spectator interest.

About 16,000 fans are expected for the game which gives the winner the right to advance into the Grey Cup final at Toronto a week later against either Hamilton Tiger-Cats or Montreal Alouettes.

The Football Bombers will go into the contest against the Ontario Rugby Football Union champions, first time staged in western Canada, as odds-on favorites. Latest reports indicate there is little or no betting.

Bomber coach George Trafton predicted during the western semi-finals that his club was "going all the way," and he sees no reason to change his mind now. However, he is still respectful of the light-but-speedy Beaches.

When a couple of the boys stepped out of line at Thursday night's practice, Trafton bellowed:

"Let's get this straight. I don't move like that Saturday, and that club will run around you like a hoop around a barrel."

Trafton's barked tongue and club will not be called into use due to 30-degree temperatures soon had the club running at full steam again.

NO PREDICTIONS

Coach Chuck Klein isn't making any predictions. He had his team working out on Bombers' grounds Wednesday, but shifted to Osborne Stadium, another home of the Winnipeg club, for Thursday's practice.

"The former Florida coach apparently was pleased at the second workout.

"It was a good session, much better than Wednesday's. The boys were pretty sharp," he said.

Beaches were back at full strength Thursday night, with the return of halfback Ross McKelvey and import quarterback Dick Schneidebach. McKelvey remained behind an extra day by his school-teaching duties in Toronto. Schneidebach had been called home to Lagrange, Ill., due to the sickness of his wife.

Bombers will have the big advantage in weight. Their two first-string tackles Dick Suffron and Buddy Thaley each weigh 250 pounds. The rest of the line, even the relief men, generally outweigh the Beachs' front wall, headed by 215-pound tackle Gustem Fisher from North Carolina State and the ORFU's most valuable player this year.

Winnipeg also will have a weight advantage in the backfield, but from all reports may take a backseat in speed.

The weather man predicted:

"Temperatures in the high 30s; south winds between 10 and 15 miles an hour."

He added that there is no sign of snow.

AUTO TRACK DISASTER

OAXACA, Mexico (AP) — An Italian driver was killed and a speeding American car smashed into a line of spectators, killing at least six persons Thursday at the start of the fourth Pan-American road race.

Giuseppe Tecnutti, a co-driver with Antonio Stagnoli in a 4,500 CC Ferrari, died when the Ferrari ran off the road and overturned near Tehuantepec.

Pro-League Costs Would Be High Intercounty Told

GALT (CP) — Operation of a team in a class C professional baseball league would cost between $30,000 and $40,000, Robert E. Finch of Columbus, O., representative of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues said Thursday.

He was addressing a meeting of Senior Intercounty Baseball League operators who are seeking advice on an organized baseball affiliation.

Many of the operators are having financial troubles operating in the present league and at least two have said they would drop out from the league unless expenses are reduced.

Finch said a population for a class C league would have to be 150,000. Maximum players' salaries would be $3,400 and half of each salary, or $1,700, would have to be deposited with the national association to guarantee debts being paid.

Finch said he didn't know if a class C franchise could be obtained if the loop wanted to play less than a 140-game schedule. He also said he wasn't in favor of working agreements with big-league teams.

Mustangs Set Sights for Second Straight Intercollegiate Crown

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—The University of Western Ontario Mustangs are setting their sights on their second straight intercollegiate football title and their seventh in nine years, when they face University of Toronto Blues at Varsity Stadium Saturday.

Two straight losses to Toronto and McGill in their last two starts have cast the Mustangs in the role of underdogs for the playoff tilt.

Johnny Metras said he feels the two losses will help "fire up" his Mustangs — something they will need against the powerful Blues.

Bob Masterson's team has defeated Western's east of Ontario games this season. The Blues took an exhibition game early in the campaign 13-1 in Toronto. The two teams split during the regular season with Western winning in London 13-10 and the Blues taking a 13-9 decision in Toronto.

TOP SCORER

The Mustangs will send the league's top scorer into action in Gino Fracas. Steve Oneschuk of the Blues finished in a tie with Don Stewart of Queen's with 40 points, four less than Fracas.

Western has a long injury list but all players, with the exception of halfback Ralph Simmons, are expected to play Saturday. Simmons, fullback Jacques Belec, guard Jack Thompson and halfback Murray Henderson missed last Saturday's game with McGill.

Belec, Henderson and Thompson have leg injuries but will be set for action. Don Frowse and Bob Turner have broken noses, but will play with face guards, while pivotman Jockn Thompson has a hip injury and tackle Ted Collins is nc the limp.

Boom-Boom Geoffrion Blasts Lone Goal in Canadiens 1-0 Victory Over Toronto Leafs

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

When Montreal Canadiens practically mortgaged their future for Jean Beliveau, the gold-plated rookie from Quebec Aces (Boom Boom) Geoffrion, then the Habs' glamour kid, was forced into second billing on the pro-season roster.

But as the National Hockey League show got rolling Beliveau seemed to develop an allergy to scoring and his usual plentiful brand of hockey and finally bowed out temporarily with a fractured ankle.

The 24-year-old Geoffrion batted into the season like a sky rocket and showered the league with fiery performances and game-winning goals.

The native-born Montrealer did it again Thursday night. His single, at 4:31 of the second period gave the Habs top Canadiens 1-0 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs and snapped the Leafs' unbeaten string of eight games.

The loss sent the Leafs sliding into third place behind Red Wings Bruins 3-3 to move into sole possession of second spot, two points behind Canadiens.

Geoffrion's goal was his eighth of the season and gave him 17 scoring points to the same as Detroit's Ted Kennedy and Red Wings. It came on an assist from Elmer Lach.

THIRD SHUTOUT

The shutout was Gerry McNeil's third this season.

Detroit's scoreless victory over the Bruins came on a goal by Gord Howe in the last five minutes. The goal, plus an assist on rookie Bill Dineen's second-period marker, sent Howe's scoring mark up to a leading 18 points. Linemate Ted Lindsay, with Metro Prystai, retired on Howe's goal to give him 19 points. Alex Delvecchio scored the other Red Wings goal.

Fleming Mackell and Ed Sandford gave the Maple Leafs a 2-0 lead before the Wings took over.

Tonight, in the league's only action, Boston Bruins journey to Chicago where Black Hawk coach Bill Gadsby will unveil Ed Sloan, 19-year-old Fred Saskatoonee, a full-blood Sioux Indian and an honorary Indian chief, Saskatoonee, as a centre with Moose Jaw Canucks this season. He was one of the top scorers of the Western Junior Hockey League.

'Worst Football Of The Year' Says 'Peahead'

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes made their debut in the wail in the Big Four football playoffs, but they didn't stand a chance against Hamilton Tiger-Cats outplay in the best-of-three league playoff. Hamilton won the opener 27-15.

"Our worst football of the year," was the way coach Peahead Walker summed up the Hamilton game.

"We didn't come near the ball we are capable of. The injury situation is still serious. It helped wear down the players. I'm looking for a decided improvement Sunday."

Tex Coulter, Ray Cicia, Jim Mitchell and Phil Adams are the question marks for the second game. The first three didn't make the Hamilton trip. Adrian was on the bench due to an arm injury sustained in the first game.

Hooks and Tommy Morsh made the most of their opportunities. They didn't even get his uniform dirty as coach Walker felt the pace too much to be in playing condition.

Tommy Manastersky and Al Dekdebrun played well for Hamilton's injured idea and Dekdebrun's left hand in a cast.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
NEW YORK (AP) — Television can be a cruel medium when it happens to be your face such a travesty on the baking game as was perpetrated by Jack Dempsey, retired, and Freddie Beshore during the 'great coast cocktail hour the other evening.

Though he won by a knockout over an obviously washed-up opponent, Buccaroo did not further his claim to a shot at Rocky Marciano Saturday night, nor did Beshore a great audience did welcome the Hallmark and swallow it for what it was.

The TV screen is cruel to the men who would practise the time-honored custom of building up a challenger through a series of victories over pop-overs — preferably over fathered veterans such as Beshore—whose records show they once were capable of fighting the best in the business and fairly even terms.

Chances are that the entire history of the heavyweight division would have been radically changed if the country-wide telecast had been in operation about 30 years ago. It is pretty safe to say that Primo Carnera could never have climbed through to the title in 1933.

KNOCKOUT STRING

The Preem's board of directors was able to operate with freedom. At three years, Beshore is the oldest pro wrestler piled up a great total of knockouts, most of them in the early rounds. Carnera learned something about fighting as he progressed, but the big guy in the ring he fought Jack Sharkey for the championship here a few months ago looked stepped on his own feet.

Whether the Dallas giant would have stood out Sharkey if their bout had been televised we will never know. The point is that it can never happen again.

Buccaroo, we hasten to say, is no phony. The tall Philadelphian is a top - drawer heavyweight, who has served without best in the world today. He did a workmanlike job of cutting Beshore down. But he will have to prove himself a great deal more than opposition than that before there will be an effective public demand to see him fight Marciano.

Crowe Remains As Coach Of Rough Riders

OTTAWA (CP)—Clair Crowe remains as coach of Ottawa Rough Riders.

A management committee of the Ottawa football club decided Thursday to keep Crowe on for his fourth year as coach of the team that finished third in the Big Four football union this season.

Club president Jim McCaffrey said Crowe has agreed to a contract "similar" to last year's. There were "a few incidentals to get straightened out," but Crowe was tolerably "happy" with the agreement. The contract is for one year.

Crowe, 48, came to Ottawa in 1951 after coaching Buffalo Bills and Baltimore Colts. In his first year, he led the Rough Riders to the Grey Cup championship. Last season, the Rough Riders finished third behind winning Saskatchewan Roughriders for the Canadian championship. The next year, his team finished third.

Other coaching salary was estimated at about $19,000—lowest in the Big Four.

Windsor Team Confident of Victory Over Saskatoon in Jr. Grid Final

SASKATOON (CP)—The hopes of a Windsor fraternity and the superstitions of Saskatoon will be tested Saturday when the Canadian junior football championship is decided.

Windsor AKO, defending Canadian titlists and by Alpha Eta Omega fraternity of the border city, arrived here by train Thursday night while Saskatoon Hilltops were churning through a brisk drill.

The weather is expected to stay chilly but clear for the game. The weathermen predicts a southeast wind of 15 miles an hour and a high of 35 degrees. There will be no rain or snow.

AKO halfback Lou Palucchi didn't think the cold Western weather would be a handicap.

"We played in several inches of snow during our playoff against Hamilton (Tiger-Cats) and the temperature was around the 30-degree mark," he said. "From what I hear, the temperature will be about the same here."

Windsor manager Bob Norwood hustled his 40 warriors into sleeping quarters and remarked: "Now all we want is a chance to hold a workout on Friday. That long trip can put your legs in a shaky condition."

Plans for drill awaited the arrival of coach Jack Neilson, a Windsor high school teacher, who was scheduled to arrive by plane early today.

Meanwhile, Hilltops, who worried their way into the Dominion final by troubling Vancouver Blue Bombers' Ben Wilson 26-24 in a 2-1 tally through another light drill. As usual, they took the same route to the stadium.

LOTS OF SUPERSTITIONS

"Superstitious? Sure we have them and plenty of them," said manager Pat Symyk, before the first game of the season. I was walking around the dressing room and discovered a lucky penny. It happened for a couple of more games. Then the boys got wise and started dropping a few before each game. I could always find some lucky pennies."

Head coach-general manager Dan Godley acquired his pet superstition during Hilltops' successful season. For each game he sports a penny, carefully selected in Hilltop colors, and has made for a world cigar at half time.

Wyman added: "We always take the same route to the stadium and captain (Ray) Syrnyk must be the first man out of the dressing room."

Godley will have to choose his penny in green and white hues Saturday. Hilltops will be wearing the colors of the Western Conference Saskatchewan Roughriders because Windsor's black and gold outfits would spell contrast sufficiently with Saskatoon's regular blue and gold uniforms.

High School Has Barefoot Star Kicker

BUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Chuck Mahaer Park of Huntsville high school, who thinks a boy can kick a football farther and more accurately without shoes, not only has a bare-foot booter de hass this season, but the kicker has an unorthodox who's just as good.

Huntsville has won nine games without a loss, scoring 451 points to the opposition's 84. The seven-man team has 28 quick a game is considered sensational even in Texas schoolboy football.

Sinclair Neil Cobb can has kicked seven goals in 44 attempts. Last week against Madisonville, Coleman made schoolboy history when he booted 12 extra points in 12 tries.

Next year' with Coleman graduated, Park will be looking to Ken's stand-in, Tommy Reeves, for heroics. Reeves, a hiking, Tommy hasn't seen much action this season because of an injury, but his record is 100 per cent—three out of three.

PIN KING TOPS

LONDON (AP) — American-owned Pin King, owner of the New York Gimcrack Stakes, is rated England's top two-year-old thoroughbred for 1953.

Geoffrey Freer, handicapper to the English Jockey Club, put the Pin King top-weighted for the three-furlong five handicap race for three-year-olds at Newmarket next spring.

The Pin King, owned by Ray Bell and Elwood Johnson of Los Angeles, is down to carry 8 stones, 7 pounds. Two pounds below him is Prince Monolulu, Indian delegation, winner of three races this year.

Landau, Queen Elizabeth's Juvenile racing hope, is weighted at 130 pounds.

Driving Tips from R. W. Boyce, General Manager, Ontario Safety League.

HOW TO PULL OUT OF A SKID!

Turn your front wheels in the same direction as the skid.

- Don't turn wheels too far in direction of skid. This may throw rear and into dangerous reverse skid.
- Keep your foot lightly on the accelerator to keep rear wheels rolling, and maintain traction.
- Keep your foot off the brake. Jamming on the brakes locks your wheels so that they act like sled runners.
- When you have car straightened out, pump the brakes gently to bring the car to a stop.

WRONG — Skid turns into dangerous spin.

RIGHT — Skidding stops and car straightens out.

The stranger asked if he could cut into our bridge game and we accepted him with hearty politeness. He was evidently none around here and . We wondered who had brought him into the club.

Right off the bat he treated us to a series of coffee-housing. Such as yelling "I bid the fourth and last spade." Or, "My hand is a little weak for it but I'll try an opening." Stuff like that.

We do a lot of horsing in our rubber bridge games at the club. So, we thought he was merely trying to be funny. But the game ended in an explosion of utter silence at a final dilly of his. Came the deal shown here:

With two aces missing he booted himself into a small slam of six hearts. The opening lead from West was a club. When dummy's hand went down he volunteered confidently: "A cinch, partner!"

Dummy had a king of clubs won the first trick. Now he leaned forward, beaming with his own hand half exposed to east. But he had his jack of spades hidden behind one of his honors.

When he knew east had been able to get a trick he leaned back in his chair. The deuce of hearts dangled in his fingers as if he were fanning himself with it. East could not help but see it. He addressed himself to dummy and said: "Lead me a small spade." His partner did. Believing south was ruffling the spade, east ducked instead of playing his ace.

South put his trump deuce back in his hand and dug up the spade jack thus winning the trick. He chuckled gleefully at his partner's surprise and amazement shown by east.

East calmly laid the rest of his cards on the table and left the room. So did two more of us. We left the stranger sitting there. For all we know he is still there. He can stay there and rot.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was pritty near late for dinner again, but not quite, and the ferst thing pop and ma noticed was the long scratches on the front of my nose, ma saying, whi goodness, and pop saying, Yes goda.

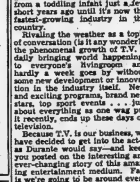
Do you meen the scratches? I said and ma said, What els would we meen for land sakes?

I thought maybe you were just both surprized because I'm home in time for dinner before it's actually started, I said, and pop said, That's also a matter for wonder, but let's get back to the scratches. What happened? he said.

I'm not sure, I said, and ma said, What kind of an anser is that? What would you think if I came home with my nose all over with scratches and no idea how they got there? and I said, I'd just think it was natural, I said, and pop said, For Pete sake talk sense. Have you been fighting? He said.

No sir, G, I said, and ma said, Have you been petting any strange cats or dogs?

No, mam, I said. I don't pet cats, I chase them. And a dog wouldn't scratch my nose. It would be more libel to take out a whole bite, G, I said, I know. It must of been the diving, I said, and pop said, What diving? You haven't been near water since the middle of summer, he said.



It was sand diving, I said. There's a big pile of sand where the men are fixing the street, and us fellows were practicing shallow dives. Yes sir, I bet that was it, I said.

The result being ma put mercurachrome on me, making my nose look worse and feel just about the same.

The biggest news in entertainment these days is a lusty young giant name of television that grew from a toddling infant just a few short years ago until it's now the fastest-growing industry in the country.

Rivaling the weather as a topic of conversation (is it any wonder?) the phenomenal growth of T.V. is daily bringing world happenings to everyone's fivingroom and hardly a week goes by without some new development or innovation in the industry itself. New and exciting programs, brand new stars, the latest movies . . . just about everything as one wag put it recently, ends up these days on television.

Because T.V. is our business, we have decided to get into the act as Durante would say—and keep you posted on the exciting and ever-changing story of this amazing entertainment medium. Fact is we're going to be around every week from here on giving you the inside track on the latest technical developments, news about the stars and interesting information about the behind-the-scene doings. We're looking forward to being with you each week and we would appreciate your comments.

We hope, too, that you'll drop around and get acquainted with us here at Hitchon Radio and television. And all this new fangled talk we still keep to the old stand by that top-brand merchandise, fast and reliable service and a simple desire to do our very best for our customers is the biggest business builder ever . . . and if you don't find this to be correct we promise we'll do somersaults atop your antenna!

More Snuff Is Chewed Than Sniffed These Days

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The gold and fleury snuff box is collector's piece.

Pinched and powdered dandies on powdered snuff elegantly from between the thumb and finger, causing their sneezes in lace handkerchiefs.

But snuff still is big business, and a habit that reached its zenith in the courts of Europe in the 18th century has moved outdoors. And more snuff is chewed than sniffed these days.

From Canada's wheat fields to cotton plantations of the deep south comes a flamboyant sniffs or chews instead of smoking.

Sales are booming in the United Kingdom because snuff is cheaper than other tobacco.

Gracie Fields and Winston Churchill have been snuff-sniffers.

TV and radio programs promote use of the snuff in the U.S. tobacco-growing states.

Canadians of Scandinavian origin are the big users in this country.

There are four stories from Montreal, London, Dallas, Tex., and Charlotte, N.C., with other facts and figures about a little-known phase of the tobacco industry.

IN CANADA

MONTREAL — Scandinavian-Canadians are the greatest users of snuff in Canada. That partly explains why the big market is the Prairies. Another reason is that they're fairly near to wheat, but field and elevator, often aren't allowed to smoke and so they chew or snuff. Tobacco companies spend a lot of plug tobacco in the West.

Farm workers put a wad of snuff between lower lip and teeth before going on the job. So do many Quebec textile plant workers and men in lumber camps from coast to coast.

Two polysyllabic kinds of snuff are used in Canada: damp for chewing or sniffing, and dry for sniffing only.

The clerk's table in the Quebec legislature assembly has an elaborate snuff box kept filled while the house is in session. No one knows ever been seen to use it.

Canada's expert snuff - maker probably is Ubald Beaudet, president owner of N. Landry et Cie. in Montreal. When he took over the business 25 years ago he got the firm's secret formulas. He would pass these on if he sold out.

ANNUAL OUTPUT

The firm makes 30,000 pounds a year of Canada's annual output of almost 1,000,000 pounds. Its most popular brand is Rose No. 1—a damp snuff. Another is Rose et Vyve—rose-scented like the first and considered a bit more pungent. Tonka bean from South America—which is popular in Quebec City and the lower St. Lawrence region.

Some older members of the Quebec clergy are snuff sniffers. One popular preacher of retreats never delivers a tough sermon without first taking a pinch. An average snuffer uses a pound in two weeks, taking about two pinches an hour.

Some say consumption increases with age, not because of heavier sniffing but because shaking hands scatter more on the floor. One old Quebec cure uses five pounds a month.

The price here is $1.80 a pound plus 13 cents federal and provincial taxation. Dark Ontario tobacco stalks and cigar-filler leaf are put into good snuff, apart from essence of rose, Tonka bean and sometimes menthol.

TEXANS BIG USERS

DALLAS, Tex. — Texans, who do everything in a big way, buy about 3,000,000 pounds of snuff a year.

R. H. Stanley of Dallas, whose American Snuff Co. does 96 per cent of the snuff business in the state, finds business everywhere but says it's primarily a farmers' habit. The big market is in the eastern part of Texas where the corn and cotton grow.

Less snuff is used by farmers and ranchers in western Texas because, says Stanley, there are a lot of dust storms there.

"Brother, we have to have something in your mouth when the dust is blowing. When you use snuff you just run your tongue over it when you want to get the flavor. But tobacco keeps your mouth working and more moist."

His company ran an essay contest once on "Why I Like Snuff" and got three entries from the swankiest neighborhood in Dallas. Stanley checked them personally.

"Two sisters were the same ladies who said certainly they use snuff while directing the servants around their elaborate homes. The third was from a little girl who was just trying to win a prize.

Stanley says 1950 was a big year for the snuff business in Texas. The reason seemed to be that his company sent a lot of samples to oil refineries, where smoking isn't allowed.

FLAVOR LINGERS

"We made big "inroads in the tobacco chewers. When you've chewed the flavor out of a tobacco all you have left is an old, bitter cud. But as long as you've got one grain of snuff in your mouth you get the flavor."

Negroes are "great contributors" to the snuff business.

Texas snuff is dry, ground finer than flour. The finer it's ground the more easily it packs down. Texans usually put a pinch of it under the lower lip or between the jaw teeth and cheek.

Another popular method is to shred a hackberry twig, chew the end into a brush, dip your snuff and scrub it over your teeth. It has to be a hackberry twig. Using the depression farmers some-times brushed their teeth with hackberry twigs. They make usable brushes.

A little damp snuff is sold in Texas but Texans prefer dry. The dry climate seems to make it hard to keep damp snuff fresh.

Stanley says as far as he knows Texans don't use fancy snuff boxes any more.

"We don't encourage it. They consume a lot more snuff if they don't dress it up. Keep it spread in fancy little boxes."

COMEBACK IN BRITAIN

LONDON—Snuff is making a comeback in Britain. It is less costly by taxed than other tobacco and goes farther. A lot of Britons turned to snuff during the war years when "no smoking" was the rule in many factories and in the cockpit.

Britons sniff their snuff while Scandinavians and north American cans mostly suck it. They are buying six times more than before the war. About 1,500 tons of snuff is manufactured annually—about one-third of it for home use at 28,000,000 pinches to the ton.

Moderate sniffers don't use much more than the ounce a month. Prices range from 3s. to 12s. an ounce compared with cigarets at 3s 7d. for 20. No one expects snuff to achieve its one-time popularity.

Its reign is generally considered to have extended from 1700 to George IV's dandified era. He died in 1830. Queen Victoria's dislike of all tobacco, the coming of the white linen handkerchief and the growing popularity of cigar and cigaret were responsible for its decline to a point where use of snuff was considered disgusting.

But snuff hung on among the upper classes and has been traditionally the favorite of lawyers and painters.

EXPENSIVE GIFTS

George IV, a liberal spender in his own right, paid £8,000 for snuff boxes for coronation gifts to ambassadors and the like. The ultra-fashionable Duke Alexander Petershaw had a different box for each day of the year.

Today snuff boxes are front-rank collectors' items. This summer, £4,400 was paid for a Berlin gold box set with diamonds. Thousand-guinea bangs have been auction for much smaller prices.

Modern snuff takers use plainer containers, in keeping with the times. The ritual of snuff is less ornate, too. The 18th-century user would deplore the "vacuum cleaner" technique sometimes used. A train of snuff is sprinkled along the back of wrist and hand and the nose is passed briskly over the top, in the manner of a bloodhound on a fresh trail.

Some snuff users claim its use keeps the cold bugs away. The medical profession has not confirmed this. However, a Birmingham farm reports great success with a snuff-and-penicillin mixture that it tried on pigs. Another experiment hailed development of colds but didn't prevent them.

DOCTOR'S OPINION

One British doctor, writing in the London Medical Journal, has recommended use of snuff to break the smoking habit. The drawback is a dulling of the sense of smell.

When it comes to heavy consumption, Scandinavia dominates Europe. The Swedes in 1950 consumed more than 3,000 tons—over a pound for each man, woman and child.

Copenhagen, Denmark's capital, has given its name to a "chewing" type of snuff little known in Britain. A spokesman for a 250-year-old firm here—it sold snuff to Napoleon on exile—says it is common for snuff blends to be named for their point of origin.

His firm handles 18 blends. Not many snuff users blend their own nowadays, but some keep several blends on hand for different times of day and different moods.

POPULAR DOWN SOUTH

CHARLOTTE, N.C.—Down in the South where the golden tobacco grows, you can buy snuff at any country-store gasoline station along the highway.

Probably the reason for the folksy promotion it's been fun getting from hillbilly comedians and Tarheel Joe actors in soap suds settings, on television and radio shows.

"Just as big a seller as ever, according to records," says one North Carolina distributor, and he hints sales actually are going up. So do spokesmen for several other snuff concerns.

Snuff is cheap in the tobacco country—six cents for a half-can can. Most sales are in the rural areas.

Sam Hall, the former movie actor, plugs snuff in "Ramar of the Jungle"—a TV show sponsored on 12 selected stations by the second largest snuff producer in the United States. This summer he replaced Smilin' Eddie Hill's hillbilly show.

BIG PROMOTION JOB

Arthur Smith and his Crackerjacks boosted the TubeRose snuff so thoroughly in 1952-53 that his quintet of mournful artists has been retained another year.

Snuff has its audience, all right. On one program someone mentioned that TubeRose had 2,000 paper fans emblemed with the TubeRose trade mark—the kind you find in wills in southern churches. TubeRose put an idle fan company back in business and filled requests for 50,000 fans.

Southerners use nothing but the dry type of snuff, said one manufacturer's agent. The little damp snuff sold is used by "foreigners" from other parts of the United States.

And southerners all tuck their snuff between the lip and teeth, he said. There is no snuff-sniffing hereabouts as there is among the Mennonites and Quakers of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York.

Canada's Link With Case In U.S. Takes New Twist

Canadian Joins Foreign Legion, Loses Right Arm

WINNIPEG (CP)—Two years ago Hugh Cawker, found himself in Paris with nothing to do. He joined the French Foreign Legion.

Now he's back home, his orthopedic dressing his hand, and his right arm gone after service in Indo-China.

The RCAF veteran won the Medaille Militaire and the Croix de Guerre with palm in an engagement around Thai Binh, southeast of Hanoi, last January. His right arm was amputated above the elbow by a burst of machine-gun fire from a Communist Vietminh guerrilla.

What prompted a young man to leave civilian life for a hazardous, $50-a-month stint with the Foreign Legion?

He says: "It must have been the war."

Cawker, born and educated in Winnipeg, went to the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve before joining the air force in 1942.

Commenting briefly, he served with air-sea rescue group and "had an adventurous time" with the resistance unit. He finished the war as a British aircraft carrier in the Pacific.

Arab Bloc Seeks To Make Censure Motion Stronger

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The Arab bloc today worked over plans to get more teeth into a proposed U.S.-sponsored censure of the United Nations censuring Israel for the recent killing of 53 Jordan border villagers.

The Arab bloc, backed by Pakistan in the Security Council, Jordan spokesmen expressed complete dissatisfaction with the Western resolution. They assailed it as too weak, and because it failed to demand Israeli compensation for the loss of Arab life and property in the Oct. 14-15 raid on Kibya village.

The United States, Britain and France have asked the 11-member council to "take appropriate measure" of Israel for the attack, which the Jewish state maintained was in retaliation for a long series of Arab provocations.

The Big Three resolution asks for Israeli guarantees against future assaults and for the strict enforcement of the UN truce observer team watching over the tense Arab-Israeli frontier.

Israel also has voiced bitter opposition to the Big Three resolution as "one-sided and discriminatory" and a "big step backward from peace."

NOT COUNCIL MEMBER

Although a member of the UN Israel is not a member of the Security Council. Jordan, a nonmember of the council, however was invited with Israel to present her views to the council.

An Israeli spokesman said Israel's chief delegate, Abba Eban, may suggest the Western resolution be dropped, or at least amended. In favor of broader proposals of the whole Palestine armistice issue, a member of the council must sponsor such a suggestion, and the Israeli little hope that Israel will find such a sponsor.

U.S. delegate James J. Wadsworth told the council Friday that it should accept the Western resolution as soon as possible to indicate its censure of the Kibya incident and point out that "prejudicial effect which it can have on progress toward peace."

TO BE TRIED FOR MURDER

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Mrs. Evelena Embury testified Friday that a jealous quarrel led to the fatal stabbing Oct. 21 of Mrs. Florence Ricker, 34. Mrs. Embury was a witness at the preliminary hearing of a murder charge against Harry Ricker, 48, whose wife she said Mrs. Ricker had been living. Reecr was committed for trial.

HOUSE COMPLETES WEEK OF THRONE SPEECH DEBATE

Possibility Vote May Come Some Time Mon.

OTTAWA (CP) — Discussion ranged from airlines and wheat to German rearmament and salmon as the Commons completed a week of Throne Speech debate Friday.

The debate was making such speedy progress, in fact, that the House adjourned at 4 p.m. until Monday, passing up its usual Friday night sitting.

Citizenship Minister Harris, house leader, said: "While I am not in any way suggesting that I expect this debate to end up on Monday, it would be most gratifying if it did."

Once it was finished, the government would take up such items as the Bankruptcy Act, pipe lines and appointment of auditors for the Canadian National Railways.

RAPS REFUSAL

Mrs. A. H. McConnell (PC—Toronto Greenwood) led off Friday by renewing Progressive Conservative criticism of the government's refusal to grant Canadian Pacific Airlines an air cargo licence. She said public opinion was running against the government's policy of "giving a state monopoly to it if it became strong enough, publicly subsidized and force the government to give more than "lip service" to private enterprise.

Gordon Graydon (PC—Centre Peel), speaking in French, said some Canadians, particularly in Quebec, criticize the fact that eastern farmers pay low income taxes. But Quebec, Ontario and the Maritimes had no "wheat factories," as the prairies had.

J. G. Hryhyk (CCF—Rumboldt-Melfort) urged a government investigation into the fertilizer industry under the Combines Investigation Act. Fertilizer prices had increased from $19 a ton after the war to $40 a ton now, and he also suggested shipment of surplus wheat in Canada wheat to foreign countries.

George McLeod (SC—Okanagan-Revelstoke) said seasonal tariffs are applied too late in the season against American fruit. He said it undercutting prices of Canadian fruit.

Tom Goode L-Burnaby—Richmond) said he hopes Fisheries Minister Sinclair will get information from the British Columbia salmon industry that will be helpful to negotiate more canned salmon sales to Britain.

WAR OF GERMANY

Colin Cameron (CCF—Nanaimo) said Western Germany's rearmament and anti-Soviet propaganda is dangerous. A number of former Nazi officials were free and one of them was living on a pension supplied by the, Bonn government.

Lionel Chevrier (L—Montreal-Verchores) said Premier Duplessis' action in getting the province to sign a tax agreement with Ottawa for municipal purposes "does not mean any loss of autonomy for Quebec.

GAIN SMANY HONORS

TORONTO (CP)—A Polish pianist who won every scholarship at suburban Scarboro high school last year, Wanda Sulkowski, graduated from Duke Sulkowski, did not speak English when she came to Canada from Austria three years ago. Next week she will receive four scholarships and free tuition at the University of Toronto for f ur years.

Man's Gallant Masquerade Over, And So, Perhaps, Is His Life

NEW YORK (AP)—Harry Simon's gallant masquerade is over, and so, perhaps, is his life.

Police said the 52-year-old Simon was laid off by an advertising firm a year ago. He never let on to his wife.

Each day he left the house at the usual hour, as though going to work. He was home at his regular time each evening.

Simon brought home his weekpay—dipping into his $2,900 savings account. He even gave his wife an increase on one occasion.

During his hours away from home, he looked for work and brooded. He was a worried old fellow.

Thursday, he phoned his wife and told her to look in the pocket of his overcoat.

She found a note which revealed the whole story, and ended with Simon's announced decision to kill himself.

Ironically, the job which eluded him so long now is available. Advertising business men tried to hire him at $100 a week, when they learned of his plight.

But nobody knows whether the gallant masquerader is still alive.

MRS. A. H. KETCHESON, chairman of the Women's Division of the Hospital Building Fund.

MRS. W. J. DOYLE, one of the Vice-Chairmen of the Women's Division of the Hospital Building Fund.

MRS. G. B. SCOTT, who is also a Vice-Chairman of the Women's Division of the Hospital Building Fund.

Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson Named Chairman Of Women's Division of Hospital Fund

The Women's Division of the Hospital Building Fund is being headed by Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson with Mrs. W. J. Doyle and Mrs. G. B. Scott as Vice-Chairmen, E. P. Bernstein, Chairman, Belleville Executive Committee, announced today.

The Women's Division of the Fund has an objective of $65,000". Mrs. Ketcheson said, "It is divided into four solicitking groups; special women; general women, clubs and organizations, and nurses' committee. Solicitation of advance special prospects has been under way for some time and it is expected that most advance gifts will be completed before the campaign's opening rally Tuesday evening at the Capitol.

Mrs. Ketcheson said that generally women of Belleville are very sympathetic towards the project. "Those of us who have had the occasion to visit the hospital know the situation is desperate and that the decision of the Board of Governors to proceed with a Fund Raising Campaign is the only possible course," she said.

"The women's organization has taken advantage of this opportunity, not only to solicit gifts, but to call on women in the community to inform them of hospital problems and to answer pertinent questions about our hospital.

"Close to 300 women are now actively soliciting on behalf of the Fund", Mrs. Ketcheson reported, "and this number is expected to rise. The campaign is the most extensive ever undertaken in Belleville and will be climaxed by a house to house canvass to call personally on each prospective donor.

Allies Demand Reds Turn Over All PoW Still Retained

By WILLIAM C. BARNARD
PANMUNJOM (AP)—The Allies today accused the Communists of holding back some prisoners-of-war and told the Reds to turn over to neutral custody immediately "all those PoWs you still retain."

Maj. Gen. T. D. Leary told Communist members of the Military Armistice Commission that three Korean soldiers who sought refuge at an American sentry box Thursday were South Koreans and not Chinese who had been forced into the Red army.

The Communists asked for a recess to study Lacey's statement.

The chief Allied member of the armistice commission told reporters that the Korean soldiers provided evidence that the Communists have forcibly impressed prisoners after they had certified that all prisoners had been turned over to the Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission".

Lacey also told the Communists to "cease delays" and get on with the job of interviewing Chinese and Korean war prisoners who have refused to go home.

The explanation program has been stalled by Red refusal to accept Indian rules for operation of the interviews. Lacey accused the Communists of "using the program deliberately because of 'disastrous' results.

Only about three per cent of the approximately 2,500 prisoners interviewed so far have elected to return to Communist rule.

Meanwhile, Allied and Communist diplomats continued efforts to arrange a Korean peace conference—almost apparently at a standstill.

United States envoy Arthur H. Dean accused the Reds of delaying and making a farce of the preliminary negotiations.

Dean rejected a Red suggestion that neutral powers attend the peace conference to regulate the debate of belligerents. He said the suggestion was merely a device to "get around" the powerful Soviet Russia into a position where it could dominate the conference.

Three Will Likely Contend For Leadership of CCF Party

TORONTO (CP) — A lawyer, a public union president and a prominent sensitive appeared today as chief contenders for the leadership of the CCF party in Ontario.

Eight names were placed before the convention Friday night but at least five are expected to withdraw before 350 delegates vote by majority ballot this afternoon.

The most likely candidates to seek the post vacated last Aug. 15 by R. Dalli, 46-year-old lawyer, are F. Andrew Brewin, Toronto lawyer; Donald C. Macdonald of Ottawa, national organizer and secretary of the CCF, and Fred Young of Toronto, political action representative of the Canadian Congress of Labor (CIO-CCL).

Others nominated and expected to decline are: Agnes Macphail, first woman member of the Commons; former CCF member of the Ontario legislature for York East; Toronto alderman William Dennison; W. J. Grummett, House leader in the legislature, E. R. Millard, Canadian director of the steel union; and Eamon Park, publicity director for the union.

The position now carries an annual salary of $6,000 and expenses. Mr. Jolliffe, elected leader in 1942, served without remuneration.

Mr. Jolliffe resigned to devote his time to his Toronto law practice. As the first official Ontario leader he guided the party through four provincial elections. His most successful was his first—in 1943, when the CCF captured 34 seats in the 90-member House and replaced the Liberals as the official opposition. In 1945 the party won only eight seats and in 1948 it won 21. In 1948 21 seats on 27 per cent of the vote.

Both candidates gave their loudest applause to Miss Macphail. The CCF national leader, M. J. Coldwell, said she "deserved much better of the Canadian people than she got."

In the major address of the convention, which ends tonight, Mr. Coldwell said the report that a high-powered group of Canadian government sent the United States information on the "smaze" that Harry Dexter White case was "an interesting phenomenon."

He termed it "a very interesting and terrible thing" when U.S. politicians lose any confidence in another country.

On domestic issues, Mr. Coldwell called for "more direct interest rates on housing loans 10 per cent down payments and longer amortization periods.

"We passed a low-rental — and that means subsidized — housing plan on a wide scale," he said.

Today, the delegates are consider resolutions submitted by the provincial council and calling for continued rental controls in the province, a publicly-owned Canadian oil pipeline, and a solution to the strike of northern Ontario and Quebec miners.

Two Kidnappers Are Conveyed To Grim Prison

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) Carl Austin Hall and Mrs. Bonnie Heady were held today in death cells behind the grey, forbidding walls of the Missouri state penitentiary.

The condemned kidnap - killers of little Bobby Greenlease were brought here late Friday from Kansas City, where they were sentenced to death Thursday. The 150-mile trip was made by automobile. The prisoners, in separate cars, were chained and under heavy guard.

They will die together in the gas chamber Dec. 18.

Immediately following their arrival at the prison they were "cleaned in." The progress, which required almost an hour, including the recording of weight, height and identifying marks. Hographs and fingerprints were taken. Each then was given the usual disinfectant bath.

HALL BLAMES LIQUOR

Hall, who refused finger-printed, officials said Mrs. Heady remarked to Hall, "This is almost like a honeymooning."

Hall, who was released from the prison last April after serving a year and three months for robbery, did not answer.

Officers said he remarked: "Lots of people are in here because of liquor. They started from too low down."

The pair was issued regulation prison clothing and placed in cells in death row. Officials said they will not be allowed outside their cells, except for baths, until their executions.

Hall and Mrs. Heady had been quoted as saying they wished to be married before their execution. The federal justice department in Friday, however, that such a marriage would not be permitted.

A 24-hour guard will be maintained outside their cells. They will be permitted to have reading material but will not be given radio listeners.

They will be fed from the prison officers' mess in accordance with the possibility of poisoning by other prisoners.

Fumes and Smoke Haze Continue To Curtain U.S. Coastal Areas

NEW YORK (AP)—A four-day concentration of city fumes and smoke haze continued to curtain and harass United States coastal areas from New England to Virginia today.

Health department authorities in the New York metropolitan area and New Jersey were keeping a close watch on death reports for if the twilight-grey "smaze" would add to fatalities.

Hundreds of persons have complained of scratchy throats and reddened eyes and noses, with chronic asthma sufferers being the worst hit.

Coining of the word "smaze" a variation of the commonly used "smog" was an attempt to describe the smoke-haze blanket.

Manhattan's tallest skyscrapers often appeared blotted out in the gloom.

The unseasonably warm weather, Friday's high was 69.9, has caused this unusual situation: A layer of warm air has formed a ceiling over colder air at ground level, with the upper air acting as a lid to keep fumes and smoke from dispersing. The weather bureau terms this an "inversion" of the usual process.

RAIN FORECAST

Some only relief in sight was a forecast of "some rain beginning tonight or Saturday". It could worsen if east from Chicago could break up the condition, but that could take several days.

Airliners experienced only minor delays in landings. However, by midnight Friday night all incoming and outgoing flights at La Guardia and Idlewild airports were cancelled.

Spokesman at both fields said no activity could be contemplated until it lifted.

Many observers have started comparing the current weather with the "great fog" in British last year which killed 12,000 persons.

Dr. Morris B. Jacobs, director of the New York City air pollution control laboratory, said that in addition to soot, "the haze includes particles of such things as fly ash, dust, earth, tars, asphalt, grit, metallic oxides, droplings and windows, rubber rubbed off tires by friction, and anything loose and likely to blow upward."

Wildcat Strike Ties Up Montreal Buses And Trams

Transportation Is Paralyzed On Day of Santa Claus Visit

By BOB JOYCE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — A wildcat strike today brought Montreal's publicly-owned transportation system to a standstill.

The strike started suddenly and without advance notice. At first only a few buses and street cars were affected, but the walkout soon snowballed into a complete halt of the services.

The walkout will cause thousands of children to miss the Santa Claus parade scheduled for downtown today. The parade usually attracts upwards of 200,000 people.

The walkout was started by an estimated 800 of the MTC's tram operators, motormen and bus drivers who attended a stormy union meeting Friday night. The meeting overruled union chiefs and decided to pull MTC vehicles off the streets in support of demands for better pay and improved working conditions.

PLEAS DISREGARDED

Union officials had notified the meeting that negotiations in the new dispute had broken down. But the officials asked the men not to take any action except by "legal" means.

Half the men at the meeting disregarded the plea and left the hall to order buses and street cars off the streets.

"Services are at a standstill," a spokesman for the MTC said today.

The full effects of the walkout will be felt tomorrow when MTC offices were closed for the weekend when the strike started. Large stores, railways and others used delivery trucks to pick up employees at tram and bus stops.

Taxis did a land-office business. While the Montreal Police Commission said it was "practically back into conference with the Montreal transportation commission." They were to report to the men tonight at a meeting tonight.

Police said they had no reports of violence on the picketlines.

Gerard Picard, president representing 5,000 members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees and other Transport Workers (CLC) said the MTC officials in a night-long session.

NEGOTIATIONS COLLAPSE

The flare-up ended a new Eaghre Conciliation, union business agency, told some 800 transport employees postwar operation negotiations had collapsed down.

Union officials urged the men to stay at work, but were shouted down. Attempts to end the meeting failed.

Workers originally demanded a 10 cent-an-hour wage increase production in the work-week from 48-50 hours to 44 hours.

The union later presented 10 new demands to the company, including payment of $50 a year for good conduct, an improved pension plan and two weeks' holiday pay.

Basic wage is $1.41 an hour for motormen and conductors, $1.48 for bus drivers.

The company claims any substantial wage increase will mean higher fares. Three tickets now cost 30 cents.

French Capture Big Rebel Base On Dien Bien Phu

By LARRY ALLEN

HANOI, Indo-China (AP)—Thousands of French and Viet Namese paratroopers have fanned deep, deep into mountain territory of the Communist-led Vietminh to grab a major base for new raids on their guerrilla foes.

The French high command announced that its forces, supported by United States-supplied fighter-bombers, seized the big rebel war base of Dien Bien Phu, 190 miles west of Hanoi Friday.

Gen. Henri Navarre, French commander in north Indo-China, said the capture:

"Provides a centre of the rallying and training of partisan fighters from the pro-French Thai tribes, and for raids by them and the French forces on the Vietminh."

A Hanoi radio broadcast threat to the Thai tribal capital of Lai Chau, 50 miles to the north. The Vietminh failed to capture Lai Chau in their sweeping offensive last winter which seized large areas of the Thai country.

The capture of the rebels a potential springboard for a renewed drive into Laos, Navarre said, from whose northern frontier is less than 10 miles south of Dien Bien Phu.

A Seizes a "highly important" Vietminh base in the centre of Nor...therwestern area of the main crossroads of supply routes to the Communist rear to the south.

QUICK CAPTURE

Cogny said the French dropped "several battalions" at the broad plain around Dien Bien Phu and that they quickly captured the base after its airfield. Fighter-bombers flew more than 100 sorties against the area.

Previously in paratroop raids the French had captured the base French have withdrawn after destroying enemy arms and stores. At the time, said Cogny, they will remain, and will be reinforced by airborne troops and supplies.

TO LAUNCH NEW SHIP

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—The new flag ship of the Patersons Line's 12 lake vessel is to be launched here Dec. 5, it was announced by A. Paterson, head of the company. The ship, the first vessel in the first Canadian-built bulk freighter constructed for the shipping line, is now under construction by Canadian American owners.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, (CP) — Synopsis: The Arctic storm which was centred about 300 miles south of Hudson Bay Friday has spread blizzards in southern Manitoba and northwestern Ontario today. Heavy snowfalls were in the wake of warm air this morning with cold air in its rear and a cold air advancing through Michigan and Lake Superior. Showers and scattered showers are preceding the advance of the air which is expected to cover almost all the province by tonight.

Sixty boys from the agricultural classes at the Belleville Collegiate spent Friday at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto.

The students, accompanied by R. F. Pyefinch, made the trip by chartered bus. One of the most interesting exhibits at the Fair was that of the local breeders' unit and its grand champion bull.

Students from all over the province were at the Royal. Most stood out from the rest during the trip by chartered bus. One of the groups was the vocational agriculture class from Iberia, Ohio, which arrived at the Royal on Wednesday and elected to stay until the end of the week.

Owner's Arrival Thwarts Attempt To Rob Garage

The unexpected arrival of one of the proprietors thwarted a break-in at the Pinder factory on Dundas street early Friday morning and scared the intruders away before they could accomplish their purpose.

Police reported that Mr. Pinder had occasion to go to his office about 5:30 a.m. and noticed the building through the front door. He surprised the intruders as they came in through the back door. He saw one man but it is believed there were two in the building.

The break-in artists jimmied the lock on the rear door to gain entrance.

WILLIAM ROBERT SLEEVE

Ritchie Wells, reeve of Marmora, officially welcomed the visiting crowd which filled the thousands of local people who packed the Arena. Councillors L. S. White, M.P. (Hastings — Frontenac) brought greetings from the federal government while Dr. Dafoe addressed the children of the community who turned out in force, the many advantages which they would enjoy as a result of the installation of the new artificial ice plant.

Jack Kincaid, warden of Hastings County, congratulated all those responsible for the completion of this fine project.

Alex. Fraser, treasurer of the Artificial Ice Plant reported that total receipts to date were $27,-926.26. Of this total $25,000 was paid bills totalling $27,003.10, including $2,000 for the land itself and $2,134.46 for lumber. The balance of $902.18 would be used to pay the rest of the installation cost of $4,000 for a floor for the rink. It is expected that the floor will be installed next spring.

Reeve Wells Shannon, chairman of the fund, expressed the appreciation of the committee to all those who had contributed their time and energy to make the artificial ice plant a reality.

Bruce MacKenzie, publicity director of the fund spoke briefly.

An outstanding exhibition of figure skating was then put on by three members of the Toronto Skating Club.

Barbara Jean Jacques, who has entered the Canadian Figure Skating championship competition slated for Calgary, skated by request a number of routines. Donna Dafoe and Norris Bowden, who placed second and third in the junior championship at Davos, Switzerland, in 1953, and holders of the North American pairs championship, gave their interpretations of "Dance of the Hours" and "Swedish Rhapsody."

MARMORA WINS OF HOCKEY

Two augmented hockey teams representing Marmora and Campbellford staged an exhibition hockey game with two 20 minute periods, with Marmora pulling out a 3-0 win. Scott of Wellington, who was given Marmora squad opened the scoring after a fine passing play and paved with a solo goal. He set up Ramsbottom of Belmont, for Marmora's second tally in the third period, while Lovelace of Marmora wound up the scoring late in the third session.

Campbellford Chaps, former Boston Bruin star, and burly Jack Baker of Madoc, handed out only three penalties in a surprisingly chippy game.

QUINTE CLUB PERFORMS

During the intermission between periods, Jack Dickens of the Quinte Skating Club, performed as a skating clown much to the delight of everybody. The RCAF band also provided the music throughout the program.

The Coca-Cola company of Belleville gave away more than 2,000 bottles of their product as a contribution to the success of the evening.

At the conclusion of the program members of the band, the hockey teams, the visiting skaters and entertainers were guests of the arena committee at a party in the town hall.

Mr. Bowden, who is an engineer by profession, expressed interest in the Bethlehem Steel development's new furnaces, and so he, and Misses Jacques and Dafoe were taken on a conducted tour of the steel company's huge project.

R. J. Messervey's White Orpingtons Head Fair List

R. J. Messervey, noted judge of poultry and white Orpingtons, has returned home from the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto and can lay down with prizes and awards won by his birds at the show. It was a big harvest ever held by the fair said Mr. Messervey and the quality of the birds seem to get better year by year.

The main judge at the fair this year but did not judge the classes in which his birds were competing and the Orpington judge gave his collection of birds two first, three seconds, one fourth and one fifth. This was a remarkable record in that six other breeders were competing in the white class. The record could have been much better had not Mr. Messervey lost a number of birds through a cold caught during home from the Ottawa exhibition.

Mr. Messervey also took down the prize for the best collection of White Orpingtons and the American Bronze Turkey and the best Barred Rock Orpington cockerel. The breeder expects this bird to be one of the outstanding birds on the American show circuit when he is fully developed as a cock bird.

Stories of Famous Hymns

By HORACE B. POWELL

O JESUS, THOU ART STANDING

O Jesus, Thou art standing
Outside the fast-closed door,
In lowly patience waiting
To pass the threshold o'er;
Shame on us, Christian brothers,
His name and sign we bear,
O shame, thrice shame upon us
To keep Him standing there.

O Jesus, Thou art knocking;
And lo! that hand is scarred,
And thorns Thy brow encircle,
And tears Thy face have marred;
O love, that passeth knowledge,
So patiently to wait;
O sin that hath no equal,
So fast to bar the gate.

O Jesus, Thou art pleading
In accents sweet and low,
"I died for you, my children,
And will ye treat Me so?"
O Lord, with shame and sorrow
We open now the door;
Dear Savior, enter, enter,
And leave us nevermore.

By HORACE B. POWELL

"O JESUS, THOU ART STANDING"

"Behold I stand at the door and knock: If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

Every lover of the Bible has been thrilled by this impressive message which is found in the third chapter of the Book of Revelation.

It inspired Holman Hunt when he painted his celebrated canvas, hymn, "Jesus, Name of Wonthe Light of the World." And drous Love". Hunt's painting, in turn, suggested the theme for the hymn William Walsham How's beautiful soul-winning hymn, reproduced above.

Holman Hunt used his brushes to tell the story of a gallant Saviour, knocking and waiting before a fast-closed door. High weeds, tangled vines and unpicked fruit on the ground before the door give evidence that it has not been opened for a long time. Bishop How has told the same story in his hymn-poem, written in 1867.

"O Jesus, Thou Art Standing" is Bishop How's masterpiece, but all he wrote many hymns. Among other favorites are his New Year From Their Labors Rest," and his "O Word of God Incarnate."

Bishop How was widely known for his Christian devotion and his zeal in winning souls. It has been said that the best picture of the character of this unusual churchman is to be found in his own description of an ideal minister:

"Such a minister," he said "should be a man, pure, holy, and spotless in his own life; a man of much prayer; in character meek, lowly and faithfully compassionate; of tenderest love to all; full of sympathy for every pain and sorrow, and devoting his days and nights to lightening the burdens of humanity; utterly prudent of insult and cavity; utterly fearless in speaking the truth and rebuking sin; ever ready to answer every call, to go wherever bidden in order to do good."

A Lift for Living

Weak Men and Wicked Ones

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

It has been said that more men child is done by men than by wicked men. I am not sure. But when we read the Master's words, we see how He condemned those who do not help when there is need.

Some good work is needed, and I do not help do it. That is my sin. Some doubting soul is groping for faith and I do not help guide him. Some slanderous gossip is injuring a neighbor, and I am not trying to check it. Some man falls by the wayside and I pass on the other side. Those are my sins.

I talked recently with three men sent by their companies to assume high executive positions in my city. These men can perch comfortably in high apartment homes and keep aloof from the muck and graft which are being revealed here in New York.

But they will not help clean the sidewalks of New York merely by keeping their own shirts clean. And men whose dynamic energy enables them to make good in business can hardly satisfy their consciences by being only passively good in the midst of a community's evils.

SHADOW OF EXAMPLE

The power of individual influence is hard to overestimate. A good man's example casts a shadow of influence far beyond what he can see.

The late Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis wrote a great book years ago on "The Investment of Influence." I was so impressed that I pointed out how we cast shadows of influence which may help and heal others.

I called that sermon, "Men and Their Shadows" and gave it at the commencement of a New England women's college. (I found that "Men and Their Shadows" was not a very happy title for a woman's college baccalaureate!) Nevertheless, the point was valid. Our shadows of influence are almost immeasurable.

INFLUENCE NOT ENOUGH

But influence is not enough. It's said that an institution is the lengthened shadow of a man. But it is also true that the institution is the organized shadow of individuals. It takes organization and co-operation to make goodness fully effective.

Evil does "gang up," but good people often do not. We are impressed and dismayed by the interlocking directorates of the criminal elements, as we see how police and politicians and bosses may often be tied together, as for instance on the New York waterfront. We cannot combat such corrupt combinations with divided religious forces.

NEED UNITED FRONT

The time has come when Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish leaders should meet and plan a united front for cleansing our cities and areas of corrupt action. Such a gathering would alarm the gangsters and arouse the churches.

Professor Muntz of Yale Divinity School tells of visiting a fine old ancestral house in Connecticut. The aged owner was the last of a distinguished New England family and she was proudly showing him through the home. Over the fireplace he noticed an ancient rifle and asked if he might take it down and examine it.

His hostess replied: "Oh, I am afraid that wouldn't be safe. You see, it is all loaded and primed to fire. My great-grandfather kept it there in constant readiness against the moment when he might strike a blow for the freedom of the colonies."

NO CONFIDENCE

Professor Muntz asked, "Then he died before the Revolutionary War?" "No," she answered, "he lived to a ripe old age and died in 1802, but he just never had any confidence in General Washington."

There was a man who lived right through the crucial days of the American Revolution. He longed for liberty, but he did not make his convictions count.

We are living through revolutionary days. How far are we making our influence count?

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

NAUGHTY BOBOLINKS

Bobolinks in migration are numbered among the bad boys of Birdland, and like human robbers that pet cat, make and keep splendid clothing, the males have changed from their characteristic yellow, black, and white costumes into drab colored suits.

As the human thieves change and subdue their voices, these birds replace their exuberant songs by a metallic "klink." Instead of the joyous, though short-lived flights, they slink around near the ground.

Even feeding habits have altered. In summer they ate injurious insects and weed seeds, thus aiding man. Gradually the bad habit of taking some grain was added. Finally, by the time our Canadian bobolinks reach the southern states they have developed the custom of living entirely off man's valuable products.

GANG SPIRIT

It surely must be that the gang spirit, which, large, bold or sinister, sometimes affects our bobolinks in the same unfortunate way, making their into undesirable citizens. On the nesting grounds, Mr. Bobolink is all that could be wished for: a good husband and father, a helpful partner in man, one of the top songsters, and a well-dressed bird.

But by late summer he leaves his home in a state gravy plot on hay field, and skking along his entire family lotus up with other Bobolink families in marshy spots. There they feed up in preparation for their long trip south, learning and practising bad tricks. Most leave around August 15th, and before mid-September Canada has seen the last of them; but not so our neighbors to the south.

Following the ancient, much-flown bobolink flyway, all from as far west as Alberta and as far east as Cape Breton Island converge in the southern states, and crowd into the space between the South of the Mississippi River and the Atlantic Ocean. There they rest for weeks, filling up on unharvested rice.

Year after year, the temptation to linger there is not so great; nevertheless a loss of at least 10 per cent can always be counted on.

Brazil is their goal. There they are all packed for the winter in to a relatively small area, 1-3 the breadth and 1-3 the area of their breeding range.

The march of time has greatly affected bobolinks. When forests covered our lands, they were scarce, when hay fields came with man, their population increased. Now, as man progresses from hay mow to motor power and from farmers' wide fields to packed cities the bobolink is feeling the pinch of civilization.

Stories of Famous Hymns

By HORACE B. POWELL

O JESUS, THOU ART STANDING

By HORACE B. POWELL

"Behold I stand at the door and knock: If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

Every lover of the Bible has been thrilled by this impressive message of Jesus, found in the third chapter of the Book of Revelation.

It inspired Holman Hunt when he painted his celebrated canvas, "The Light of the World." And Hunt's painting, in turn, suggested the imagery that Bishop William Walsham How's beautiful soul-winning hymn, reproduced above.

Holman Hunt used his brushes to tell the story of a patient Saviour, knocking and waiting before a fast-closed door. His words, tangled vines and unpicked fruit on the ground before the door give evidence that it has not been opened for a long time. Bishop How has told the same story in his hymn-poem, written in 1867.

"O Jesus, Thou Art Standing" is Bishop How's masterpiece, but he wrote many hymns. Among other favorites are his New Year hymn, "Jesus, Name of Wondrous Love", his All Saints' hymn, "For All The Saints Who From Their Labors Rest," and his "O Word of God Incarnate."

Bishop How was widely known for his Christian devotion and his zeal in winning souls. It has been said that the best picture of the character of this unusual churchman is to be found in his own description of an ideal ministry:

"Such a minister," he said, "should be a man, pure, holy, and apostles in his own life; a man of much prayer; in character meek, lowly and infinitely compassionate; of tenderest love to all; full of sympathy for every pain and sorrow, and devoting his days and nights to lightening the burdens of humanity; utterly prudent of insult and enmity; utterly fearless in speaking the truth and rebuking sin; ever ready to answer every call, to go wherever bidden in order to do good."

O JESUS, THOU ART STANDING

O Jesus, Thou art standing
Outside the fast-closed door,
In lowly patience waiting
To pass the threshold o'er;
Shame on us, Christian brothers,
His name and sign we bear,
O shame, thrice shame upon us
To keep Him standing there.

O Jesus, Thou art knocking;
And lo! that hand is scarred,
And thorns Thy brow encircle,
And tears Thy face have marred:
O love that passeth knowledge,
So patiently to wait;
O sin that hath no equal,
So fast to bar the gate.

O Jesus, Thou art pleading
In accents meek and low,
"I died for you, my children,
And will ye treat Me so?"
O Lord, with shame and sorrow
We open now the door;
Dear Savior, enter, enter,
And leave us nevermore.

A Lift for Living
Weak Men and Wicked Ones

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

It has been said that more mischief is done by weak men than by wicked men. I am not sure. But when we read the Master's words, we see how He condemned those who do not help when there is need.

Some good work is needed, and I do not help do it. That is my sin. Some doubting soul is groping for faith and I do not help guide him. Some slanderous gossip is injuring a neighbor, and I am not trying to check it. Some man falls by the wayside and I pass on the other side. Those are my sins.

I talked recently with three men sent by their companies to assume high executive positions in my city. These men can perch comfortably in high apartment houses and keep aloof from the muck and graft which are being revealed here in New York.

But they will not help clean the sidewalks of New York merely by keeping their own shirts clean. And men whose dynamic energy enables them to make good in business can hardly satisfy their consciences by being only passively good in the midst of a community's evils.

SHADOW OF EXAMPLE

The power of individual influence is hard to overestimate. A good man's example casts a shadow of influence far beyond what he can see.

The late Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis wrote a great book years ago on "The Investment of Influence." I was so impressed that I once prepared a sermon in which I pointed out how we cast shadows of influence which may help and heal others.

I called the sermon, "Men and Their Shadows" and gave it at the commencement of a New England woman's college. (I found that "Men and Their Shadows" was not a very happy title for a woman's college baccalaureate!) Nevertheless, the point was valid. Our shadows of influence are almost immeasurable.

INFLUENCE NOT ENOUGH

But influence is not enough. It's said that an institution is the lengthened shadow of a man. But it is also true that the institution is the organized shadow of individuals. It takes organization and co-operation to make goodness fully effective.

Evil doers "gang up," but good people often do not. We are impressed and dismayed by the interlocking directorates of the criminal elements, as we see how police and politicians and bosses may often be leagued together. Or for instance on the New York waterfront. We cannot combat such corrupt combinations with divided religious forces.

NEED UNITED FRONT

The time has come when Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish leaders should meet and plan a united front for cleaning our cities and towns of corruption. Such a gathering would alarm the gangsters and arouse the churches.

Professor Muehl of Yale Divinity School tells of visiting a fine old ancestral house in Connecticut. The aged owner was the last of a distinguished New England family and she was proudly showing him through the house. Over the fireplace he noticed an ancient rifle and asked if he might take it down and examine it.

His hostess replied: "Oh, I am afraid that wouldn't be safe. You see, it is all loaded and primed to fire. My great-grandfather kept it there in constant readiness against the moment when he might strike a blow for the freedom of the colonies."

NO CONFIDENCE

Professor Muehl asked, "Then he did before the Revolutionary War?" "No," she answered, "he lived to a ripe old age and died in 1802, but he just never had any confidence in General Washington."

There was a man who lived right through the crucial days of the American Revolution. He longed for liberty, but he did not make his convictions count.

We are living through revolutionary days. How far are we making our influence count?

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

NAUGHTY BOBOLINKS

Bobolinks in migration are numbered among the bad boys of Birdland, and like human robbers that pot on "make" and "beat" spicurean clothing, the males have changed from their characteristic yellow, black and white costumes into drab colored suits.

As the human thieves change and subdue their voices, these birds replace their exuberant songs by a metallic "klink." Instead of the joyous, though short, song flights, they slink around near the ground.

Even feeding habits have altered. In summer they ate injurious insects and weed seeds, thus aiding man. Gradually the bad habit of taking some grain was added. Finally, by the time our Canadian bobolinks reach the southern states they have developed the custom of living entirely off man's valuable products.

GANG SPIRIT

It surely must be that the gang spirit, which takes hold of our youngsters sometimes, affects our bobolinks in the same unfortunate way, molding them into undesirable citizens. On the nesting grounds Mr. Bobolink is all that could be wished for: a good husband and father, a helpful partner in work, one of the best songsters, and a well-dressed bird.

But by late summer he leaves his home in some grassy plot or hay field, and "klinks" along his entire family joins up with other Bobolink families in marshy spots. There they feed up in preparation for their long trip south, learning and practising bad tricks. Most leave around August 15th, and before mid-September Canada has seen the last of them; but not so our neighbors to the south.

Following the ancient, much-flown bobolink flyway, all from as far west as Alberta and as far east as Cape Breton Island converge in the southern states, and in groups the size of those between the mouth of the Mississippi River and the Atlantic Ocean. There they rest for weeks, filling up on unharvested rice.

In the past years, the temptation to linger there is not so great; nevertheless a loss of at least 10 per cent can always be counted on.

Then on their goal. There they are all packed for the winter in the Southern States, 1-3 the breadth and 1-3 the area of their breeding range.

The march of time has greatly affected bobolinks. Where formerly, all over our lands, they were scarce, when hay fields came with man, their numbers increased. Now, as man progresses from horse to motor power and from farmers' wide fields to packed cities the bobolinks are feeling the pinch of civilization.

ON NAMING A SCHOOL

The Bay of Quinte District High School Board will choose a name for the new 23-room Quinte district high school at its December meeting. We do not know what name the board might choose and there has been no indication from the Board as to the method which it will use to select the name. We feel quite confident, however, that the Board will make a wise choice in so important a decision.

The trend in Belleville in the past has been to name the public schools after members of the Royal family, while the present collegiate bears the very functional name of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School.

The practice, especially in the case of the public schools, however laudable, shows a tendency to overlook the many other and more conscientious persons who decided on the names in the past. They were undoubtedly moved by the best of intentions. But there is a certain unwarranted commercialism in naming schools after members of the Royal family, and those world figures whose current endeavors capture the public imagination and give them a deserved, but all too often, brief, passing sense.

All across Canada, cities and towns build new schools, offering school boards an unparalleled opportunity to honor some local person, educator or war hero, or to commemorate some aspect of local history or achievement by bestowing its name on the new school. The result is all too often the choice of the name of some king or queen who probably is unaware that he or she is being so honored unless informed of the event by chattering relatives. The people in the community, with no personal acquaintance or direct relationship with the honored individual, can, at best, feel only a tenuous sentiment.

The George School Board is beset with an innumerable number of problems in its administration of a constantly expanding school system, and the whole temptation to take the easy way out might be tempted to follow the tried and true practice in naming the new school. Its decision, whatever it might be, will be received with respect for the sincerity of purpose which members will employ in arriving at their ultimate decision. But we feel that the Board is provided with an excellent opportunity in this School Board centennial year, perhaps even of outstanding local interest in the naming of the new high school.

THE VALUE OF FAITH

There are several fantastic aspects in the case of George DuPre of Calgary, whose account of World War II espionage for Britain and his torture at the hands of Nazi captors, described by Questing Reynolds under the title, "The Man Who Wouldn't Talk." But probably the most fantastic aspect of the whole story is the excuse given by DuPre when he was finally found out.

Already full incredible credence has been labelled the "greatest hoax in the history of publishing" by editors of the Reader's Digest who published a resume in their November issue. DuPre has stated that he told the story of wartime imprisonment and torture, and his supposed triumph over both, to boys' clubs and service groups to convey the belief in the necessity of faith. He did that by adding dramatic details to his account he could present his case more effectively.

So effective and compelling was his story that reputable writers and editors were completely taken in by it, not to mention the hundreds who were duped by it as DuPre lectured to boys' clubs.

It is very peculiar that a man, whose purpose is a re-awakening in the necessity of faith, should build his lessons on a lie. Good faith is rewarded by honesty, not duplicity. DuPre was urged by his wife repeatedly to admit the hoax, but he would not. Now that he has been found out, DuPre has borne up so well to the consequences of his act that he collapsed and had to be placed under medical care. The faith that allowed him to preach falsehood has been shown up for the weak prop that it is.

SHOULD BE FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITY

Major W. F. A. Preston, civil defence director at London, Ont., says he takes "a dim view" of the handling of the civil defence program which has been initiated.

Major Preston would appear to be on firm ground in his criticism.

No municipality which wants the display to visit it must pay $1,000.

Why?

Civil defence is as much a national responsibility as is the provision of an army, navy and air force. Despite the valor of the RAF, despite the Royal Navy's heroic efforts in the battle of Britain, despite every effort exerted by the army, Britain's plight in the Second Great War would have been a sorry one if the civil defence organization had not operated with energy and efficiency. Wars cannot be won on the home front alone, but neither can they be won by the armed services if they lack supplies.

If the civil defence display is of no value, then there is no reason why any municipality should be asked to pay $1,000 to obtain the privilege of a visit by it. And if it is of value then it is the Federal Government's duty to make certain that visits those centres where its presence will do the most to safeguard the nation as a whole.

GOLFER'S RETURN

Back goes the golfer to his den,
On time for supper once again;
Once more a meek and placid man,
His temper under good control,
Of games he lost, but should have won,
With bitter wailing he is done.

With stumpy clothes his locker's stocked,
The door is stay securely locked.
The clubs he used so oft in vain
Must wait for spring to come again.

Now must the golfer get from books
The cures for slices, schlaffs and hooks.

All winter long — and long it seems —
Back goes the golfer to his dreams.

Beside the fireplace he will stay
And hole by hole the course he'll play.

Shooting his every round in par,
For there it is no bunkers are.

Mr. B. Moorman, Murvey Street, this city, who is an express messenger with the Canadian National Railways, assisted in the arrest of two hold-up men in Toronto on Monday evening. He was proceeding in Kingston on his way to the station to board train for Belleville, when he heard some one calling "hold-up"! — "Call the police"! He spotted the store where calls came from; it was a candy shop, and upon entering there he found a man holding the door against two men on the inside and the girl clerk was standing back of the counter with her hands in the air. Mr. Moorman promptly put in a call for police and returned to assist the man holding the store door closed. The police arrived shortly and the prisoners were taken away.

Elevator Key Invention

(By Carlyle Patrick in the Indianapolis Star.)

What, in your opinion, was the key invention of the last 100 years? The automobile, the motion picture, the electric light, the airplane, radio, television, the machine gun, the atom bomb, any of our other amazing devices that add to the convenience and comfort of daily living? Their impact on 20th century civilization has been tremendous. But, if we had to name one and no more, we think right now it would be a safety hoist, or elevator.

It made possible the vertical bulge of our cities beyond wavering distance, which, by and large, is three or four miles. It created such clusters of skyscrapers as New York and Chicago, with their huddled masses of office workers.

It served to implement concentrated financial and executive control of the nation's economy in a few great metropolitan centres.

It did as much as the locomotive, which had its day many years, to shape the pattern of the country's growth. It was the same any other single invention since 1833 — "did more" to made the sky the limit, rather than the horizon.

This would not be merely interesting social history but for the fact that the elevator still is a potent force in building cities higher instead of, wider. You'd imagine that New York's Manhattan Island already is packed about as tight as it could be, but there's room left of room at the top.

Association of Wall Street Journal, the country is undergoing the greatest skyscraper boom since 1931. There are now 100 big "elevator type" buildings have been put up in the last five years. Some 28 of them, more than one-fourth, the Journal reports, are in New York City. Twenty-three more are in the construction stage. Of these, already has an 8-acre roof. It will have an 8-acre roof. It will be the biggest building in the world.

Here is progress and it's wonderful. It doesn't come completely against the grain of our times. Modern trends are in the direction of decentralize industry. Since elevators are not geographically fixtures, it might be easier to decentralize home offices, too, with branches here and in cities where taxes and costs are lower and there is room enough for more directions than up and down. A few well placed H-bomb blasts at decapitate industry, in case of war.

Likes History In Old Style

(Hamilton Spectator)

In days of yore from Britain's shore, Wolfe the dauntless came

To nearly every Canadian who went to a little red schoolhouse or a big white one the dramatic painting of the battle of the Plains of Abraham was about as familiar as his own backyard. Wolfe had waited until the charging French and Montcalm were so close that the stiff, red British lines could see the whites of their eyes; then there was a thunderous volley, and the French troops went down in a heap. It was just as simple as that, with, of course, the preliminaries of climbing a giant cliff and fooling a sentry with an abrupt reply in the best French of the day.

Time mellowed the animosity that stayed on the plains and the gallantry of Montcalm, along with the bravery of the 23-year-old Wolfe, were accepted as fine testimony of the two races that later built Canada.

Only now some odd things are emerging from the crannies of history that was the story about Wolfe being mortally wounded by a cannonball British soldier turned traitor. The other day it was revealed that a British army major named Patrick MacKellar may have set up victory for Wolfe by showing the Abraham (which were paradoxically known by later scholars as farmer) by ingenious spying in the fortifications. Maps, sketches and other documents had been taken on prisoner in 1756. He went to Quebec with the troops, learned a lot about the defences.

The Toronto historian Lyman Jackes, who exploded this theory, said that Wolfe was descended from descendants of traitorous Canadians. The British Museum has got the log books of Patrick MacKellar, and Canada must never know the full story of that remarkable man.

Such a cloak-and-dagger proposition is just the thing for the schoolroom pictures of the great battle. We don't like it. Although when you look at the cliff Wolfe and his men ascended it is hard not to think it impossible as it seemed to be when you got lines and frenzied prayers about it many moons ago, and even if Wolfe himself was making his way through the lines in civilian clothes, he still must have had that he found thoroughly miserable, if it still doesn't, he died that epochal day in battle to leave a wonderfully inspiring memorial to a country with two parts and one great future.

Advice About Pickpockets

(Reader's Digest)

The pickpocket is likely to be present wherever there is a crowd.

Pickpockets possess not only a remarkable dexterity but an uncanny ability to sense which potential victim will do next. Choosing his prey in a crowd, the skilled pickpocket learns two vital facts at once: the exact position of the wallet in a man's coat, and whether his intended victim has any suspicions.

On a cafeteria line a man will hesitate to take a tray full of food to grab for his pocketbook. Among crowds at sporting events, pickpockets work in the inning rally, or the finish of a horse race, when members forget their wallets in the excitement of the moment. In such places, it is safer to be more than usually alert.

Pickpockets at county fairs have been known to shout a warning to the crowd: "Look out for pickpockets!" immediately nearby every man will slap at his wallet to make sure it is safe, and the thief knows exactly where the money is.

Men carry as many as five or six pickpockets, including a woman, will work together. A man will bump into a victim, stealing. The others act as decoys or have various parts of the job that are cleverly conceived and executed.

Carry only what money you need and don't flash it. If you're a woman, don't dig around in bag dangle; hold the bag limit if now dinkus, by the strap. For a man, an inside pocket is safer than an outside one; or purse in a hip pocket is the easiest. Beware of strangers who bump you.

WE CANNOT THRIVE ON CHEAT FOOD

I remember how Charlie Bradburn, requisecat in pace, used to break up the game by slipping into the house and the Bradbrowns arrived next to the schoolyard and the Chapel Street in Canadaigua all coming out in a few minutes with a slice of bread and butter, brown bread, that is, right out of the oven, carefully balanced on his thumb and fingers.

Dr. Brady

Ah, but wait. The butter was topped with a thick layer of sugar. Nah, not the lumpy granduct or bleaching and refining which you KW? know by that name. It was brown sugar (but not deep brown) sugar.

In the 90's some Canadaigua people had already switched from brown to white sugar, among them the Bradburns, and in town not on the town, the Bradleys, the Hicks, farm ill. The Bradys, like everybody else, thought came to believe refined, bleached white sugar was better than brown, and besides, brown sugar came in a paper bag to which the grocer shoved his scoop to weigh out your order, whereas refined white sugar came, presently if not when it was bought, wrapped in a paper package, like oh boy breakfast food today.

Vaguely we knew that something was lost when insipid white sugar replaced brown sugar, but we didn't know just what until we learned something about nutrition in the early decades of the century, mainly through animal experimentation. The refining process removed calcium, the thiamin and riboflavin that grow in sugar cane and/or the sugar beet and were left intact in old-fashioned brown sugar.

We must remind readers that most of the yellow stuff sold today as "brown sugar" is a shoddy substitute for old-fashion brown sugar.

The milling of flour was formerly a local business, with a miller in every community. The flour he milled contained the wheat germ, in which are nearly all the vitamin B complex, vitamin E and vitamin A of the wheat kernal. But such whole wheat flour does not keep long after the wheat is milled. Refined white flour contains none of the wheat germ, but the stuff keeps for months or years and hence can be shipped and shipped anywhere. Thus the milling of flour is now big business and the mills that formerly flourished in villages throughout the land are out of business, except here and there one that caters to people who have the unnatural, artificial value of real whole wheat flour.

The way we Americans went "refined" white flour and "refined" white sugar is not only a reflection on our intelligence, but and commentary on our gullibleness, for our preference for these cheat foods was a matter of pride. We were rich, we thought, we wanted only the purest, and refined white is wholesale, but a man says today that of course we wanted only the purest, most powerful most beautiful — even if we have to go in debt or live in poor style to get it.

This is not to imply that refined white flour and refined white sugar are not wholesome, nourishing, abundant, digestible and cheap.

To the best or my knowledge we have called the attention to the use of so much white sugar and white flour in the diet is that, since these cheap foods supply more than half of the daily calories, they displace foods supplying much a diet do not and/or the sugar beet and wheat left intact in old-fashioned brown sugar.

Whipped Cream On Oysters?

(Cornwall Standard-Freeholder)

A recipe appears in a republished magazine which explains how to make an oyster stew, and then concludes with the unbelievable, horrendous statement: "A shattering advice to crown the stew with whipped cream, plus a sprinkle of chopped parsley."

In recent years there has been a lamentable distinctive tendency on the part of hard-pressed housewives to experiment and dream up fantastically dreadful combinations of unrelated and antagonistic means to top otherwise enjoyable and solid fodder. But now thinks, by the powers of the various salad combinations that are contemporaneously pictured in prose and photographs, he will have an idea of what has been going on in the confused culinary realm.

An honest oyster stew, with crackers and milk, and not a frustrating treasure hunt to cover one of the slivering, made with good rich milk, and flavored with salt and plenty of butter, is a topflight supper on a chilly autumn evening. Naturally, the addition of extra meats crackers to crumble into his bowl is the thing recommend that it be topped with layer of marshmallows and chocolate sauce.

THE FORGIVENESS OF SINS.MORALS

The doctrine of forgiveness is the outstanding doctrine of the Christian religion. Without a system of sacrifices was a means of cleansing the worshipper and signing his relation to God in the Most High. Christianity promises forgiveness through Christ. The Bible is a book of promises— the Old Testament, a promise of one nation, and the Messiah would come; the New Testament, a promise in the name of the Messiah, having arrived, would confer forgiveness of sins upon all who seek it.

The forgiveness of sins confers new life upon the person who trusts this overwhelming promise of God. Nobody deserves God's forgiveness; instead we deserve his condemnation. Once we come to realize that God has forgiven us our sins, then there comes an immeasurable joy in the knowledge. We realize that the hand of God Himself has been stretched out over our past. Our renewed spirits cry out, "Everything is settled between God and myself. The past is gone now. The future is filled with the glory of God's promises."

With the experience of forgiveness comes the thrilling sense of life in our souls. Forgiveness is conditioned by our attitude toward God gives. As soon as we stop seeking for forgiveness and accept the gift which God is offering us, then, and then only, have we known peace and true joy.

Many of the birds that will linger in our neighborhood into the winter, when they should be long gone far south, are injured birds that could not keep up with their fellows in the autumn migration. Every year a good proportion of them die as the wintry crowns more severe and food becomes hard to find.

Last winter, five blue geese remained with us until Christmas in a park near where I live. Their lagging behind the main migration was due to the fact that a wireless curiosity on the part of the Wildlife Branch of the Department of Game and went for shot-sized flights across and into open water. Finally, most of the birds ceased watching them took miniature motion pictures of them, feeding, flying, resting and the developed showing and study of the birds made by one later a friend. It was evident that one of them was injured, possibly by shot. The entire family stayed with the injured one. Apparently by Christmas the injury had healed sufficiently. They went on their way. Silver and Gold I Have None

CHAPTER 1

Jesus of Nazareth had died. He had been crucified by Roman soldiers.

But at the moment of his death strange things had happened in Jerusalem . . . earthquakes, and darkness in midday, curtains rent in two, and the veil of the Temple rent in two.

And strange things were still happening in Jerusalem weeks afterward. For Jesus had risen from the dead, and walked and talked and eaten with his followers. He had ascended into heaven before their very eyes. And nine days later, as He had promised, the Holy Ghost had come down in tongues of fire upon the apostles, imbuing them with new power, and confirmed Him as Christ that day, to the uneasy dismay of those Temple rulers who had plotted Jesus' death, the apostles had been preaching throughout the city, winning converts not by dozens, or hundreds, but by thousands.

Christianity was in the very air of Jerusalem, and Simon Peter Calphas, who had persecuted Jesus as a blasphemer, and demanded his death, could do nothing about it. The converts continued daily in the fellowship of the doctrine and in the fellowship of the early Christians. They met together, "having all things in common"; selling their luxuries and giving to the poor, just as Christ had once told the rich man to do.

Day after day, the spirit of Christ took on new power in the capital, the people and the Christians came to the Temple to preach the doctrine of love that had proved itself stronger than death. The people soon knew how the Christians shared, one with another, what they had; how they did "eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart; praising God, having favor with all the people."

Those who would be saved, whose hearts were ready, in numbers hereafter, were by day flocking around the apostles.

High Priest Caiaphas was growing apoplectic. He thought that with the crucifixion he had got an end to Jesus. But now Caiaphas saw that the doctrines of the Nazarene were being held on more people after His death than before.

Take for example, the singular miracle of the man in the Beautiful Gate. Every courtyard of the Temple. How long could the priests and the scribes allow that thing to go on?

Just about three in the afternoon, which in those days was called "the ninth hour," as Peter and John went to the Temple together to pray, they saw a pitiful sight. A lame man sat on his haunches stretching out his hollowed palm to beg. The cripple had been malformed in his mother's womb. For forty years they had been visiting in Jerusalem, Peter and John could remember him squatting in the shade of a marble pillar at the gate of the Temple, imploring alms of all the worshippers.

Now he tugged at Peter's cloak. "Mercy!" the crippled beggar moaned. "Save me from these pains."

"Look upon us," said Peter softly.

The beggar was weary as a dog waiting for a bone, certain that the two men would toss some money at his feet.

Peter's next words were full of disappointment for the cripple.

Said Peter: "Silver and gold I have none; but what I have, I give you."

Then what is it you have, you two obvious country yokels from the north country?

"In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, arise and walk!"

With quiet confidence Peter spoke those words. The calloused hand of the fisherman stretched down to take the pale hand of the beggar, and Peter pulled him up. The beggar at the gate called Beautiful for the first time in his life could stand alone.

The man leaped in bewildered joy. Then still running and wheeling around, he made a dash for the Temple, heading for the altar, praising God all the way.

Peter and John looked solemnly at crowd cans pulling toward them from the Temple. The people knew this beggar; they recognized his helplessness, and "when they saw him walk and strong. So a howling, cheering mob surrounded Peter and John.

Peter raised his voice and began to speak, shouting the words into honest thought:

"Ye men of Israel, why wonder you at this? or why look ye on us, as if by our strength or power we had made this man to walk.

"The God of our fathers hath glorified His Son Jesus; whom you indeed delivered up, and denied before the face of Pilate when he judged He should be released.

"But you denied the Holy One and the Just; and desired a murderer to be granted unto you. But the Author of life you killed, all of whom God hath raised from the dead, of which we are witnesses.

"And in the faith of His Name, this man whom you have seen and known, hath His Name made him strong, and given this perfect soundness in the sight of you all.

"And now, brethren, I know that you did it through ignorance, as did also your rulers. But those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all the prophets, that His Christ should suffer, He hath so fulfilled.

"Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and He shall send Jesus Christ, who before was preached unto you:

"Whom the heaven must receive until the time of restoration of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of His holy prophets, since the world began."

Yet Peter boldly reminded the people of what had happened. Now had the time been forgotten? Not by Peter's own power, nor his own holiness, but through the Name of Jesus and through faith in His name. The people could not have forgotten this Jesus, whom they had seen crucified, and who had risen again still hurled in their hearts. But though they had denied it to be done, God had still sent for forgiveness. Therefore, the Scriptures which "foretold the sufferings of God" had been fulfilled.

Then, talking to that restless mob in Solomon's Porch spoke Jerusalem's first profound insight into mysteries that might bewilder them.

Peter and John were finishing their task, the inevitable approach of Jesus were marching on him.

Peter was not surprised at the measured tramp of feet in entering the Court of the Gentiles. That fastidious and unwarlike collection of timeservers and obscure holders, the Temple Guard, drilled by their captain, one of the dandies of Jerusalem, was to end on by a knot of fuming priests and grumbling Sadducees. Peter's logians. Not for long could such men permit a friend of Christ to stand up and tell the public about the need for penance and the promise of everlasting life. Nor could they abide to hear Peter telling the people that Jesus had been resurrected from the dead.

Glinting the guards led hands upon Peter and John, brandished their clubs, threatened them in shrill voices, and led them to prison. At twilight they thrust them into a dungeon cell at one of the towers in the city wall: "Into a strict prison," the record has it.

Neither Peter nor John felt dismayed. Gleeful and secretly friendly guards conducted them in their reeking darkness of the stronghold — that Peter had healed the lame man in the name of Jesus. Many had believed his message, and Jerusalem, beyond the number of the men was about five thousand," so St. Luke has reported.

The next day found the two apostles on trial.

Everybody important was called to sit in judgment of them at this carefully assembled meeting of the Sanhedrin. Old Annas, the politician boss of Jerusalem was there, washing his one remaining tooth with dry and withered tongue; High Priest Caiphas, the son-in-law of Annas; and the many kin of the far-spread family of the religious doctor.

"By what power," Caiphas demanded, "or by what name have you done this?"

For a moment the two prisoners remained silent, as if waiting for something. Peter, "filled with the Holy Ghost," said:

"You princes of the people, and ancients, hear! Be it known to you all that by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom you crucified, whom God hath raised from the dead, even by Him this man standeth here before you whole.

"Neither is there salvation in any other. For there is no other Name under heaven given to men, whereby we must be saved."

Would the Sanhedrin never learn the last of this fearsome they had sent to Calvary?. These two men had been the close friends of that Jesus, and by Him, they were not only preaching but healing. Their presence, their boldness before them all, visible proof of Christian power. How could two Galilean fishermen restore straightness to crookedness? These were realities with which the Sanhedrin had to deal promptly.

So they put out Peter and John and the crippled beggar, and took counsel among themselves.

"What shall we do to these men?" Caiphas finally demanded. "For indeed, a sign like a signal flash of danger.

"This tale must not be allowed to spread among the people any farther," he said. "I propose that we warn them they speak no more henceforth to any man in this name of Jesus."

But no threats could frighten these followers of Jesus. When Peter and John returned and were sternly admonished "not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus," they replied:

"If it be but in the sight of God to hear you rather than God, you be the judges! For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard."

Now Caiphas — you have given your orders to Peter and John, and you have heard their proud answer. What next? That question was in the eyes of every scribe and Pharisee.

Unless they wanted to ride rough-shod over the people's will, there was only one thing left for the Sanhedrinites to do, and they did it.

They dismissed the two stubborn fishermen or Galilee with a warning to behave themselves or there would be serious trouble indeed.

Winter Care Of Roses

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Have you put your roses to bed for the winter yet? Our mild fall has brought along continuous bloom and has given us time to get things done. A cold wet winter will make things easier for the spring work, but many have to be content to give their roses winter protection.

Bring good mould from other places and mound it up around your perpetuals to a depth of eight inches. Later when the ground has frozen to a depth of two inches you may add a light mulch of dry leaves, wood leaves (not softwood leaves from evergreens, soggy and smother the plant), a few evergreen boughs, or chicken wire will hold the mulch in place.

This will afford a protection from the sun, cold winds and sudden changes in temperature, and will keep the canes from drying out.

The mulch is not to keep the roses warm, but to prevent moisture loss which causes winter kill.

MAKE SELECTED CUTTINGS

Many nurseries will sell rose plant until the ground is frozen hard, or you can root cuttings yourself by cuttings taken at this time. Choose well-ripened wood. Cut into lengths of eight inches long, and tie them in bundles, label them and bury them in damp sand, or vermiculite and keep them in a cool basement, a cold frame. The trench should be deep enough to prevent freezing. The soil deep should be deep enough in most places.

Plant the cutting out in the spring, six inches apart. Leave one inch of the cane above ground, and only one bud.

Standard, or tree roses, and climbers or the hybrid types need winter protection too. Bend them over carefully and cover with a straw and earth, or encased in a thick bundle of cornstalks, or straw which is securely tied. Hardy climber of the rambler type do not need protection, but should be trained firmly to the trellis, or fence to prevent stocks being broken by strong winds.

If the weather has been dry give the soil a thorough soaking before the ground freezes.

PLACE IN SUNNY WINDOW.

The poinsettias which you brought in from the garden in September should have a treatment. They say if the pot is large, of plant food scratched into the soil at the outer edge of the pot. This should be repeated every four, or five weeks until the blooms have faded. Keep the soil slightly damp, and have the plant in the sunniest window you have. The blooms will last if the plant does not receive sufficient heat.

Cut off iris leaves, delphinium, phlox, hollyhock stocks and burn them. They often carry over insect pests and disease spores.

Did you buy extra bulbs for indoor blooms?

One-Party Vote Will Be Staged In Yugoslavia

By ALEX SINGLETON

BELGRADE (AP) — Yugoslavia elects a new Narodna Skupstina, its "people's Parliament", Sunday. The ballot will be secret, but rigid rules make the election a one-party primary and assure President Tito's administration a whopping vote.

The country-wide balloting will be conducted under the new constitution. It bans anti-government candidates and restricts office-seekers to members of Tito's Socialist alliance of the working people. But it does provide for some members to contest individual seats.

A voter also can mark out all the candidates to show disapproval.

The pre-election campaign has been overshadowed by this labor bloc between Yugoslavia and Italy over future control of the Trieste territory. The dispute flared after the British-United States decision to cede it from the territory's zone A over to Italy.

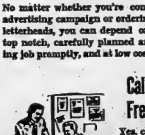
HELP TITO

That international quarrel has strengthened Tito's position by distracting attention from such domestic problems as inflation, overhousing, church-state differences and peasant unrest.

The voters will choose 353 members to the Federal Council, the lower house. There are only a score more candidates than seats available.

The 302 members of the upper house, the Council of Producers, are being elected separately by workers "directly engaged in production." These have a majority in state enterprises turning out textiles and machinery, and farmers who are members of state collectives.

Nylon Nets Entangle Fish Of Any Size



VANCOUVER (CP) — Nylon is becoming a few administrative headaches for fisheries officials on Canada's west coast.

Federal fishing regulation stipulates that salmon gillnetting must be at least 6½ inches wide in order to protect small salmon. However, officials have found that nylon nets entangle the fish with almost any width of mesh, making the regulation obsolete.

Chief Fisheries Supervisor A.J. Whitmore says he is no longer enforcing the mesh-width regulation since almost all fishermen now use nylon nets. And he has asked all fishermen using small mesh nets to report the results of their catches to his department in order that information may be used for research purposes.

Officials Await Word of Arrival In Texas of 3 Whooping Cranes

WHOOPING CRANE — The whooping crane, North America's tallest, loudest and rarest bird, is nearing extinction. The photograph, taken by F. W. Lahrman of the Saskatchewan Museum of Natural History, shows one of the only 24 known alive, in the Herbert district 125 miles west of Regina. Three cranes were reported flying in their annual migration to a refuge in Texas. (CP Photo).

By WILF CHISLETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

REGINA (CP)—Wildlife officials here await word of the arrival in Texas of three whooping cranes seen early in November in Saskatchewan while migrating from northern breeding grounds.

If they arrive safely, the three laggards of the little colony's fall migration will bring the known whooping population to 25, three more than a year ago.

Late in October, from somewhere in the vast northern marshlands, most of the birds in the flock started to wing their way south to the National Wildlife Refuge at Aransas, Texas. Twenty-one birds, including three young were counted at the sanctuary recently.

ENCOURAGING SIGN

Arrival of the slow starters would mean the first increase in the number of the species which has dwindled steadily during the present century. Four years ago there were 34.

Once they were said to have flickered the skies in their migrations and as late as 1865 were reported id great numbers between the open plains from the Red river to the Rockies.

Six of the cranes—daddy longlegs of North American birds—were sighted in Saskatchewan this fall, the last three Nov. 5 at Herbert, 125 miles west of Regina.

Fred Bard, director of the Saskatchewan Museum of Natural History, said two field workers caught up with the birds before they left their food and took photographs. Bard said getting the pictures was "a one-in-a-million chance."

Bard said the cranes apparently were resting on their trip south, about two weeks late. He said one of them appeared to have some ailment and the other two were acting nervous.

The museum in the last 14 years has joined with United States ornithologists in trying to find some way of stopping the whoopers' annual decrease.

HUNTERS' WARNED

Literature has been sent through out the province asking information on the birds in their 1,500-mile flight south. Warnings are also issued repeatedly to hunters not to fire on the cranes.

Few minrods, believed the mail cause of the high mortality rate, can resist the temptation of lining their sights against a bird that is four feet tall and has a wing spread of more than seven feet.

The whooper flock invariably is reduced on its trips north and south. Nine were lost in 1950, 11 in 1952, 1951 and six in 1952.

Bard said it probably will depend on the hunter just when the cranes will become extinct. The young which returned from Canadian breeding grounds since 1938 indicate the birds will increase if left undisturbed.

ABANDON SEARCH

He said no new searches are planned for the whooper's nesting place, believed somewhere in a broad expanse stretching from east-central Alberta to west-central Manitoba and virtually unexplored far into the northwest territories. Searches in recent years have been unsuccessful.

Driven before the advance of civilization, the whooping crane steadily flew northward to find breeding grounds, entering colder climates which affected its reproductivity. The last two nests were found 12 years ago near Kerrobert in west-central Saskatchewan.

Ornithologists have been finding the breeding grounds to discover what make the birds head north. If this can be done they may be able to overcome centuries of hereditable habit and prevent its migrating.

The whooping crane, snow white with black wingtip markings and bright red head and neck gets its name from its loud trumpeting voice. Its call, the loudest of any bird in America, can be heard two windpipe and can be heard three miles or more.

BEAVERS TROUBLESOME

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta. (CP)—Farmers are demanding that something be done about beaver dams. Irrigation ditch builders of beavers are said to be damaging crops, roads, grain fields, pastures and hay fields than any other animals in the foothills.

WOULD REDUCE COSTS

ST. THOMAS (CP) — Promotion of export of surplus stock and reduction of breeds of producing cattle were recommended Thursday as objectives of farmers of purebred holstein and jersey cattle. Themes almost were discussed at the annual meetings of the Elgin county breeders' organizations.

Two Canadas, How They Grow' Traced by Slide and Narrative

Last evening the "Women's Canadian Club" was privileged to have as guest speakers, Mr. and Mrs. John MacKenzie, of Toronto, who by narrative and picture presented to an intensely interested audience, which filled the large and beautiful auditorium of Queen Elizabeth Collegiate, Bloomfield Avenue, to capacity, the historic-adventurous story of "Our Two Canadas, and How They Grow."

John and Marjorie MacKenzie are really writers "Canada Is Your Car," but are authors of many short stories, plays and articles, as well as being travellers and photographers. As Canadians, they are deeply interested in the collection of color slides of authentic Canadian historical scenes, of which those shown last evening, bear testimony.

GROWTH OF CANADA

With Mrs. MacKenzie as narrator, and Mr. MacKenzie as operator of the projector, they showed the growth of both Lower and Upper Canada, from the time Samuel de Champlain sailed up the St. Lawrence River in 1603, and the consequent settlement of that area, to the present time, in the union of both Canadas into the one.

Beginning with the monument to Champlain, on down to the establishment of the first settlement at Port Royal in Acadia; now Nova Scotia, the Canadians faced innumerable hardships in the early and rugged country, which was infested with Indians, the large tribe of Iroquois, whose enmity Champlain had incurred in his endeavor to open up missions and settlements. In consolation, the Indians swarmed around the young settlement, begging and burning them, and uprooting them. This story of the Iroquois and the missions is vividly told in "The Champlain Road," by Franklin Davy McDowell, which deals with that section in Upper Canada known then as "Huronia," Fort Ste. Marie was the largest of the missions.

OLD CITY

The picture of Quebec, which was settled by Champlain and De Monts in 1608, showed the old City with its narrow streets, and early houses, but later, the new city, with better homes. Also the rivers and lakes with their winding courses, and wide expanse of waters, with the exchanging forests, were very lovely.

The second portion of the presentation, beginning with the English colony at Virginia, in 1607, and the Pilgrim Fathers' settlement at Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1620, the sixth or seventh day is the crucial day, when even more than the throat scab should be healed enough to come off.

SISTERS ALL

BAD TONSILS

Taking a youngster's tonsils out today is given serious consideration by doctors and throat surgeons before an operation is recommended.

We found that out yesterday when the doctor advised a tonsil operation for our three-year-old daughter. In our grandmother's day tonsils were not removed. In our mother's time, they were removed if they looked infected.

But back then, there weren't as many germs floating around in the rural areas as there are today in over-crowded settlements and large schools. Then too, those children who did get serious infections died by the hundreds. This is evident when you scan the date lines or tombstones in old cemeteries.

In our own day, a youngster with badly infected tonsils was hoisted up onto the dining room table and his tonsils cut out. The family physician while father held a chloroformed cotton swab over the child's nose.

GREATER CARE

Greater care is taken in the tonsillectomy with our children these days. They are taken to hospital for tonsil operations whenever possible. The surgeon has the facilities of a modern operating room and trained nurses and a special anaesthetist. Danger of infection is almost nil. The child is frequently kept in hospital two nights and one day, so that the condition may be watched closely.

It is generally agreed by throat surgeons and paediatricians now that tonsils should be removed when chronically infected and especially if high fever accompanying the infection or convulsions in the child.

NO PARTICULAR AGE

It is important that the operation not be performed until the child's temperature is normal. There is no particular age for tonsillectomies. Tonsils are removed from babies a few months old, young children and adults, whenever they become a menace to health. Of course, there should be no trouble, they should be left alone.

Such cool foods are fed to the child after a tonsillectomy to prevent injury to the throat. The sixth or seventh day is the crucial day, when even more than the throat scab should be healed enough to come off.

The doctor's office is no need to worry about the child becoming afraid of the operating room because he is given a sedative by needle a few hours before he leaves his ward.

Old Christmas Cards Sent To Schools

TORONTO (CP)—What happens to last year's Christmas cards? Mrs. Fern Oxley of Toronto sends them to out-of-the-way schools in Canada.

It began when Mr. Oxley and her husband had the idea of sending out colorful reproductions of scenes from their travel business to rural schools. Soon teachers were asking for pictures and the Oxleys had to find a new source of supply.

Mrs. Oxley wrote to the Toronto Globe and Mail asking readers for old editions of Christmas cards. She was deluged with more than 100 bundles of cards varying from a parcel of 40 to a carton containing 1,000. Now she suggests that readers send their cards direct to certain schools for which she gives addresses.

Queen, Duke Start Monday On Round-the-World Trip

By VALERY GIBSON

LONDON (AP)—The Queen will leave the fogs of Britain Monday night for sunny southern islands and a trip around the world.

The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will be away six months on a trip designed to give thousands of her subjects a glimpse of their Commonwealth queen. It will be the first time a British sovereign has made an around-the-world tour.

Inevitably, parts of the trip will take on all the pageantry of Royal occasions. There will be receptions, investitures, lord mayor banquets, civic welcomes, state banquets. But the Royal couple, who love to travel, will also have time for sightseeing.

FAREWELL AT GANDER

They leave London Monday night in the stratocruiser Canopus, piloted by Capt. Anthony Loraine. They will fly through the night via Gander, Nfld., to Bermuda where they are due at 10 a. m. Tuesday. The next day they fly on to Jamaica. There the Queen will open a road cut through swamps to connect Kingston and Montego Bay.

At Kingston the Royal couple will board the royal yacht Britannia, converted for royal use.

After Jamaica comes a 17-day sail via the Panama canal to the island of Fiji. There the Queen will receive ancient ceremonies of welcome. Then to Tonga, World War islanders and be presented with whales' teeth, the most prized article of ceremonial usage.

VISIT QUEEN SALOTE

Their next call will be at the Tonga islands. Here they will be greeted by Queen Salote, the only other ruling queen in the British Empire.

From Tonga they will sail to Auckland, northernmost city of New Zealand, where they will spend Christmas. On Christmas Day the Queen will make the sovereign's traditional broadcast.

The couple will spend a month in New Zealand, touring the North and South islands by road, rail and air, visiting the dairy and sheep farms, the towns and Maori settlements. The most formal occasion will be Jan. 12, when the Queen drives to a state opening of Parliament.

The Queen and the duke arrive in Australia Feb. 3 to spend two months. They will travel 19,000 miles, mostly by air. Every minute has been planned. In some places even the length of time it will take the Queen to walk down the steps from the plane. Here again the most ceremonial occasion will be the state opening of Parliament Feb. 15.

The duke will spend a day at the Woomera rocket range where atomic experiments are carried out.

11 DAYS IN CEYLON

The party leaves Australia in the Coral islands of the Cocos in the Indian ocean and flies among the tea and rubber plantations of Ceylon. After a six-day visit to the protectorate of Aden, they will fly south on a quick trip to Uganda in Africa. They will take off April 30 to Tobruk in North Africa, site of the heroic stand in the Second World War.

There the new Royal yacht, Britannia, will be waiting for the closing days of the journey through the Mediterranean. The final calls will be at Malta, where the Queen stayed several times when her husband was a serving naval officer, and Gibraltar.

They leave Gibraltar May 11 and sail up the Thames to London four days later, May 15.

Spinning Wheel Soon an Oddity

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The spinning wheel, standard household equipment a few years ago in all rural settlements, now is a rarity and soon will be an oddity.

Newfoundland women who spend many winter evenings carding, spinning and knitting wool, have laid aside the wheel. Now they send the wool to Maritime and Quebec knitting mills where it is turned into yarn, blankets and rugs at attractive prices.

In a few years home spinning operations are expected to be extinct.

Readers' Saturday Column

By Mary Moore

QUESTION:

I would appreciate your help in regards to refreshments for a Christmas party of which I was made convenor with twelve other on the committee. Sandwiches are always welcome, especially when a man are present. Last year we had pork barbecue and cake and ice cream, but maybe you would have some other suggestions, especially the first course. Could you give recipes in a variety of sandwiches if we should decide on them?— Mrs. M. C.

ANSWER:

Have you considered buying assorted cold cuts, arranging them attractively on platters, providing sliced assorted bread and relishes and letting the guests make up their own sandwiches? Men particularly enjoy this.

To enlarge on it I would buy both the well-known and popular cold meats such as liver and Polish sausage and would include the highly flavored meats to be bought at high-class delicatessens. These are thinly sliced sent so a little will go a long way even if they are expensive. Have dills, and olives and sweet pickles and celery hearts too. Or you might like to have less meat and provide three or four varieties of fancy cheeses. Something which is always popular are loaves of French bread which have been sliced into 1-inch slices but not right through the loaf. Leave the loaf in its original shape. Then spread between the slices with 1-2 lb. melted butter, using a pastry brush to spread the butter. You have to pry the slices apart to do this brushing. Then you wrap the loaf in parchment paper and put it in the oven at 375 deg. Fahr. for about 15 or 20 minutes to heat through. Every scrap of this will be gone. What would you think of serving rich cherry ice cream and thick shortbread for dessert? You still have time to write to me again if I have suggested something you want in more detail.

QUESTION:

I have used lots of your recipes successfully. I accidentally destroyed the one for crushed pineapple pie that appeared a short time ago. Would you please send it to me? The Money Dream Bars sound good and as I am having a tea party in two weeks would like to serve them, but I think the amount of honey has been omitted. . . . I am interested in candies that travel well at Christmas time. If you could send me a couple I would appreciate it.—Ruth S.

ANSWER:

The amount of honey in the Honey Dream Bars is 1-3 cup. Thank you for bringing this omission to my attention. I have mailed you the recipe for Crushed Pineapple Pie.

MINCEMEAT COOKIES

(Good travellers.)

The cup mincemeat that is not too moist (the texture of canned mincemeat is just right), 3 1-3 cup sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon baking soda, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon powdered instant coffee, 1 cup soft shortening (room temperature), 2 well-packed cups brown sugar, 2 eggs. Sift together sifted flour baking soda, salt and instant coffee. Mix the shortening with the sugar until creamy. Beat the eggs into them, then the mincemeat, then the flour mixture. Drop by teaspoons 2 inches apart on greased cookie sheet. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for about 12 minutes or until delicately browned. These are perfect for lunch boxes. If you like icing to pack them for mailing wrap each cookie in a small square of wax paper.

SWEDISH NUT BARS

These are unusual because they contain no flour, actually more of a confection than a cookie, but they keep well.

Beat the yolks of 4 eggs until they are triple the volume—about 8 to 10 minutes if rotary beater. Add 1 1-4 cups sugar very slowly while beating—about another 5 to 10 minutes. Slowly fold in 1-2 cups walnuts; meats that have been ground in fine blade of food chopper, and 1 teaspoon almond extract. Beat 4 egg whites, until stiff but not dry. Fold into yolk mixture. Pour into greased and paper-lined pan 9x9x2 inches. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. 1 hour. Cool 10 minutes, then turn out, remove paper. Cool. Cut.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"PLEASE, GOD, DON'T LET ME LIVE TOO LONG!"

Just one more letter of comment about our friend, the complaining mother-in-law who should have been in a concentration camp years ago, and then we'll say no more about her.

The only reason I'm bringing her up again is because the letter I am going to quote has a note of sadness and appreciation in it that reflects the feelings of a great many women as they grow older, and perhaps something might be said that would make her—and them—feel a little more cheerful.

"About the old lady living with her daughter-in-law," the letter begins.

"It is such a pity that sometimes people live too long. I have always prayed, 'Please, God, don't let me live till I am a burden to somebody.'

"We will all get old some time, and I wonder how easy we will be to live with then. There is nothing that makes anyone so hard to live with as to have to live where they are not loved and not wanted. I do not like this word 'senile' that is used in connection with old people. It sounds too much like 'feebleminded' and too often old people are treated as though they were feebleminded.

"Yes, I am old, but not so old that I can't take care of myself and my husband and house and do quite a lot for my grandchildren, and I certainly hope I will not live to be really old and ugly.

I doubt very much if the writer of this letter will ever live to wear her family out. No matter how old she may live to be, I do not believe she is ever going to be "a burden to somebody," as she prays she may not.

OTHERS BEFORE SELF

And the reason I feel this way is simply because she sounds like a person who puts the welfare of others before her own, and a person with that approach to life is never going to be unloved or unwanted. On the contrary, if she should become sick or helpless, her children will feel it their privilege to take care of her, regarding it as their chance to repay her for all the loving care she must have done for them as long as she was able.

It is the individual's disposition and attitude that determines whether he or she is a burden or not. If an aged man or woman is demanding, complaining and disagreeable, he or she will be a problem burden for anyone to bear. On the other hand, if they are considerate of others, cheerful and unselfish, they will be loved.

This subject came up recently at a friend's home one evening, and as someone was telling about an old woman who was divided by the young members of her family almost out of their minds by her eccentricities and ways.

"I wonder," said one of those present, "if, when we get old, we'll remember not to be that way. Or do you suppose being like that is just a part of old age and can't be helped?"

Somebody else spoke up then and said: "No, I don't think things have to be that way. What I think is that when people get old, they're just the kind of people they always were, only more so. If they were self-centered and cranky and inconsiderate when they were young-er, they'll grow worse as they grow old. But if they've been the other kind, always thoughtful of others and sweet-tempered, they'll be even nicer as the years go on."

That is what I believe, too, and I think it's something to keep in mind no matter how old, or how young, any of us may be.

Let's make it very simple and put it this way: If we tend to be mean-spirited, irritable and selfish in our family circle right now, we'll be worse years hence and nobody will want us around. On the other hand, we're a joy to our family and friends at present, they'll want us always with them and never consider us a burden.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECHMAN

SHE MUST HAVE HIS DAUGHTER'S INVITATION FIRST.

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

I am a widower, forty-one years of age. A widower, of about the same age, has invited me to come to visit him at his daughter's house. He lives with his daughter (divorced) and her two children. I met this widower two years ago, at our church, and we knew each other very well until he went to live with his daughter several months ago. I feel very self-conscious in accepting his invitation, because I think his daughter should make some gesture, by note or telephone, as to my coming. However, I don't want to seem prudish about suggesting this invitation from her.

Since, as I judge, he is living in his daughter's house, also, as hostess, should send you a personal invitation, either by note or by telephone. It would be sensible, not at all "prudish", for you to suggest to your friend that you would first like to be assured by his daughter that your coming would be convenient to her. It would certainly be strange, undignified and unsuitable, for you to arrive at her house without a direct invitation from her.

CALLING CARDS WITH CHRISTMAS CARDS?

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

As a birthday present this year, an aunt of mine, very fortunately, generously gave me a box of handsomely-engraved calling cards with matching envelopes. I have very little use for such formal cards, and I am wondering if it would be correct for me to enclose these cards with some of my Christmas cards this year, the cards to be very-simply worded. That of course I would not sign my Christmas cards.—Dorothy C.

No, please don't do this. I would take away from your fashionable cards the warm and informal personality they should have. Your friends, even those on not-very-close, would have no pleasure in receiving such a cold, lady-formal cards-enclosed. (Very occasionally a business firm or a professional organization encloses engraved paste-cards with their Christmas cards . . . but these haven't the personal intention that social greeting cards should have.)

SHE SHOULD BUY FOUR TICKETS.

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

Next month my school is giving a musical dance, and we students are allowed to invite guests. I have invited a boy from out-of-town, whom I know very well indeed, and I am thinking of asking him if he would like to have me invite a friend of his, whom I also know and am "keen" about, as a friend. Of course I know I should pay for the two tickets for my boy friend and myself. But must I also buy the tickets for the other

HER MOTHER AT HER HUSBAND'S RIGHT.

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

My mother has just come to live with my husband and me. Where should her place at table be, at my right or my husband's right? And whom should my husband serve first?—Marie S.

Your mother should be seated at the right of your husband, the host your hostess. And she should be served first. (The hostess should never be served first when there is another woman at the table.)

Beauty

By HELEN JAMESON

PERFECT GROOMING RINGS IN THE BEAUTY BELL.

No matter how much money a woman spends on her clothes, if she is not dainty, fastidious about appearance and fussy about grooming, her sartorial glories don't mean a thing.

Smart appearance consists not only of attractive attire, becoming and in good taste, but in that fresh, clean, immaculate look that makes a woman really stunning. Such a woman's make-up is put on with care, her coiffure is not only of the mode, but not a single hair is ever out of place. She has grace of manner and movement. She looks the lady. A good old-fashioned word that we don't hear very often these days.

The woman who is inclined to be careless when dressing can be recognized on several counts. Sometimes it is her skirt placket that is not zipped the entire length. The shoulder straps of her slip may show. Worse than that, of course, is the hem of a slip showing beneath the hem of the skirt.

Slips should be carefully fitted so they won't cause creases in the fitted skirt or the form-fitting frock. Seldom is or doubt it, but there are some well-groomed women so fussy that they even have their panties made to order.

Neckwear, handkerchiefs and gloves must be spotless. Purses should be tidy. How often you see a woman, pawing in her bag for a compact, revealing very messy contents. The run-over heel is a sin against good grooming. And all women are as particular as they might be about keeping leather soles shined. As for zigzag stocking seams, you see them every day. And, when it's so easy to straighten them out, why?

Rangers Will Use Youngest Line Ever To Perform In National League

McCreary, Bathgate, Murphy From Guelph's Farm Club To Be Reunited for One Game

By ED SIMON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The miseries have returned to Max Bentley's back.

New York Rangers' stock-haired stick-handling master from Delta Sask., enjoying a fine comeback after the aching back sent him into premature retirement last spring when he was with Toronto Maple Leafs, suffered twinges of the old complaint Friday.

Although x-rays indicated no severe damage, coach Frank Boucher decided to give his 33-year-old spark-plug centre the night off for the Rangers' Saturday fixture against the Maple Leafs in Toronto, hoping a how him back in peak form against Detroit Red Wings in New York Sunday night.

In his place, Boucher will play Billy McCreary, a high-scoring 19-year-old from Guelph Biltmores in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league.

Up for a one-game trial, he will be reunited with two former teammates from the Rangers' Guelph farm club, 21-year-old Andy Bathgate and 20-year-old Wally Murphy. The three will form one of the youngest lines in the annals of the National Hockey League.

Injuries will force Boucher into other juggling acts with his five first-place Rangers. Aldo Guidolin a fine defenceman might even make his first appearance as a defenceman.

The six-foot, 180-pounder made his in for Bob Chrystal, out with a bruised thigh. Boucher says Camille Henry, nursing a bruised heel, is expected to start.

HARE MEET DETROIT

In another Saturday-night tilt, the leading Montreal Canadiens face Detroit Red Wings in an effort to protect their five-point lead over the second-placers.

The Leafs, another two points back at Toronto, have a tough one for fourth-place Boston out to a relentless pace. Saturday night when the Bruins whipped Chicago Black Hawks 3-0.

In Sunday activity, the Leafs tackle the last-place Hawks at Chicago while the Canadiens visit Boston and the Rangers meet Detroit.

Boston's victory over the Hawks gave goalie Sugar Jim Henry a chance to post his first shutout and matched him partner for the first time since he broke into the NHL 13 years ago. Leo Labbe and Frankie Eddolls scored the Bruin goals in the second period.

Mrs. Keele Henry made the trip from Winnipeg 13 years ago and never saw rock up his third shutout of the campaign.

TORONTO (CP)—Veteran right winger Howie Meeker has been called up to lend a hand to the injury-riddled Toronto Maple Leafs in National Hockey League action this week-end.

Assistant Manager Clarence (Hap) Day said Meeker will play against New York Rangers at Toronto tonight and against the Black Hawks at Chicago Sunday night.

Meeker is coaching Stratford Indians of the Ontario Hockey Association senior A series with the understanding he is available when the Leafs need him. The move came because of injuries to two right wingers—Bob Bailey in a game at Montreal Thursday night and George Armstrong in a practice Wednesday.

Day said Bob Solinger would stay with the Leafs for the week-end. Freyman Hall also will go to Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League as a replacement for Earl Balfour, called up to the parent Leafs, and Bob Sabourin of Ottawa Senators of the Quebec Hockey League will join Hornets.

Game Bird Management

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
(Noted sportsman, author and creator of Science Tables.)

The commissioner was sitting at a table, over in the corner. It was at a party and, with some mild stimulation under his belt, he was in an expansive mood. I figured that it might be a good time to talk to him about the drastic restrictions placed on our grouse shooting.

It was the second season after the typical sudden cyclic decline in our grouse population. Birds were scarce and our activities with dog and gun were seriously curtailed. Having had considerable conversation and correspondence with the top grouse men of the country, I knew that these restrictions were wrong.

"Look," said the commissioner, regarding me with a tolerant smile as though I were a retarded pupil in the fourth grade, "it's like this; you see a grouse in the woods. You shoot the grouse. Then we have one less grouse in the woods. It's just as simple as that."

LIMITING FACTOR

"Quite true," I replied, "but the biologists tell us that the gun is not a limiting factor in grouse populations. In setting the season this year, have you and your associates talked to any of our ornithologists?"

"Biologists," said the commissioner. "Theory, pure theory. I've hunted grouse all my life. I don't need any of those fellows to tell me that one grouse shot is one less grouse. Of course we haven't, consulted any of them. We know what we're doing."

And that was that. Our shooting restrictions remained unchanged. We, who wanted to hunt grouse, were called game hogs. Protests and explanations were of no avail. The commissioners knew what they were doing.

COMPLEX BUSINESS

Grouse management, or any bird management, is an extraordinarily complex business. Nature has a way of running things to suit herself and the game technicians are learning much about her natural laws. Both birds can stand gun pressure and some can't. The ruffed grouse definitely can.

Intensive studies have shown quite conclusively that grouse cover can support only one bird to each acre. During the years of plenty, we frequently go into the shooting season with many more birds than that one-to-four ratio.

Whether we shoot off the surplus or not, when the breeding season comes around we find that no more than one bird to every four acres has survived the winter. During the lean years of the cycle the ratio is apt to be three-or-four-to-one.

Naturally, we hunt grouse where we find them in the quantity. We can gun those concentrations out and by our heavy harvest and we are not endangering the supply of birds for future years in the slightest degree. But try, sometime, to explain that to a commissioner.

BALANCE UPSET

What with lumbering, land clearance, and too many deer in most of our grouse states, the basic balance between bird supply and food-and-cover supply has been seriously upset. Thus, the management problem becomes acute. Depend upon it, you can not have birds unless you provide for them a safe place to live and an adequate supply of food.

When grouse cover grows too tall; when excess deer browse off the undergrowth on the forest floor; when natural cover is thereby reduced; then your grouse supply is reduced in proportion. Shoot them or not, the basic bird supply depends completely on food and cover.

Jim Reed of the Missouri Conservation Commission, gives us some interesting figures on the bird's fall in his state. In 1939 there are about two million birds, most of them ready to nest. Say one half are hens.

16 MILLION EGGS

These hens lay about sixteen million eggs, but only ten million will hatch. When November arrives, four of that ten million chicks will have vanished. Loss or things happen to a young quail weather, disease, sickness and predation take heavy toll.

Adult mortality, for various causes, has been quite constant while, so that November finds us with eight million birds in the covers. Then the mighty hunter the stage for action. He's as he will, with trained dogs and good guns and ammunition, he will account for something around five million birds, possibly a little more. That is about the way the figures work themselves out.

By the first of January, less than four million quail are left in the covers. From then until May about 50 per cent of these will disappear. Although many things can happen in a year, mostly this shrinkage can be accounted for by food shortage and cover deficiency.

TWO MILLION BIRDS

By the time the nest season arrives, quail populations will have leveled off at around two million, the starting point of, roughly, two million birds. Then the cycle once is repeated. The statewide range will support birds only as well as the food-and-cover supply will allow.

The quail hunters spend much time and effort, urging the farmers to leave corn in the fence line. Seed is provided for feed plots here and there. Some farmers co-operate; some do not. The bird supply is governed almost exactly by this co-operation in the farming states.

Stocking does help the problem in some areas. Shooting in areas where the birds, for one reason or another, have been cleaned out. Burned-over areas are good examples. These introduced birds remedy the deficiency.

When the bird supply is scanty, many of the Mimrods blame the shortage on predators, usually foxes. Nonsense. We have always had foxes and we always will have. Regardless of the astute comments or the arm-chair and theoretical experts the game is governed by the age-old law of supply and demand. Five economy, the state and federal biologists are doing a swell job. How about letting these fellows do their work without applying the numerous additional burden of unsound criticism?

Three Former Major Leaguers Were Honored

TORONTO (CP)—Three former major-league players, among a group of Canadian baseball players honored by the Toronto Oldtimers Baseball Association here last night.

Phil Marchildon, former pitcher with the American League Philadelphia Athletics, Goody Rosen, one-time outfield great with Brooklyn Dodgers of the National League and Frank Colman of London, Ont., who now is with Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League and who previously saw action with the National League Pittsburgh Pirates and the American League New York Yankees were the three Canadian-born players who had once played in the big leagues.

Lakeshore Flyers Looking For First Title

MONTREAL (CP) — The Dominion Intermediate hockey championship will be decided today when Fort William Redskins and Lakeshore Flyers meet in a sudden-death final at Molson stadium.

The Flyers won out to bring Montreal its first championship in 23 years, while the Redskins came to keep the Percy Robinson memorial trophy in the west and take it home to Fort William after a four years' absence.

Both coaches expect their teams ready for the first official East-West final, but a stew involving sweater colors is in the making.

Flyers and Redskins wore red jerseys all season and neither is anxious to change. The Canadian Rugby Football Union ruled earlier the Fort William squad should change. The ruling hasn't stopped the protests.

COMMON COURTESY

Lakeshore claims the Redskins sent them over here and it doesn't matter what colors they wear. The Redskin counter with: It's a matter of common courtesy for the home team to change when such a situation arises.

The Fort William team, which took over the sweater duties from the defending Dominion champs, Notre Dame de Grace, has a strong aerial attack.

The Flyers, however, have shown a powerful pass defence in recent games, particularly against the Pacific Coast champs in the battle for the eastern crown.

Owen Sound Mercurys Suffer Worst Defeat Since 1949

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Owen Sound Mercurys, who finished on top of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A league last year with only 11 losses to be heading for a much poorer fate this year.

The Mercurys lost their sixth game last night—an 11-3 trouncing by the Indians in Stratford. It was their worst defeat since Owen Sound joined the Senior A loop. In other games Kitchener and Chatham Marcons were shoved out of first place in the standings by dropping a 5-3 home-ice decision to Windsor Bulldogs. The victory vaulted the Bulldogs into a two-way tie for the top rung. Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen, who edged the Tigers 4-3 in Hamilton, own the other half of the first berth.

In Niagara Falls, the last-place Cataracts made a successful start under a new coach and defeated Sarnia Sailors 3-1. The victory moved the Cataracts to within two points of the seventh-place Sailors.

SUDBURY WINS

The league-leading Sudbury Wolves squeezed out a 2-1 victory over Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds in the opener action of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series. The game was played in Sudbury.

Jerry Toberge, Jack McKenzie, Don Rope and Ken Laufman shared the scoring for the Dutchmen against Hamilton. Roy Aldridge and Jack Taylor were the marksmen for the Tigers.

Ted Pietsch had a field day while Stratford Indians bombing Owen Sound. He fired three goals. Other scorers for the Indians were Don Oberholtzer and Bob Mader, who each clicked twice, Keith Tolios, Herve Dejordy and Gerry Price. Gerry Reid saved the Mercurys from a shutout.

Gord Hajdu bagged two goals and assisted on another pair to help Windsor send Chatham down to a two-way tie for third place with Stratford Indians. Wally Kuhlman, Bob Hayes and Alex Birukow notched the other goals for the Bulldogs. Joe Carveth, Frank Bonello and Bill Lee countered for the Maroons.

Playing under the command of acting-coach Norm Tustin, Niagara Falls won their third victory in their 15 games this season. Ted Fontaine opened the scoring for Niagara Falls. Nick Fotiu made it in the third and Sandy Air sailed it away with a goal apiece from a prone position on the ice.

AVERTS WHITEWASH

Don Savage bagged the sole counter for the winless Sailors.

Andy Milne's third-period marker gave Sudbury its victory over the Greyhounds. Yogi Kraemer got it for Sault Ste. Mario after Jim Johnston had sent the Wolves into a 1-0 first-period lead.

Hamilton is at Sarnia, Windsor at Owen Sound and Niagara Falls at Kitchener in the OHA circuit tonight.

North Bay Trappers go to Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds and the Wolves to Pembroke Lumber Kings in the NOHA Saturday. The Trappers play the Indians in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., in the only Sunday game.

Coach Walker Says Als Likely To Come as Far as They Did

Brother Act Helps Teepees Keep on Top

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — Douglas (Peahead) Walker, 2-a man not given to bouquets but capable of forthright facing of facts, thinks his Montreal Alouettes "are lucky to come as far as we did."

The silver-haired coach isn't deeply pessimistic over Sunday's Eastern Final at Alouettes and Hamilton Tiger-Cats. His team took a 37-13 pasting in Hamilton Wednesday and another loss for the Als in this best-of-three series will mean the 11-game Big Four Cup final.

Walker said Alouette injuries are not phoebes. The club has gone along with sportsmanlike work or team spirit, "but that can't last forever." The situation is "getting beyond a question of physical ability."

Als were hit early in the season with the loss of tackle Jim Staton. Then, Oct. 18, Walker's second ace tackle, Tex Coulter, suffered a broken ankle. That was the start of the injury crisis.

COULTER MAY PLAY

It is possible Coulter, working out on artificial turf, may play but may get into Sunday's battle. But he won't be in top shape. Halfback will guard Ray Cicia nor end Jim Miller.

Walker must also decide whether to use players who are "50 per cent physically" with teams who are okay.

The Ti-Cats, too, have injured but playable talent. Walker didn't think either the Als or Ti-Cats will be in good shape for the Big Four Cup game. He suggested, also, that the Big Four league's playoffs are "too late and too long."

The playoff schedule, if it goes the limit, calls for Wednesday-Sunday-Wednesday games. Als will wear the sparkling for the Hawks. Pete Kowalchuk, Ike Lalonde and Eddie Switzer added singles.

Jim Robertson and Ross Hudson shared the Barrie output.

Buddy Horne slapped in two goals for Hamilton, one into an empty net, in the dying minutes of the game against Hamilton. Bruce Jones, Beryl Klinck and Greig Hicks scored the others. Gord Mitchell and Gord Burton did the scoring for Hamilton.

Hamilton now heads to the Orenshirts tonight while Toronto Marlboros are in Barrie and St. Catharines and Toronto St. Michael's College Majors at Queen Elizabeth Gardens tonight in OHA activity.

Sunday games will have Guelph playing Marlboros and Hamilton meeting St. Michael's in a Toronto doubleheader.

Dulmage Says Trafton Looks Like 'Dead Duck' Even in Win

TORONTO (CP)—The Telegram said Friday in a dispatch from the Winnipeg scene of staff writer George Dulmage that "even if Winnipeg Blue Bombers win the Grey Cup, George Trafton looks like a dead duck as a coach in this football-mad city."

Dulmage added:

"The job of Trafton and his future is almost as incessant among the fans as the talk of the chances of the Bombers to win the Canadian classic at (Toronto) Varsity Stadium Dec. 5.

"Some say that if Trafton's team wins the Cup he will only save his job for 1954. There are many others who say that even that, Grey Cup hoopers or no, Trafton is definitely out.

"And more if he should not executive members who thought slow his club against the Bomber at the Grey Cup."

"Trafton will be in charge of the club here Saturday and if Bombers win, he'll be in charge of the club executive before the Grey Cup, the said executive has plans to keep him on as coach. In fact, have been made to take care of but such a case.

"Bert Warwick, long-time Bomber associate, booster and Reg Threlfall, assistant coach in Major football days in Winnipeg will be called in to take over if Trafton overplays his hand. . . .

Dulmage said Trafton was considered by Ralph Misener, former Bomber president, to put Indian Jack Jacobs in at quarter in place of Joe Kaleski after half-time in the last game of the western conference final at Edmonton last Saturday night "and this was done.

"Trafton said he had fended off most of his time got here with his friends."

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—Tris Speaker, one of the athletes outlaid greats, thinks that Jimmy Dykes, Baltimore's new manager, is making a big mistake in throwing away his golf clubs.

The Grey Eagle points out that he managed the fairways almost daily in the years he was player-manager at Cleveland, and that he posted his best batting averages after he took up the game. He encouraged his team to golf regularly, too.

Did he think the game hurt his baseball swing, as many managers do today? No, Tris says, he batted lefthanded, golfed right. They had no lefty clubs to rent the first time he went out to play.

CONFIDENT, GREY ALLOUT.

The latest reason we see compounded for Baltimore's failure to retain Marty Marion as manager, is the supposed fact that Marty couldn't get along with Satchel Page and wanted to get rid of the colored Negro hurler.

On the other hand, says this account, the new owners feel that Satch will be a big attraction in Baltimore and are anxious to talk him out of baseball to retire.

Marion was said to have insisted that Paige train and keep his spindly legs in shape, like any other pitcher. Satch resented it, saying "I'll pitch the way man who lets my legs alone."

HERBIE RUBLOW

God, sir, the USGA is absolutely right in warning its members that they had better cease and desist from playing with the smaller British ball which some character has been boosting in the U.S.

The mere fact that most of our players were there by experience with the more lively again on the other side of the pond. The bonus brand is no excuse for flouting the will of our custodians. After all, we have a favored few playing the game merely for pleasure.

Berth in Grey Cup Final Goes On Line Today

WINNIPEG (CP)—A berth in the Grey Cup final goes on the line at Winnipeg Stadium today.

The home roots between Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Western Canada champions, and the undefeated Toronto Beaches, champions of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, for the winner plays the eastern Big Four champions in Toronto next Saturday in the East-West football classic.

Bombers are odds-on favorites to eliminate the winners of the ORFU, whose champions in the western finals last night had edged Edmonton 7-6.

The Beaches, too, have injured but playable talent. Walker didn't think either the Als or Ti-Cats will be in good shape for the Grey Cup game. He suggested, also, that the Big Four league's playoffs are "too late and too long."

The playoff schedule, if it goes the limit, calls for Wednesday-Sunday-Wednesday games. Als will wear the sparkling for the Hawks. Pete Kowalchuk, Ike Lalonde and Eddie Switzer added singles.

His co-pilot, Giuseppe Scozzai, was killed after the Ferrari blew a tire and overturned.

Phil Hill of Santa Monica, Cal., and his co-driver escaped injury when their Ferrari turned over on the second day Friday, about 31 miles from Mexico City.

Four spectators also were killed Thursday when they were hit by a car careening out of a turn.

The Lancia team, led by Italy's Piero Taruffi and Felice Bonetto, finished one-two in record-breaking fashion in both laps Friday while the Lincoln Capri team, paced by Chuck Stevenson of Millwaukee and Johnny Mantz of Los Angeles, captured the first four positions in each lap, just as it did Thursday on the opening lap.

they could run the football club better than he could. He also had feuded with newspaper men and broadcasters . . .

At Winnipeg, Bomber President Earl Nicholson said only:

"Trafton will be in charge of the club here Saturday and if Bombers win, he'll be in charge of the club

Prospects Good For Junior Final At Saskatoon

SASKATOON (CP)—Two junior football teams with imposing records clash today for the Canadian title.

Windsor AKO, defending champions, carry a two-year unbeaten record into their scheduled 60th meeting with Saskatoon Hilltops.

Windsor scored 347 points and yielded 39 in winning their eight games this season.

Hilltops, who have won the championship of the Manitoba-Saskatchewan League every season since the club was organized in 1948, scored 477 points and gave up 97 in their 11 scheduled and playoff games this year. Their most impressive victory was a 30-6 conquest of the Big Four Vancouver Blue Bombers in the Western Canada final.

Nova Scotia Has Harnessed All Resources

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia has harnessed almost all its water power resources.

J. D. Sullivan, president of the Nova Scotia Light and Power Co., says all economically feasible hydro-electric power sites have been developed. From now on the industrial province will get most power will be met by additional steam plants.

Both the company and the government - financed Nova Scotia Power Commission have put in steam turbines to supply electricity. The commission recently operate the bulk of Nova Scotia's power production.

NSLP generates 85 per cent of its power by coal-fired steam turbines. Its peak load is handled yearly. By 1954 it probably will be two-thirds.

This month the company got up steam in a new Trenton generating station on the Halifax waterfront.

Nova Scotia Light and Power pays $12 a ton for Cape Breton coal and says it's cheaper to run power plant by boat.

Mr. Sayes said coal is 50 per cent of the operating cost and he hopes to get a lower price.

Mr. Sullivan said a link in electric-power plants as a great potential market that will help revitalize their ailing industry in the next 10 or 15 years.

PEE WEE.

In the first game of the three in the Pee Wee league played at the rink this morning the Bruins led by Jack Boulter with three goals, downed the Red Wings 4-0. Stan Day hit the prize for the losers, while Walter Wicket got a goal and Terry Kelly was credited with an assist on the winning team.

The second game ended with a 4-2 victory for the Black Hawks over the Rangers. George Coe and Dennis Sinclair each had a goal and assist for the Black Hawks while Donald Skinner and David Bean got the others. Bean's goal was a clean break away and he made no mistake as he beat the goalie on a close in shot to the corner. David Dies got the Rangers first marker, while Billy Lettersen banged in one near the close of the game.

The Maple Leafs took an early lead in their game with the Canadiens with goals by Larry Tyrrison and one by Brian Lang. Bobby Coe and Jones potted one for the Canadiens. Larry Brewbutton, from Whitefield completed the scoring just before the end of the game with the final score 3-2 for the Leafs.

Reciprocity Club Honors Mack's 91st Birthday

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—For the 91st time a birthday cake was cut, candled and then eaten in honor of Connie Mack, the fabulous figure of baseball. But Connie, who weighed a pound for each candle, made the biggest fuss over the cake. The congratulations came from another famous sportsman—President Eisenhower.

Connie, once manager of Philadelphia Athletics and now president of the club, will observe his 91st anniversary on the actual birthday—Dec. 23.

But members of the Reciprocity Club have decided that Connie should have an old-fashioned Philadelphia observance of the big day and since Connie will be in California or Florida next month they decided on Thursday night.

Upswing in Theatre Business Shows No Sign of Easing Off

By GLENDE CURRIE

LONDON (Reuters)—Business is booming for London's theatre box offices. A continued upswing in receipts since the Second World War shows little signs of easing off.

Many theatres are leery of talking about money but a reliable guide is the business done by ticket agencies.

Col. Campbell Williams, managing director of the city's biggest agency (Keith Prowse and Co.) says: "In 25 years of the trade, I've never seen anything like it." He says his agency expects to grost £1,000,000 this year for the first time.

Williams says several things largely contributed to the continued improvement.

STANDARD IS HIGH

1. The standard of plays in London is high, largely because audiences are becoming more discriminating.

2. "Theatre-going is comparatively cheap here. Seat prices have increased only slightly over prewar, whereas nearly everything else is about 3½ times as expensive." (There are few seats in London costing more than $3.)

3. A wide new audience has appeared since the war, when many theatres were forced to close and is eager for escapist entertainment.

4. The early curtain times in force since the war, 7:30 p.m. in many theatres, have proved popular among commuters and suburbanites, who make up a large part of the "new audience."

Television drama here doubtless has stimulated interest in the theatre. Half-hour televised excerpts from London plays almost always mean increased crowds for those plays. And television is a boon to dramatists with some television plays becoming hits when transferred to the theatres.

In London there are about 30 established hits—shows which have run at least a year or certainly will run 12 months. Seven of these are originally from Broadway.

Four of these American offerings are musicals and three comedies.

The Kibitzer

About once each year somebody writes to tell me, "I was dealt a perfect hand of 13 spades." The announcement is made sincerely at the time. Each believes it actually happened in a duplicated deal.

Each such case investigated to date has located a hoax was pulled by some friend. Always there was some kind of an interruption during which somebody slipped in a void deck for the fun of it.

These pranksters are in a rut. Never do they frame a hand with 13 hearts or 13 diamonds or in clubs. Always 13 spades. Moronic as it might be, 13 of anything but spades would be a switch.

Early in our bridge career we wondered what good players would do with a hand containing 13 cards of one suit. We did something to find out. You may have read it in my columns nearly a decade ago.

We held a Hebe Jebes tournament for championship pairs only. It was called Hebe Jebes because all tables played prefixed hands that were very unusual; some of them nightmares.

One of the deals held the cards shown here:

	♥ None
	♦ K Q 10 5 3 2
	♣ A 8 7 6 4
WEST		EAST
♠ None		♠ 8 7 6
♥ A K Q J 10 9		♥ None
♦ 8 7 6 5		♦ J 9 8 7 6
♣ 5 3 2		♣ K Q 10 9
	SOUTH
	♠ A K Q J 10 4 3 2
	♥ None
	♣ Q J 10

Notice that the west hand holds nothing but 13 hearts. It is at a time when east is dealer and his side is vulnerable, while opponents are not. Such side has a grand slam in their own major suit.

Each pair knew in advance that every hand would contain some difficult problem in bidding or play of both. But no player knew in advance what the problem would be or what cards were where.

There was no telling in advance whether good bold power or a dud. There was no telling in advance whether your side would be the aggressors or defenders. Or whether a slam was to be avoided. What in table did to this hand would make stories enough to fill a book. I will tell you some of the happenings. What would you have done with this one? Get the hebe jebes?

SQUARE AND ROUND DANCES with WALT TAYLOR and his RHYTHM RANCH RIDERS

Air-Conditioned Tin

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The city fathers of Los Angeles aroused a teapot tempest over their claims that the show for the king and queen of Greece was in bad taste. It was the last straw for many performers who have donated their services for nothing.

Many of these stars have long given their talents to entertain visiting royalty. Film executives, state conventions, beauty contests and other such events. When they work for free and then get criticized, the performers naturally are peeved.

"Everyone else who works those affairs gets paid," argued one top performer. "The doormen, waiters, bus boys and musicians get their money. The entertainers get nothing but abuse. It ain't right."

It's going to be increasingly hard to obtain stars for any free shows but the most legitimate of charities.

Actually both sides were in the wrong in the Greek controversy. The politicos were ungrateful for all that free talent. And some of the performers failed to remember that the best entertainment is clean entertainment.

THE BIG SHOW

The fast and photographers turned a dandy ball for which dozens of stars gladly paid $20 a couple. The players realize that these boy can be their best friends or worst enemies.

Such get-ups you have never seen: Jeffrey Hunter and Barbara Rush came as a couple of ghouls from a Charles Addams cartoon. Vera-Ellen, in an obvious plug for "White Christmas," was attired in a white bathing suit bedecked with dozens of christmas balls. She even had Christmas tree bulbs and wax all lit up. Humphrey Bogart arrived late, disguised as Humphrey Bogart.

Joan Crawford wore a costume from her latest picture, natch. Robert Cummings was scarcely recognizable as a leopard, whiskers and all. Barbara Hutton, who did not be disguised, was wearing a low-cut gown. Tony Curtis and Janet Leigh, who perhaps are angling for the forthcoming picture, came as Tarzan and Jane.

Lots of pictures were taken, making everyone very happy.

FRANCE GETS HELP

SAIGON (AP)—French officials said today the New Zealand government has decided to give free military aid to French forces fighting the Communist-Vietminh in Indo-China. The aid will consist mainly of cannons, anti-aircraft weapons, ammunition, vehicles and other weapons New Zealand had previously received from the United States.

Your Individual Horoscope

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes, and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR SUNDAY, NOV. 22, 1953.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — There are happenings which confuse at times, or maybe just irritate or worry. These are part of life, however, and we must accept them as we do the benefits and gains. Pray, and have faith.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Pay heed to wise suggestions from elders, especially those in your family. Naturally you have your own opinions, but there are always things we can learn. Be honest in the little things.

May 21 to June 22 (Gemini) — Attention to details is always important. And that goes for the daily chores, daily habits, daily practices. Emphasize essentials and never put the material above the spiritual.

June 23 to July 22 (Cancer) — While you love your family dearly, you may occasionally and wholly unintentionally, find cause disagreeing with them. Try to avoid this; be silent when it can save useless bickering.

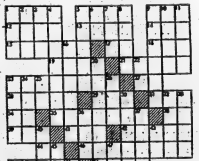
July 24 to August 22 (Leo) — All of us need a prodding at times. Do not wait to make needed reforms. Once the harm is done, or the gain is lost, it is too late. Be realistic now.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Try to relax today—but not to the point of complete inertia. Contribute to the pleasure and happiness of loved ones or associates by joining in their leisure activities. Pray.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—On the way you begin it depends whether your daily battle is won or lost. Church services start you off right. Later engage in wholesome recreation; extend hospitality to congenial companions.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Reason things out. Don't fret or let your naturally buoyant attitude and happy outlook be affected by disappointment or misunderstandings. Use logic; be philosophical; and pray.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Be happy with what you have, while aiming still higher. Heed wise counsel; be willing to listen patiently to others.



December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Manoeuvering deviously to gain monetary or other material assets which can bring you no real happiness could prove most harmful. Be alert to any such tendencies today. Your inherent honesty will help.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—You may be offered a new proposition or someone may suggest an entirely different procedure in your line of work. In either event, review carefully before accepting; then, if satisfied, take advantage of the opportunity.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Your progress today will depend largely upon yourself. Sound evaluations, thoughtful decisions and a determination to curb sensitiveness will be a big factor in achievement.

YOU BORN TODAY were born as Sun was leaving Scorpio, entering Sagittarius. You should have little difficulty making a mark for yourself in this world since you can overcome tremendous opposition and make greater strides than others when you put your best foot forward. Avoid a tendency toward sensitiveness and turn your zeal and energy to wholesome pursuits. Don't overwork; be skeptical of flattery.

Capital of Ancient Empire Revealed by Excavation

Boghaz Koi, capital of a mighty empire of the Hittites, discovered by Professor Hugo Winckler of Berlin, Germany, Persepolis, though in ruins, is revealing as a centre of art and architecture by archaeological excavations that have uncovered most of the ancient city. Centre of the Persian empire for 200 years, it was sacked and almost levelled by the soldiers of Alexander the Great in 331 B.C. and, since that time, until 1931, when excavations began, it was gradually covered by drifting sands and soil. This aerial view of the ruins shows it to be a walled city, terraced to fit into the terrain in which it was built. — Central Press Canadian.

Seals Taking Large Fish Toll In Labrador

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Seals are taking a large toll of fish in Labrador, and there may be a species of trout in the little-known territory that anglers have never seen.

These interesting reports were made by a federal survey team that visited Labrador's salmon rivers to learn what protective and conservation measures are necessary to protect the species.

The party found that harbor or bay seals—not the fur-bearing species—were eating a large number of small and large game fish. Other predators were merganzers, kingfishers and cormorants.

There now is a $10 bounty on seals.

Eskimos and white trappers in the Lake Melville area of central Labrador told about a fairly large fish called Ishkimi that lives in some far-inland lakes.

Although their description didn't fit any fish known to the biologists, they believe it is some species of lake trout. Angling was good in every district except in the Lake Melville area.

TO OPEN BOTTLENECK—On the present Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, Canal officials say, ships moored for the night on the Cornwall canal often find themselves bottlenecked, due to the inadequate capacity of the canal system. Under St. Lawrence seaway and power project, which may begin next year, larger and deeper canals will accommodate more shipping. This is a Malak photo. (CP Photo).

U.S. Opposition Delayed Job for More Than 20 Years

BY FORREST REDDIE

Canadian Press Business Reporter

The proposed St. Lawrence deep seaway is not only an improved water route to the heart of Canada, but to the United States.

Every Canadian government since 1928 and every United States President, from Wilson—President Eisenhower in Ottawa only last Saturday—has supported it. The American state department favors it. The Canada-United States joint permanent board of engineers favors it.

To quote one American advocate, Senator Hubert Humphrey, (Dem.-Minn.):

"The good Lord did not lay steel . . . across this continent. He left it for man to do. But God Almighty did provide a great waterway into the heart of this country and all men have to do is call in the help of a few engineers."

GOVERNOR'S COMMENT

And G. Mennen Williams, Democratic Governor of Michigan, said:

"The Heartland around the Great Lakes is a pioneer economy, dynamic, not mature, and not satiated. This great area is a workshop and a breadbasket. Michigan and the states of inland America know full well that the St. Lawrence waterway will add terrific impetus to their economy."

Why, if so much opinion is behind the project, has it not been carried out before? Because rail, coal, seaboard and some local interests in the United States believe it will take business away from them and have been successful in presenting their views to Congress. One Intrastate Canadian commented: "So few people among the 160,000,000 in the United States know anything about the seaway that a strong lobby is able to stall it."

ARGUMENTS LOSE FORCE

The opposing American interests present many arguments, some of which seem to have lost force now Canada has decided to do the navigation work alone:

The costs have been underestimated; the project would not pay for itself; American money might better be spent in expanding other transportation facilities; the 27-foot canals would still shut out a large proportion of American shipping.

Joint Canadian - United States participation in a deep seaway has been debated since 1895.

In 1932 Canada and the United States planned for it under the St. Lawrence Deep Waterway Treaty but, although it got a slim majority in the United States Senate, the treaty failed to get the two-thirds majority required.

In 1941 another attempt was made to get the project going. Canada and the United States signed the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Basin agreement. This, too, died for congressional approval.

POWER A FACTOR

Meantime, the power needs of Ontario and New York were additional factors. The project as Canadian opinion was swinging behind an all-Canadian navigation job.

The power cannot be developed without consent of the United States, because it involves international waters and flooding of American land. If the water level is raised through the power development, however, Canada can proceed with the navigation work without affecting American territory.

In December, 1951, President Truman told Prime Minister St. Laurent that if an early start was not possible as a joint undertaking, he would support independent Canadian action as a "second best."

In June, 1952, both the United States and Canada filed applications with the International Joint Commission, Canadian-American body with wide powers in border matters arising between the two countries. These applications asked for permission to proceed with the power development. The Commission gave its approval.

NEW YORK-ONTARIO JOB

In 1951, Ontario had been designated by the Canadian government as agent for the Canadian part of the power work. Last July the Commission gave the New York state power authority a licence to begin construction.

Now President Eisenhower has carried this through to the federal executive stage by asking the New York power authority to do the U.S. part. James C. Hagerty, presidential press secretary, said this order completed the executive action needed to go ahead.

However, court proceedings still may cause delay. Objections to New York participation in the power phase have been filed in petitions to the United States Court of Appeals by the Pennsylvania Coal Producers Association, the Public Power and Water Corporation, Trenton, N.J., and the Lake Ontario Land Development and Beach Protective Association, made up largely of cottage owners in the vicinity of Rochester, N.Y. These proceedings may find their way to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Attorney - General Herbert Brownell of the United States, in a motion filed with the Court of Appeals Nov. 6, asked that these cases be advanced for hearing not later than mid-December. He expressed hope the lawsuits can be cleared up before June. His motion was accompanied by a letter from Secretary of State Dulles relaying Canada's wishes to get ahead with the work.

MAY START IN 1954

In the light of the American government's attitude, Canada, Ontario and New York hope a start can be made on the work about mid-year, thus bringing to an end more than 20 years' delay since Canada and the United States first decided on the job in 1932.

Although the present intention is that Ontario and New York do the power plants and Canada the seaway phase, supporters of American participation in the seaway expect to introduce legislation at the next session of Congress, opening Jan. 6, to bring the United States back into the seaway picture.

In his address to the Canadian Parliament at Ottawa President Eisenhower said he hoped U.S. co-operation would be authorized by Congress at its coming session.

"Joint development and use of the waterway is inevitable, the President said. "With you, I consider this measure a vital addition to our economic and national security."

Little Benny's Note Book

This morning I woke up still half asleep, when I was shaking me, saying. Now this is almost too much, this is the 3rd time you've been called and the 2nd time you've been shaken.

I'm up, ma, I said, I slept about an hour longer and take an extra long time to get dressed cause I had to recover my strength back? I said, which ma said, Are you deliberitly suggesting that I tell your teacher a perviarication for your absence?

No mam, G, ma, I said. But I would not be home after all that digging and shovelling and carrying about 200 buckits of water. Now I remember, that's why it was drizzeling all day yesterday and I was in the house every minute you weren't home.

It wasn't yesterday, ma. it was last nite in a dreem, I said.

Dreemed I was digging a well in case our water supply ever stopped. And I'm in the back yard, and I got down about 550 feet without striking water, so I decided to pore it in from the top, so that's why, I had to carry all those buckits of water from the kitchin. Jimminy roosiem, me, let me see you do all that work in a dreem without waking up tired, I said, and she said, Now that's reality enough for you.

So you meen you'll let me sleep some more and write me an excuse note? I said, and ma said, Yes, I'll write a note agrees to it. I'll call him, she said.

Never mind, ma, never mind, I'm up, I said.

Which I quick was.

$15,000 Gives Actress Title To Two Scenarios

NEW YORK (AP)—Actress Ann Sheridan has agreed to pay $15,000 to clear up a $40,000 loan from her long-time friend, the late publicist Steve Hannagan, and in turn gain title to two scenarios.

A settlement in the dispute between Miss Sheridan and estate executors for Hannagan was approved by a court Thursday.

In Hannagan's safe deposit box after his death were found three promissory notes totaling $40,000 signed by Miss Sheridan. But a Hannagan letter accompanying them said: "In case of death delete any in the presence of party notes held in box."

NOTES WERE BURNED

Dead Sea, one of five Hannagan associates inheriting his publicity business, said he carried out the instructions.

Miss Sheridan said she put up $7,000 against Hannagan's $40,000, with the money owed to be repaid only out of the sale or use of the two scenarios entitled "Second Lady" and "It Must Be Love."

This also was agreed to by the executors, who said the $15,000 was "the most we can hope to obtain by way of settlement."

Member Critical

OTTAWA (CP)—Thomas M. Bell (PC—St. John-Albert) says Saint John harbor is crumbling in ruin "because Maritime rights have been sold for a mess of promises."

Speaking Friday in the Throne Speech debate, Mr. Bell said that if Saint John does not get more ships to handle this winter "the whole economy of the area will break down."

He said one-sixth of Saint John's population depended for its livelihood on the port. With trade falling off, many persons had to accept a lower standard of living. Average pay packages, however, last season was around $30 a week, this season about $45.

Family Food Expenditures Going Down

OTTAWA (CP)—Family food expenditures in the metropolitan areas of five Canadian cities in the first six months of this year averaged $6.78 a person a week, the Bureau of Statistics reported Friday.

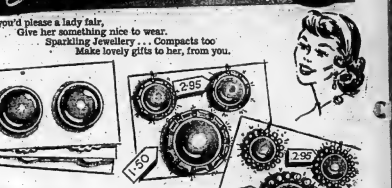
The report was the second release of a continuing sample survey of urban food expenditures in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

The first release, issued Sept. 11, covered results for the last four months of 1952 and showed an average of $7.52 a person for that period.

Laws No Good Unless Enforced Says Minister

KINGSTON (CP)—Justice Minister Garson told a meeting of police here Friday night that Canada's laws are no good unless they are enforced.

In an address to the annual meeting of the Ontario Chief Constables Association, he said:



"As a lawmaker, I know quite well that laws are not merely useless, they are sometimes worse than useless, unless they are consistently, speedily, firmly and fairly enforced."

The minister gave over practically all of his speech to telling the policemen how Canada's legislation—criminal law and otherwise —is initiated and goes through Parliament.

He commended Canada's police for the way in which they have maintained democratic standards for fair dealing.

London Prepares Royal Send-off For Beloved Queen

Perfect Flying Weather Expected for Start of Tour

LONDON (CP)—A touch of Coronation excitement returned to London dusks as the city prepared a royal send-off for the Queen when she leaves tonight on her world-circling Commonwealth tour.

The largest crowds since the June Coronation are expected along the route through the city to the airport.

By noon today many were gathering in the cold mist along the route, vying for vantage points from which they could get speed.

And throngs of well-wishers are expected at the airport when the Queen and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, leave for Bermuda at 8:45 p. m. (3:45 p. m. EST; in the British Overseas Airways stratocruiser Canopus, especially fitted for the flight.

For the Queen and the Duke, today was spent as much as possible with their children, Prince Charles and Princess Anne, whom they will not see again until May 15, 1954.

Royal maids and footmen this morning scurried through the corridors of Buckingham Palace in a last-minute flurry of packing.

In the airport kitchen, chefs prepared the dinner the royal couple will eat on the plane—a meal of course will be rose pheasant.

It will be the first Atlantic flight in history for a reigning British sovereign. Elizabeth, who became queen succeeding to the throne, made the aerial crossing with her husband in 1951 on their tour of Canada.

Workmen put finishing touches on platforms for television cameras to carry the departure to an audience estimated at more than 80,000,000.

The farewell was planned as a full state occasion, with members of the Royal Family, Prime Minister Churchill and the Commonwealth high commissioners in London to see the Royal couple off.

Light southeasterly winds and stability to about a mile were forecast. Heavy clouds were predicted at about 1,000 feet but the stratocruiser crew planned to fly above them.

Among those accompanying the Queen and the Duke on the Canopus are Lord Mountbatten, the lady in waiting; Maj. Sir Michael Adeane, the Queen's acting private secretary; and Commander Michael Parker, the Duke's private secretary.

FAKE PRECAUTIONS

The Canopus will be piloted by Capt. A. C. Edwards. She will be assisted by a crew of 12.

The plane left for Bermuda time (2:15 a.m. EST). It is due there at 10 a.m. Bermuda time (9 a.m. EST) Tuesday.

Extraordinary precautions were taken to safeguard the flight. Eight destroyers of the British and Canadian navies were spaced out across the North Atlantic for a radio watch on the 2,400-mile hop to Gander.

Two RAF bombers will provide a flying escort for the last 900 miles of the journey. They will accompany the Canopus the rest of the way to Bermuda.

The flight of the cruiser was checked and rechecked by its ground crew, including the Queen's Airways Corporation had a stratoliner, the Caledonia, standing by to pinch hit if needed.

The Royal couple will be gone until next June.

During the Queen's absence, a council of state including the Queen Mother, Princess Margaret, the Duke of Gloucester and the Princess Royal and her son, Earl of Harewood, will act for Elizabeth.

Poet Laureate Publishes Prayer On Eve of Tour

(LONDON (Reuters)—John Masefield, British poet laureate, today published "a prayer" on the eve of the Queen's Commonwealth tour.

Headed "On Our Queen's Going to Her People," it reads:

Lead us as burden, brotherhood
no chain;
A living league of nations is most blest.
O Power Eternal touching mortal brain,
Grant to this sovereign lady as she goes,
Light, from Thyself, to kindle and remain
A fire of joy, bracing in all test,
A gladness in all days and in all woes,
Guard her, and bless, and bring her home again.

The dead were two men, two women and her two small children. Police said the plane was believed to be a Piper Pacer that was reported missing late Sunday on a short flight between East Hampton, about 100 miles from here, and Babylon, 40 miles away.

Airport authorities listed the dead as:

Mrs. William Niffin and her two children, William Jr., and Cornie.

William Beckett.

Mustang Pilot Dies In Niagara Falls Crash

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y. (AP)—An air force reserve pilot died Sunday in the tangled wreckage of his F-84 Thunderjet fighter plane that crashed into a soggy field near Niagara Falls airport.

The pilot was identified as Lieut. William Henry Hulley, of Seneca Falls.

An official said it was likely the plane stalled as it went into a turn toward the airport.

Urges Canada Not to Let Friendship Prevent Criticisms of U.S. Policies

TORONTO (CP)—Canada must not let old friendships and common ideals prevent her from being watchful of American policy, J. Norman Smith said today.

Mr. Smith, associate editor of the Ottawa Journal, made the address prepared for delivery to the Canadian Club that there are a real reasons for arguing against the American policy of excluding India from the Korean peace conference.

Today Canadian government voted against the United States resolution on India at the United Nations "but there is room for the Canadian people to be more outspoken."

Mr. Smith said Canada would be good to have India a member of the peace conference. Mr. Smith said, Repatriation proceedings already have opened India's eyes to Communist treachery and if India were to be a member of the peace conference itself she would have further proof of Communist obstinacy.

"India, the most influential nation in Asia, might be able to lessen that obstinacy, to attain peace. But if the conference failed, Canada would be partly to the failure, so to speak, and would reveal to all Asians that the Commonwealth is not for peace."

Despite Canadian watchfulness of American policy, Mr. Smith said Canada would not gain anything by not speaking up against another country "because of old friendship and common ideals."

"Such a satellite is in danger of expending its energy pulling and even abetting them, but by refusing it to help us advertise a rift in the family."

Mr. Smith divorced most of his address to the Commonwealth conference during a five-week visit to Yugoslavia and Greece.

While not condoning Tito's methods, he said the Yugoslav leader's rule by force may be a good thing for the democratic countries of the world just now, and for Yugoslavia itself.

Tito could be better, of course, much, much better, but without it there would almost certainly be civil war, he said.

D.C. MACDONALD NEWLY-ELECTED CCF LEADER

Says Party Socialist Giant in New World

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Donald C. MacDonald of Ottawa, newly-elected leader of the CCF party in Ontario, said Saturday night the CCF movement in Canada "with all its weaknesses is a giant among the group of socialist pygmies in the New World."

In his maiden address as successor to M. B. Jolliffe, provincial leader since 1942 who retired in August, Mr. MacDonald said at a leadership convention banquet that the Canadian CCF party is "the official voice of democratic socialist councils of the world."

He said the CCF movement "has come very far but the job has only begun."

"The new society is hardly yet an embryo. . . . We will be able to get into the movement a new . . . force and when we get that force we will have a government with a fighting opposition or an alternative."

The 374 delegates chose Mr. MacDonald, national organizer and secretary since 1950, overcome two other candidates—Fred Young, political and economic secretary of the United Steelworkers (CIO-CCL), and Andrew Brewin, Toronto lawyer—for the $6,000-a-year post.

PLANS TOUR

Mr. MacDonald said in his victory speech that during the forthcoming months he intends to visit every riding in the province in an effort to rejuvenate the party which elected only two members in the 1951 election.

Appointment of a new national organizer will be discussed at a meeting of the national executive in Ottawa at the end of the year, CCF Leader M. J. Coldwell said.

Mr. MacDonald, Columbia 30 years ago, Mr. MacDonald taught school, worked on the Montreal Gazette and served overseas with the Canadian Navy in the Second World War. Before becoming a full-time CCF worker in 1946.

Mr. Jolliffe, applied the provincial party's first official leader in 1942, retired last August to devote more time to his law practice.

Saturday, delegates passed resolutions calling for all-Canadian pipeline from Alberta and Saskatchewan to Montreal, operated as a public enterprise; a reduction in interest rates on housing loans to not more than 3 per cent, and the continuation of rent controls by the provincial government.

W. H. MORTON, Honorary Chairman of Hospital Building Fund.

LT.-COL. P. H. WILLS, Honorary Treasurer of Hospital Fund.

Members of The Citizens Committee of Hospital Building Fund Announced

Members of the Citizens' Committee of the Hospital Building Fund were officially announced today.

Mr. W. H. Morton is Honorary Chairman of the fund and Lieut.-Col. P. H. Wills is Honorary Treasurer.

The Citizens' Committee comprises: H. W. Ackerman; Judge C. C. Anderson; Jamieson Bone; A. B. Collins, Q.C.; Rev. L. K. Dimmitt; Senator W. A. Fraser; Frank S. Follwell, M.P.; Very Rev. Dean J. R. Garvin; Air Vice-Marshal J. G. Kerr, C.B.E., A.E.C.; Warden J. A. Kincaid; Rabbi M. Konovitch; Mrs. E. Mikell Robson, M.P.P.; E. Sandercock, M.P.P.; Dr. R. Seymour; D. E. Trudeau; G. White, M.P.; N. Whitney, M.P.P.; Lt.-Col. R. H. Widdifield.

Commenting on the campaign Mr. Morton said that the need for additional hospital accommodation is obvious to everyone. "The question of how the $1,250,000 should be co-ordinated to provide this hospital expansion has been very carefully thought out."

"The public objective of $600,000 may seem to be a great sum of money to many people, but very careful study has shown that this objective can be realized if we all do our part. This is not something that we are confronted with people in this community will do their utmost to make this Campaign a success."

Lieut.-Col. Wills said that "people of the community should be justly proud that we are to have the new hospital addition. We hear much about the industrial expansion in our area, greatly expanded population and increased prosperity of the community at large. Now the time has come when we must bring our hospital in line with these advances so that we may be sure that our progress will not be jeopardized."

Lower Grain and Livestock Prices in 1954 Forecast

OTTAWA (CP)—A special committee of federal experts today forecast lower grain and livestock prices for 1954, but predicted Canada will have another prosperous year.

The committee, reporting to the annual federal-provincial agricultural conference, estimated that consumer incomes in Canada will rise moderately next year, thus upswelling the domestic demand for foodstuffs.

And assuming that western farmers will be able to move a big portion of their near-record grain stockpile to market early next year, the committee forecast a heavy movement of cash into the farmers' pockets.

INCOME DROP SEEN

But it, anticipated that next year's crops won't match 1953 production—second highest in history—and that net farm income for 1954 may undergo another decline, the third consecutive adjustment since the peak of $2,200,000,000 in 1951.

"Total farm expenses may be somewhat higher in 1954, but the reduction will likely be far from sufficient to offset the smaller value of year-end inventory changes," the committee said.

It anticipated that "lower grain prices should result in lower feed prices," but that farm grain income should be maintained and increased next year through lower marketings.

And "although somewhat lower final grain prices for the 1953-54 crops may be reflected in smaller participation payments for cash and barley, the delaying of the final 1952-53 payments until the early 1954 may maintain the total payments for this crop in 1954 above the 1952 level."

Livestock production next year may rise and prices also, but on the whole "income from the sale of livestock is likely to be much less greatly from that realized in 1953."

The committee conceded that some farmers have been caught between rising production costs and declining prices of farm products.

"As agriculture becomes more commercialized and increases its reliance on sources outside of agriculture for goods and services used in production, it becomes increasingly subject to declines in the prices for which farm products are sold.

"Any reduction in net income to agriculture in contrast with a continuation of high level activity in the remainder of the economy tends to place the farmer in a difficult position.

EXPECT CANADA TO ANSWER SOON ABOUT GOUZENKO

Pearson Drafts Reply To Second U.S. Request

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government is expected to reply today or Tuesday to a United States request that the United States Senate Internal security sub-committee be permitted to question Igor Gouzenko.

External Affairs Minister Pearson, who had planned to spend the week-end in New York, returned here Saturday to frame the Canadian government's reply. He is scheduled to address the English-Speaking Union in New York tonight. Prime Minister St. Laurent or Justice Minister Garson may make a statement in the House of Commons.

GUARDED BY RCMP

This is how the case arose:

Mr. Gouzenko, former cipher clerk in the Russian embassy here, supplied he tip-off which uncovered a Soviet spy ring in Canada in 1946. He now lives under RCMP protection in an undisclosed Ontario town with his wife and two children.

On Oct. 15, the Chicago Tribune published an account of an interview with Mr. Gouzenko. This report quoted Mr. Gouzenko as saying he would be willing to tell his story again in Canada by the sub-committee headed by Senator William Jenner (Rep-Ind.). It also said Mr. Gouzenko thinks Russian spies are still operating in Canada and the U. S. and that he might be of assistance.

Jenner asked Secretary of State Dulles to seek permission from the Canadian government to question Gouzenko. The state secretary passed on this request to Ottawa.

REFUSE REQUEST

Canada turned down the request. Mr. Pearson said in the Commons Nov. 17 the request to interview Mr. Gouzenko came from a statement Mr. Gouzenko was reported to have made to the Chicago Tribune that he had some new information.

Mr. Pearson said the RCMP had interviewed Mr. Gouzenko Oct. 27 and that he had told them he had no new information and that he had been misquoted by the Tribune.

At Jenner's request, Dulles asked the Canadian government to reconsider its decision.

Before the second U. S. request arrived, Mr. Pearson said Canada was unlikely to change its decision unless the U. S. produced some new factors. Later, he told reporters a report of the Senate committee received by Mr. Gouzenko concerning activities of the spy ring had been passed on to the U. S. government in 1946. This was a reiteration of statements made by Canadian officials several times since 1946.

Yesterday, the Ottawa and other newspapers published accounts of a second statement by Mr. Gouzenko.

Mr. Gouzenko said he had not been misquoted by the Tribune and that he would still be willing to appear before the senate committee representative in Canada.

Mr. Pearson, at a press conference today, declined to say whether any new factors appeared in the second statement which might alter the government's decision.

STATEMENT FROM GOUZENKO

In reference to Mr. Gouzenko's statement that he had not been misquoted by the Tribune, Mr. Pearson said his statement in the Commons that Mr. Gouzenko had been misquoted came from a letter from Mr. Gouzenko, through the RCMP, who "knew more about what Gouzenko than anybody else."

Rubber Combine Penalties Fixed At $170,000

7 Firms and Association To Share in Fine Payment

TORONTO (CP) — Seven rubber companies and the Rubber Association of Canada were fined a total of $170,000 today on charges of operating a rubber combine.

Mr. Justice W. F. Schroeder handed down his decision today. The companies pleaded guilty to the charges last week.

PLEADED GUILTY

The companies and the association pleaded guilty to two charges of fixing prices of rubber footwear and automobile tires, and representing competition in both.

Five firms were convicted previously on charges of fixing prices of mechanical rubber products and were fined $50,000.

Special crown prosecutor T. N. Phelan said during the trial the accused companies and "co-conspirators" accounted for 85 per cent of the rubber footwear sold in Canada.

Rhee Will Accept Nationwide Vote In Unified Korea

SEOUL (AP)—President Syngman Rhee declared Sunday he will accept "nationwide the way" of free nationwide elections in a unified Korea.

Replying to questions by reporters, he also said he would step aside as president if the voting population "may choose a president freely"—as long as there is no outside interference.

Rhee said he believed there would be no opposition to him as president of the unified north and south except that of the Communists, who would want him to have nothing to do with the new government.

The civilian population of the north "is hoping and praying that their homeland will be united and come and save them from death," Rhee said.

Pulp and Paper Workers to Get Higher Wages

QUEBEC (CP)—Three pulp and paper companies have granted a five-per-cent wage increase to some 2,500 employees as the result of a collective agreement accepted during the week-end, it was announced today.

The companies are Anglo Canadian Pulp and Paper Mills Ltd., of Quebec; St. Lawrence Corporation of Canada Ltd., Trois-Rivieres, and James McLaren Co., Ltd., of Buckingham and Masson.

Previously, the wages of most members of three major unions will be raised by 10 cents an hour, and the 40-hour work week by April 30, 1954.

Mossadegh Says He Will Speak In Own Defence

By PARVIZ RAEINS

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ex-premier Mohammed Mossadegh said today he had changed his mind and would speak in his own defence. He added he would keep on speaking until the court-martial trying him on treason charges gags him.

In an interview the ex-dictator declared: "I will go on speaking as long as they let me. If they give me a month, then I will speak a month."

Reminded that he earlier had told the court that he would refuse to speak in his own defence, Mossadegh grinned and said:

"That's only what I said."

CHANGES FACTION

Mossadegh has been shifting his trial tactics in recent days. Formerly he had kept his head on his folded arms as prosecutor Brig. Hossein Azmoudeh read the indictment and expanded on the charges. From time to time the 73-year-old politician moaned, yawned, and even slept.

In the last two or three days, however, he has been carefully scribbling his own notes and directing his lawyers who to make notes. His attitude has been marked by alert attention instead of dishonest and boredom.

Mossadegh said he still was uncertain whether he will call any witnesses. He declared: "I don't think I really need any help yet. I am well able to take care of myself."

18 Passengers Burned When Tram Hits Truckload of Caustic Soda

TORONTO (CP) — Eighteen passengers in a crowded street car were burned today when the tram crashed into a truck loaded with a loose caustic soda. The truck driver also was burned.

Taxis, private cars and police cruisers took the injured to hospital. No one was reported in serious condition.

Charles Ezart, 31, was learning to drive the Toronto Transportation Commission car when the accident time of the crash, police said.

Many passengers were temporarily blinded as the loose soda ash poured through the shattered street car windows and burned their bodies and clothes.

Witnesses said the truck driver J. D. Battista, 28, rushed back to advise passengers to wash off the caustic with cold water. He suffered burns and possible internal injuries.

Two fire trucks were called to wash away the soda on the street. The injured passengers were all taken to hospital.

Police said the street car was going south on Church street when it ran into a truck about to turn at Dundas street.

C. Argue Will Be Official Umpire At Wpg. Finals

The Belleville Bowling Club and "Cliff" Argue, president of the club and president of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association in 1952, in particular, has been signally honored by the Canadian Lawn Bowling Council. Mr. Argue has been appointed by that body to act as their representative and official umpire at the Canadian championships to be held in Winnipeg on June 28, 29 and 30th of next year.

Champions at this meeting will go to Vancouver, B.C., to represent Canada at the British Empire Games on the indoor bowling rinks. The Quebec-Ontario zone finals have already been played with Quebec winning the singles and rinks, while William Duncan Sr. and W. Edney of Kingston won the doubles competition.

British Columbia has won the singles and doubles in the B.C.-Alberta zone finals and will be represented in rinks. The Manitoba-Saskatchewan finals will be played in June prior to the zone finals at which Mr. Argue will preside.

"Cliff" has taken a keen interest in bowling since joining the Belleville Club and has risen to one of the foremost executives of the game in Canada. The champions from England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales will play a series of games across Canada before the games in Vancouver and Mr. Argue has been selected as the representative and he will be one of the "men" on the teams' visit to Peterborough some time in June.

Spring Beating Old Man Winter To the Punch

Maybe spring is beating Old Man Winter to the punch.

In any event the almost summer-like weather of the past few days has caused Mr. Tulip to sprout bulbs in various parts of the city.

One resident reports a few of a few others that the crocuses are blooming in his garden.

Another said that "Dad" lilies are pushing sprouts well above ground.

Yet another said he dug his garden the other day and found that deeply-planted bulbs had sprouted well over an inch in height.

Dandelions, stunted perhaps, are showing yellow blooms on some lawns this week.

In other parts green life is apparent at the base of dried bulb-hock canes.

WILLET CASEY KETCHESON
(Contributed)

In the death of Willet Casey Ketcheson, which occurred on Tuesday evening, November 17th, a highly regarded resident of Thurlow township has passed from this life. The late Willet Ketcheson was in his 93rd year. His parents were John V. Ketcheson and Almira Casey.

Willet Ketcheson was a direct descendant of Col. Wm. Ketcheson who served with Butler's Cornwalls and who later came to Nova Scotia after the Revolutionary War, and finally to the township of Sidney in 1801.

The Ketcheson home was noted for its gracious hospitality and on numerous occasions, Mr. Ketcheson would entertain his Sunday School class and friends to a taffy pull at his sugar bush, which in many instances turned out to be a birthday party, as his birthday was during the maple syrup season.

He was one of few active farmers who had farmed with oxen, horse and tractor, and had resided in the Zion-Bethel community all his life. Because of his friendly and genial disposition, he was a man whom old and young loved to greet. He never preached but for many years he served his community well—as an elder in the church and a Sunday School teacher and giving his support to all worthwhile projects.

His wife, the former Julia Sloan, predeceased him fifteen years ago. Surviving are one sister, Mrs. Mabel Bates, Toronto; three brothers, Seldon and Belleville and John F. and Billa A. Thurlow; one daughter (Minnie) Mrs. George McCullough of Vancouver; two sons, Cecil residing on the homestead and Deputy-Reeve of Thurlow and Stanley Clifford, a successful farmer residing in the same community. Saturday's rain may have interrupted the appearance of Santa Claus in his scheduled post, on Front street but it did not prevent him from turning up at the McCarthy Theatre, where he expressed appreciation for the large assortment of toys turned in by movie-going children of the city at the price of admission to the show.

Santa appeared on the stage at the theatre where he greeted the kiddies and then mingled among the children in the audience.

Stamp Collectors May Hold Exhibit Early in Spring

On Thursday last the Stamp Club held its semi-monthly meeting at the Kiwanis Centre. An increasing interest in stamp collecting—philately to the collector or—is evident by the conversation at the various meetings. One of the older collectors was heard to say, "I am convinced there are many more collectors in Belleville than we think and if for one, would like to see them return to active collecting, join the club and renew their interest here."

There are some collectors who are quite happy with their good luck at the big auction which took place at the previous meeting. They acquired a few of those hard to find items at very low cost and thanked the company during the recent illness and death of Mrs. A. Secord.

Three-Quarters Inch of Rain In Cloudburst

A miniature cloudburst, at least that is the way Belleville residents viewed it, swamped the city and district Sunday night sending three-quarters of an inch of rain or rain before it stopped altogether and the sun shone.

According to purification plant officials the total rainfall over the week-end amounted to .88 inches.

The deluge halted traffic on the highway. One driver said of it, "It seemed like a solid wall of water coming at us, and we were forced to pull over to the side of the road until it had passed."

Other drivers caught in the sudden downpour said they could not see "ten feet in front of the car" after the miniature storm struck.

The rain was followed by a biting flashes but the electrical disturbance was not said to be severe.

RENGRADE (Reuters) — Results in Yugoslavia's single-party election today indicated about 90-per-cent support for Marshal Tito's regime.

About 10 per cent of the voters in Sunday's polling registered disapproval of the regime by spoiling their ballots. There was only opposition to vote for.

At stake were a new federal parliament and eight regional assemblies.

This scored a personal victory in a Belgrade constituency which returned him by the federal assembly with a poll of 34,768 votes of the 35,875 cast for him. The rest of the votes were invalid. He was the only candidate.

Final results probably will be announced Wednesday.

POLICE BLOTTER

Operation of a truck without a noise muffler and without the owner's name printed on the side of the cab resulted in a bit of grief for both the operator and owner of such a vehicle over the week-end. Charges were laid by the driver of the vehicle for operating the truck without a muffler while the owner will also receive a summons for having his name on the truck.

Reid's Dairy on Parkey Street was entered during the week-end with a small quantity of change reported missing. Entry was gained through smashing a window, police stated.

West End Motors reported a tire and rim stolen from a used car on their used car lot.

The janitor of Queen Mary School reported six windows broken. Young boys adept at stone throwing were believed responsible.

Firemen Fail To Find Anyone In Distress on Bay

The excited voice of a woman resident of Foster Ward stating that she heard someone calling in distress out on the Bay of Quinte sent firemen to the bay shore beside Stouton's early Saturday evening.

Firemen searched the entire area without result and spotlights played out onto the water failed to find anything.

Two other calls were answered by department over the week-end. One Saturday afternoon took the rescue to North James street to the Keene Auto wreckers where a welding torch started a small blaze. Again Sunday evening firemen were called to the downtown area where a chimney fire at the rear of the Paragon Cafe was reported. There was no damage as result of either of the calls.

Tramways Strike In Montreal Ends on Sunday

MONTREAL (CP)—A short-lived tramways strike that paralyzed public transport in Canada's largest city Saturday ended through Sunday in some areas as 5,000 workers heeded union advice to return to work.

Montrealers — the majority caught off balance by the work-stoppage, some still casually queried to find buses and street-cars in circulation Sunday.

The Montreal Transportation Commission ordered cars out of the barns at 3:30 a.m., three hours after a mass union rally ended the 36-hour lay-off, but was not able to restore full services immediately. A promised normal service today.

Thurlow Square Dancing Teams Compete at Fair

Although neither team was fortunate in reaching the finals the two Thurlow square dancing teams competing at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto made a good showing, it was learned here today.

Of the two teams the Thurlow Juniors made the better showing and were eliminated by the Trenton Squarettes of Hamilton who went on to win the competition. Reports indicated there was little to choose between the two.

The Thurlow seniors were eliminated Friday evening in a preliminary contest which saw the team from North Bay and another Hamilton team go on into the finals.

Despite the fact they failed to get into the finals staged Saturday afternoon, members of the two Thurlow square dancing teams had a fine time in Toronto and were guests of Mack Robertson of the Belleville Creameries.

Girls' Hi-Y Club Presents Clock To Institution

The Y.M.C.A. swimming pool will soon be equipped with a large electric clock, owing to the generosity of the Belleville Girls Hi-Y Club.

The presentation of the handsome weatherproof clock was made by Miss Barbary Bennett at the quarterly monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. Association. Miss Bennett, a member of the girls' club, is also one of the instructors of the Wednesday afternoon swimming and gymnasium classes for young girls. In her remarks presenting the gift she commented that "The Hi-Y Club has certainly been useful and useful in the pool. I know from personal experience, that in the past we have had a lot of confusion, when classes have gone over their time in the pool. Needless to say none of us has been anxious to wear our own watches where there is so much water splashing about. Consequently all of the girls will be grateful to the girls Hi-Y club for this gift."

In replying to Miss Bennett, W. L. Anderson, president of the board expressed the thanks of the entire Y.M.C.A. membership for the considerate generosity of the club. "I want you to know that the board of directors is taking every possible step to make this Y.M.C.A. useful and attractive to young people," declared Mr. Anderson. "We want to feel that this is a good place to come with your friends. It is particularly gratifying and inspiring to us that you are anxious through gifts such as this clock, to enhance the building yourselves."

Largest Crowd to Attend Nomination Meeting in Years Hears Many Issues Discussed

TRENTON (Special) — The largest crowd to attend a nomination meeting in years jammed into the town hall on Friday night expecting Trenton's stormy municipal situation to flare up and create more sensational controversy.

On the contrary the business of the night was conducted in a very regular manner and the public listened attentively to a score of aspirants for the offices of mayor, council and board of education. Senator W. A. Fraser, a keen follower of civic politics, was conspicuous by his absence.

Two of the 1953 councillors announced temporary retirement from public life. Both of them served as committee chairmen.

Chairman of Public Works Clifford Cuntiff, explained that the state of his health would not permit him to seek re-election for the incoming term.

Chairman of Finance and Administration, Eben James, maintaining that it was the duty of every young man to give some of his time to his town, said he couldn't spare the time from his organization because he had become the target for threats and slanderous talk. He was thrilled at viewing the accomplishments of his department and board of education. Reports indicated there was little to be desired from both.

The Thurlow seniors were eliminated Friday evening in a preliminary contest which saw the team from North Bay and another Hamilton team go on into the finals.

Despite the fact they failed to get into the finals staged Saturday afternoon, members of the two Thurlow square dancing teams had a fine time in Toronto and were guests of Mack Robertson of the Belleville Creameries.

Whitley Brothers, Ross Burtt In Field for Mayor's Chair

TRENTON (Special) — Trenton's topsy turvy municipal picture took on more confusion and confusion here on Saturday when Richard Whitley qualified to join his brother, Mayor Roland Whitley for the mayor's chair in the forthcoming municipal election on December 7. And adding to the confusion was the nomination of Ross Burtt to make it a three-cornered fight. This is the third time Whitley has "run" figured in a three-man race for mayor. The first in 1947 when Kenneth J. Couch defeated him and H. R. Cory. Last year he ran second to Roland Whitley and Cory headed off Norman Banfield on the first time.

Mayor Roland Whitley finds it hard to explain his brother's action. He said he wasn't sure why his brother wants to contest the seat with him, "unless it's the assessment. He owns a lot of property here," he said.

But Burtt's followers are in a jubilant mood. They feel confident that the World War I veteran and railroader, who served as a councillor for 15 years has the necessary quality to get elected office now that the Whitley camp is divided.

In the meantime voters have the largest council slate in years to choose from. Of the 16 men installed 12 qualified, including R. Hamilton, Lawrence Conrad, Gerald Weaver, Kenneth Kenny, Miss Laura Cumming, Alfonso Graham, Lorne Rickard, Jack Goldberg, Don MacPherson, Charlie Hilton, J. C. McKay, Reg. Armstrong.

There are six aspiring for four Board of Education vacancies. They are: Rev. R. C. MacLean, Ivor Walling, Howard Langdon, Mrs. Ethel Sexsmith, Leonard Conrad, Grant Rathbun.

Sherman Graham was elected to the Public Utilities Commission by acclamation.

Little Interest In Being Shown In Coming Elections

With civic nominations only a few days away very little interest is being shown in the forthcoming municipal elections. Nominations for mayor, council, school board and public utilities office will be held at the city hall on Tuesday starting at 11 o'clock.

To date Alderman Charles L. Hyde is the only announced aspirant for the office of chief magistrate, a position held by Mayor-A. M. Haig will hand down following a two-year term of office. Other names have been mentioned in connection with mayoralty but thus far Alderman Hyde is the only man to definitely announce his intention.

Two of this year's council will not be contesting for the role of alderman. They are Alderman C. L. Hyde, who is stepping up to the mayoralty berth and Alderman Don McNevin, who has announced his intention of retiring from council.

Other members of council whose terms of office expires this year are expected to offer themselves for re-election. They are Aldermen William Argue, Arthur Keegan, Bruce Smith, Robert Daniels and Lloyd Symons.

Also expected to offer themselves for re-election are Frank Ham, local solicitor, and Ben Safe.

Normally seven members of the public school board would be up for election. However, due to the resignation of board members Mrs. Ethel Sexsmith, only eight members elected at the forthcoming election.

The eight board members, whose terms of office are up this year are John Conklin, Dr. H. L. House, Carman Caverley, Orliff Lloyd (replacement for the late Dr. Wallace Williams), Mrs. Tassell, Chairman Fred T. Symons and Dr. Ross Ketcheson.

Public Utilities chairman, Percy McGuire, whose term is utilities member will it is understood, offer himself for re-election.

Santa Claus Will Contact Children

Lloyd "Red" Doran, recreational director announced today that Santa Claus will contact children over the children by telephone beginning Dec. 11. This year cards will be distributed to local merchants, at school, and from the recreation centre headquarters. The cards are printed with a picture of the child's choice, dress, age and phone number along with the hour they wish to be called.

They may be obtained up to December 3, but no cards will be accepted after that date. This year children will be given a letter from two choices of the hour they wish to receive the call. The service is shared jointly by the Belleville Recreation Committee and the Belleville Chamber of Commerce. Following the telephone call children will receive letters from Santa Claus who spoke with by phone.

Theatre Guild One of Two Winners In Drama Festival of Association

The Peterborough and district one-act play drama festival was held in Peterborough, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday with eight entries including one from the Belleville Theatre Guild. The adjudicator for this occasion was Professor Arnold Edinborough or Queen's University. Public adjudications took place each evening immediately following the final curtain, with final adjudication after Saturday evening's performances.

The Belleville Theatre Guild entry was "Fumed Oak" by Noel Coward, and was directed by John Ryan, assisted by Mary Doyle. This comedy in two scenes was the first performance on Saturday evening, and was followed by the Peterborough Little Theatre's presentation of "Eros at Breakfast" by Berrian Dunlop.

Professor Edinborough, in his adjudication following these two performances, referred to the Noel Coward comedy as a "good, polished, careful performance." In his summation of the entire festival, Professor Edinborough had the difficult task of determining which two of the eight entries, that is, which two groups, were to enter the finals of the Eastern Ontario Drama Festival as the one-act play competitors of this district. These were the Belleville Theatre Guild, and the Peterborough Little Theatre, who will be represented in the finals which are scheduled to take place in Brockville late in January.

The cast of "Fumed Oak" included Vicky Thomas, Lillian Morch, Betty Barrie and Ray Brule.

Scientists Find 'Piltdown Man' Is a Fake

LONDON (CP)—Scientists were staggered Saturday to learn that for the last 40 years mankind has been victims of a gigantic hoax—the "Piltdown man" of 1912.

Someone had put over the most outrageous hoax in paleontological annals.

The jawbone and teeth of the famed Piltdown man belong to a 20th century ape, and not to a man who lived 100,000 years ago, a scientific report published Saturday by the British Museum said the world-famous skull cap of bone and teeth were "deliberate fakes" of the supposedly fossilized skull.

This startling disclosure solves a riddle of human ancestry which has baffled scientists since the relics were found. Hundreds of books and essays have been written on the subject.

ARTHUR LEAKE

For the skull of the Piltdown man, with its essentially human characteristics, was hailed as the most spectacular find in the history of human evolution.

Bewildered anthropologists were forced to declare today that the Piltdown man was a strange species unknown and as inexplicable as offshoot from the main' line of man's development.

Dr. Weiner Weiner, lawyer and amateur antiquary, dug the Piltdown skull cap and a lower jaw and canine bone and teeth were "deliberate fakes" of the supposedly fossilized skull.

WHAT IS "NON-STRATEGIC"?

A news dispatch from London states that Britain is giving "active consideration" to the expansion of trade in non-strategic goods with Communist China. Labor members of the House of Commons have been complaining that Chinese orders for pharmaceuticals, likely to go to other countries and Britain was doing nothing about it. The trade minister replied that the matter was under "active consideration at present."

There is a difficulty here that will likely put an additional strain on Anglo-American relations. For even such an evasive phrase as "non-strategic goods" will bring into focus once again the basic differences in British and American attitudes towards Red China. Britain has maintained, even during the Korean fighting, that recognition of Red China is merely the acceptance of a fact and not an endorsation of the government. The United States has taken the position that the Red Regime in China is virtually a conquered state and that the true aims of China are represented by the Nationalist government on Formosa.

Already the U.S. and Britain have clashed on the matter of trading with Red China. The American navy at one point even commandeered a British tanker on the high seas to prevent it from delivering a shipment of fuel to Red Chinese port with a shipment of fuel for jet planes.

No one can argue that jet fuel is definitely not a "non-strategic goods". But who can say what is, and what is not, strategic?

It has been proven in the past that disease, even during great wars, has killed more persons and caused as many men and women as has the fighting. In fact, the ratio has always been in favor of disease until the advent of the World War and the antibiotics. Following the Allied victory in Italy, DDT was used on a grand scale to check a threatened epidemic of typhus in Milan.

Threatened epidemics in Egypt and the Middle East were also put down in the post-war years with the prompt and widespread use of insecticides, antibiotics, vaccines and other agents for disease prevention and control are extremely valuable in peacetime as well as in wartime. During the war, in which the destruction of the enemy and his ability to make war is the primary aim, any agent which would prolong his ability to resist must be considered as a strategic material. With this interpretation, insecticides and pesticides become strategic materials of importance equal to that of jet fuel.

The British government, in its consideration of trade in non-strategic materials should be most circumspect. The Labor party, in pressing for greater trade with Communist China, is possibly seeking an immediate material advantage that could very readily lose its value by reinforcing the Communist cause with the materials that sustain the fighting men and its civilian populations. While Britain should retain her independence to as great an extent as possible she should not jeopardize harmonious Anglo-American relations by making a policy difference for the sake of a few trade dollars.

TOO RICH TO BE A RED

The London Times, commenting on a series of four articles in which a general decline in membership in the Communist parties of Europe were noted, stated that the battle against Communism will be decided in the last analysis capacity to give its citizens "a richer and more secure, as well as a freer, future than those of the countries on the other side of the frontier."

This remark reminds us of a story which made the rounds in France immediately after the war when the French Communist party was seeking to consolidate the gains which Russian partnership in the war against Hitler had made for Communists everywhere.

It seems that a Russian writer took up permanent residence in Paris as a correspondent for a news service. He employed a French butler, who, it subsequently developed, was a Communist. The writer was not a fanatic, but he attended the party meetings regularly every Thursday night—his night off. One Thursday he told his go-ahead he was his custom. When a second, third and fourth Thursday night went by, and the butler still had not gone to his regular meeting, the American writer asked him why he had discontinued attending.

The butler replied that since joining he had attended, a fellow Communist, in explaining how the party would divide up the capitalists' spoils when it came to power, explained that everyone in France would receive 15,000 francs.

"And you see," said the butler, "I have 25,000."

EXPENSIVE BOOKS

The Associated Press reports that in future any South African resident caught with a book which the government considers seditious or "communistic" will be liable to a fine of $3,000 or five years in jail.

The Associated Press has a fine reputation for accuracy. Unless, in this instance, it has been misled, we should like to hear what explanation the South African Government's information officer at Ottawa can give for this legislation. We should like to say this "extraordinary" legislation but, alas, we are not so sure that it is any longer extraordinary when legislation of this type is enacted by Dr. Malan's regime.

Possibly the official defender of the Malanist faith will assure us that the law will only be enforced in exceptional cases, when this person caught with an objectionable book is an objectionable person—the government being the judge of what is objectionable in each case.

And that, of course, is the whole point at issue and the reason why we so strongly detest such legislation.

EXPERIMENT

"That didn't work," the dreamer said.
"Another failure. That is true,
But I would rather say instead
This lesson learned: What not to do.

"An error? With you I'll agree,
But—I rather like before.
To stop with that would failure
be,
Tomorrow I will try once more.

There are some people whose next aim is always to be a continuous dwelling upon injuries. From the time they open their eyes in the morning until they close them at night, they are oppressed by a sense of the cruel injustice, disrespect and contempt which has been heaped out upon them by malicious persons. Their thoughts oscillate between the memories of these outrages and the fatalistic conviction that they will be followed by fresh ones. Themselves, if it takes them a lifetime.

Life is too short for such nonsense—and nonsense it is. For the average person has few, if any, enemies. If he does have any considerable number let him begin asking himself, Why?

Nobody has a right to go mourning the matter with him.

Nobody is pursuing you, brother. Nobody has it in for you.
If you think that certain people are maliciously trying to embarrass you, or that they rejoice in humiliating you or in making you feel insignificant, then get such ideas out of your head.
You are exhausted, or you have had eating habits—or you have allowed yourself to fall into a train of thoughts and fantasies which lead only to melancholy and misery.

Really, friend, it's time to wake

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

NOVEMBER 22, 1933

Ollie Mulvihill, who played hockey with the Belleville senior "B" team the first winter the new arena was opened, is renewing acquaintances in town today.

He is on his way from Aerojor to join the Kansas City Flaymors, the winners of the championship of the American Association last year and of which team he was a valued member.

Mr. and Mrs. Angus Lawrence of the second concession of Sidney township, celebrated the 50th anniversary of their wedding on November 21st and in the evening about seventy-five relatives, friends and neighbors surprised them at their home and a most enjoyable social time was passed for some hours. Mrs. Lawrence is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sidney Yates and her marriage took place at the home of her parents; the ceremony being performed by the Rev. E. C. Howard, minister of the Methodist Church located not far from her home and now known as Aikens Church. Upon return from their wedding trip to Toronto they took up residence in the same comfortable farm house where they now reside. The house was originally built by the grandfather of Mr. Lawrence, who was one of the early pioneers of the district. At the social gathering on the evening of last 20th anniversary, the chair, during the program, was occupied by Master Roscoe Vanderwater, a nephew of Mrs. Lawrence. Among the gifts presented to Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence was a purse of gold. The address was read by Mrs. Selburne Westover and the presentation was made by Mr. Wilmot Bailey.

30 YEARS AGO

NOVEMBER 23, 1923

The first snow fall of the season arrived today about noon.

Under new regulations turnips, parsnips, carrots and beets must be sold on the market by weight.

Eggs sold at a high price on the market today, namely, 65 cents to 70 cents a dozen.

Mr. J. Sutcliffe and his son of Trenton were motoring to Belleville last evening and when upon the tracks at the crossing near the cemetery the car stalled, the C.N.R. passenger train dues here about six o'clock was approaching and Mr. Sutcliffe and his son had barely time to jump from the car to safety. The motor car was demolished.

Mr. Ashley Boyd, of the C.N.R. staff, Peterborough, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Boyd, Catherine St.

40 YEARS AGO

NOVEMBER 22, 1914

Mr. Wallace, of Canniffon, was driving a cow this morning over the bridge which spans the creek at that place when the cow became wild and rushing, Mr. Wallace plunged over the embankment into the river. The stream was fast and carried the cow a considerable distance to Lloghand's dam over which it was carried. Below the dam the water is shallow and "Sunny" LaPain rescued the cow, which appeared none the worse for its experience.

At a meeting at Holst Lodge a junior Basketball club was organized with the following officers: Hon. President, the Hon. Senator H. Corby; patrons, E. Guss Porter, M.P., W. Johnson, M.P.P., W. B. 'Fine' Writing Dates Authors

(Winnipeg Free Press)

A writer whose sales have held up over the years is Somerset Maugham. When asked recently, to whom he ascribed his continuing popularity, Mr. Maugham—who is now nearing 80 years of age—replied:

"My idiom is that of the beginning of the century, but I've always written for the average mind. The most compliment I was ever paid was in a letter from a G.I. in New Guinea. He wrote to say that he had just read one of my novels for the fifth time, but it was a single word. That is why my writing has lasted, if it has. It is "fine" writing that dates."

There is a lesson here for all who write. There is no advantage so great as to be understood.

Individuals Challenged

(Hamilton Spectator)

In these troubled times when the best efforts of well intentioned statesmen are insufficient to prevent the world being divided into two distinct camps, thoughtful men and women examine the material and moral strength of democracy and see within it intrinsic power. Although this view may not always be the same and there may be times when pessimism afflicts even the most cheerful observer, always there comes something that lights the scene and proves that the soul of democracy is sound.

Modern democracy, however, is still in its experimental stage. It has many faults, and because freedom is the very life blood, it offers unrivalled opportunities for the unprincipled. But it has compensations. It offers them the present and future depend, grows, implies the discovery of failings and seeks elsewhere for its correction. It can be lost and two thousand years of striving transformed into vanity.

There is little to be gained in a return to the standards of the past, even if it were possible to do so, for the modern world is a revolt from the past. As a result of the revolt, a new concept of democracy, finer and broader, is evolving. It is not. With it has come a tremendous challenge to which it is being tried by pretending to ignore it by filling time with frivolous diversions. It is being tried by excitements it presents will solve themselves. Democracy today has become sensory and fearlessness which it has always had will fade when it does not insist upon these qualities in every transaction. It is being tried by those who frankly give them honor when they are challenged. To do so is an individual obligation in democracy.

The fulfilment of modern democracy demands resilient freedom, courage and high personal standards. This is a challenge for individuals, not by governments which are but a reflection of their collective wishes. Shelley wrote of the body politic of man:

"Thus, like thy glory, Titan is to be Good, great and joyous, beautiful and free.
This is alone life, joy, empire and victory."

If modern democracy's challenge is met and answered by fiercely cherishing the individuals can smash their teeth in the dark. That is a form of conception, for it is moral weapons they lack.

Lipstick Spoiled Votes

(Saint John Telegraph-Journal)

Vanity has been accused of bringing a good deal of trouble to former Premier Alcide de Gasperi of Italy may not be able to add philanthropy to the list, the possibility that women's lipstick cost him 500,000 votes may be needed to win the June elections.

Italian election officials cast votes spoiled because they contained extraneous marks from lipstick impressions. Over 500,000 and half of these invalidated ballots were found to have lipstick smudges apparently affixed as ladies licked the envelopes containing their ballot papers.

But it should not be expected that a Roman Holy would go to the polls without looking her best. Lipstick is the queen of all cosmetics.

The ladies were using cosmetics in 3,000 B.C. recorded in the crude forms, perhaps; perhaps they were more refined and have been quite the siren of history if she had not used perfumes

Snolygoster Is Defined

(Ottawa Journal)

Mr. Hagey Truman, who used to live at the White House in Washington, discussing his political opponents the other day in terms of something less than admiration observed that some Republicans were "snollygosters." Then he volunteered the information that a snollygoster was "a politician with the brains out of wedlock," which gives us a clue to the shorter and simpler word that Harry Truman had on the tip of his tongue.

But down south, in Georgia, a chap named Ham, H. W. C. Ham, has devised a small gale for the newspapers the next day by his claim that the word had quite a different meaning. His father, a public lecturer, had invented the word and Ham Senior used it, said Ham Junior, to describe "a political also-ran, a little man always running for the job and big for him and never getting elected."

Well, both of these eminent authorities are wrong. The snollygoster (spelled with one "l" and that is immaterial) is described in a book now on sale as a satirizing beast of the southern cypress swamps.

The book is called "Fearsome Creatures of the Lumberwoods," by William T. Cox, a well known curdling drawings by Coert Dubois, and it was published in Washington in 1910 with an advertisement headed "50 to 90 Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo," and all who know the fellow-ship of the Hoo-Hoo will be loaned to us is the property of Mr. A. E. Piper, 1106 Wilbrod Boulevard in Ottawa.

Mr. Cox describes the snollygoster as "a savage and dangerous animal" of "enormous proportions." He has a voracious appetite. It resembles a huge alligator, but its hide, unlike it is without legs or fins. But nature, ever thoughtful of its creatures, has provided the snollygoster with means of locomotion—a powerful tail which is as long as it is tall which can drive it through the swamp mud at a terrific rate. The snollygoster has a long spike standing erect in the middle of its back. Certain animals, especially Negroes, are its favorites for food, and the creature catches them and impales them on the spike for storage until it acquires a taste for the victim's flesh.

If this little book was Mr. Truman's bedside reading he had no end of plenty of fresh material for him. The snollygoster, for example, a gumberoo, which is a beast the size of a bear that eats as it goes, and a hornbill with a hide so tough and elastic that bullets bounce off it like rain. The wapaloosie, the cactus cat, the squonk (an unhappy beast which literally dissolves itself in its own tears), the whirling whimpus, the ungainly American whintosser, the hyampom hog (Mr. Cox says that this is a colossus beats out of the folklore of the woods which Mr. Cox has made his own.

So there is Mr. Truman's snollygoster. It is a disappointing lack of lovely words he may yet throw at the Hoo-Hoo, but it is at least one of these days that the gentleman from North Carolina will be able to call a spade by approximately what he means.

The PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A newspaperman well known across Canada is one of the most unusual fellows in the whole country. But whenever he is cornered and asked to explain he deliberately makes a bad one.

"Make one good speech," he says, "at a home and school club, Kiwanis or to a convention and calling Hitler names and you're sunk. In any audience are a dozen avid members of speakers' committees on the lookout for orations. They get to work. The chairman of the committee-men don't approach you. They work through your wife and your brother. So you make another good speech. By this time, your name is mud in the town and word spreads fast.

It will take you five years to live down one or two good speeches. If you turn people down, you are a stinker. If you continue to make speeches, you have a dog's life. And why get started? I've known thousands every time he puts a pen to paper, but I've never addressing one hundred or five hundred?"

So for twenty years, he has invariably made bad speeches on those few occasions he could not refuse. This gives him the status of who know what a gifted character he is, a speech of unrelenting, or in a Pullman smoker. But he knows what he is doing.

Another of my friends, a manufacturing editor, was invited to give an address on principles of selecting the news to a very responsible group of people which offers a series of lectures over the fall and winter season. He considered hard and labored in a field to which he was a stranger, and a most impressive account of the inner workings of a newspaper, with learned and moving references to the UN and other large-scale problems of a newspaper's routine day.

He was finished, a middle-aged gentleman with a lean and hungry look, expression rose amid the audience.

"Sir," he said, "what is your opinion of vivisection?"

The 24th letter of the alphabet stands for something here, but if you don't mind I'll explain later on.

let's keep this combab as sensible as possible, at least until we get a glimmer of intelligence — aw, what's the use.

The other day I described the quaint way in which a member of the weaker sex men's club — she had what she assured other members was just a miserable "cold" — behaved when another woman, with an I.Q. above the average promptly vacated her place at Mrs. X's table and told the hostess she could not risk exposure to whatever illegitimate infection Mrs. X might have.

It is unfortunate for the health and happiness of the American people that there are still so many intescluded Mrs. X's who are so few endowed with uncommon sense that the club member who declined to sit within conversational spray range of the ignorant Mrs. X.

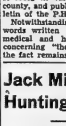
You know, or you ought to know, that there are only a handful everyday work of doctors, medical and surgical, who have studies and treatment of the C R I pronounced kree, the Common Respiratory Illness, to its many complications and sequels. That is not just my opinion but the estimate made by the U.S. Public Health Service after a survey by experts in many human and veterinal areas in various part of the country, and published in the bulletin of the P.H.S.

Notwithstanding the countless words written and spoken by medical and health authorities concerning "the common cold" the fact remains that no medical or health authority can define such a pathological entity.

If your favorite quack says your ailment is "the common cold" he acquiesces with your ready-made diagnosis he or she is playing it as a shrewd quack should—no matter what the indisposition or illness proves to be the quack can explain that the "cold" developed into it because your "resistance" was down—and being a gullible geek you'll think the hokum is reasonable enough.

Listen, knucklehead, year after year you have read funny stories by Aunt Polly or Uncle Pete about expeditions of eminent scientists setting out in search of the cause of the common cold"—funds for the project being supplied as "grants" by this or that pharmaceutical manufacturers. Well, maybe you haven't been interested enough to read these perennial reports, but I have—indeed, I have collected ignorant Mrs. X's, who is no one strange feature about these expeditions is that they invariably not newsworthy, namely, that never they are launched they are never again heard from — in Yankeeland, that is.

The reason why why did such an expedition come back after a year or so with scientific investigation of the so-called "common cold" but published a report of its findings in some Indian and river basin areas in various part of the country, and published in the bulletin of the P.H.S.



Notwithstanding the countless words written and spoken by medical and health authorities concerning "the common cold" the fact remains that no medical

MUSICAL HUMILITY

One of the most amazing figures of our time is Arturo Toscvanini, now in his 87th year. Not only is he one of the greatest conductors of all time, but he is one of the most modest. Like all great men he is wrapped up in his work. He has the ability in which to think upon his greatness.

I once sat within a few feet of this conductor, where I could watch every movement that he made—those hands, that facial expression, that erect body of his figure, it was all melded into perfection. Even the musical composition inspired. He seemed to me to be a man lost out of the world just communing with the soul of art itself.

I do not know but I know next to nothing about it, so I can not write understandingly of Toscanini, but the greatness of the man himself is so evident that I can appreciate what it is that he is so greatly beloved! I like the statement by one who once played in his great orchestra who said that he had "musical humility." This is a quality that belongs to all great men and every one's personal humility.

Toscanini himself, as a physical specimen, is remarkable. Arthur Judson described him as "one of the greatest wonders of our time," and I am sure no one could dispute that fact. There is a burst of youth about him, and a spiritual grandeur. He is as young as there is music in the world.

The most beautiful thing it is to live in an age with such men as Toscanini. There is a strength, confidence and assurance for each one of us. Their silent force gives to us a sense of our own courage. All life about such people is transferred to us as a free gift. As John Drinkwater wrote in his poem "Abraham Lincoln," through the two chroniclers: "When the high heart we magnify, and the years vision enlarges, and we worship greatness passing by, ourselves are great."

The Liar and His Wife

CHAPTER II

The nature of that praying was unique in the beginning church. It was a kind of communal prayer, of choral unity. Peter and John had come through their first arrest and trial with honor, and their fellow Christians were filled with triumphant assurance of divine protection. Lifting up their voice to God, they spoke in unison, "with one accord," wrote St. Luke:

"Lord, Thou are He that didst make heaven and earth, the sea, and all things that are in them.

"Who, by the Holy Ghost, by the mouth of our father David, Thy servant, hast said: Why did the Gentiles rage, and the people meditate vain things. The kings of the earth stood up, and the princes assembled together against the Lord and His Christ."

For of a truth there assembled together in this city against Thy holy child Jesus, whom Thou anointed, Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, to do what Thy hand and Thy counsel decreed to be done.

"And now, Lord, behold their threatenings, and grant unto Thy servants, that with all the confidence that they speak Thy word, by stretching forth Thy hand to cures, and signs and wonders to be done by the name of Thy Holy Son Jesus."

And as he prayed for greater boldness to speak the truth, Peter marveled at the courage which the Holy Spirit had already bestowed on him, and was grateful to God for the change that had come over him since the shameful night when he denied his Master. And he gloried in the dauntless faith which filled all around him.

So started a blessed, unspecialized relationship among those first Christians — a community of loving kindness; not the companionship of hermits and eremites, abandoning man in order to live alone with God, but an active participation of life in cities and countryside. They were in the world but not of it, as they sought together to know God, to love and serve Him, and to love their fellow men as they lived themselves. Theirs was the only true or decent communalism ever known, and because it was not mere common sharing of goods and services but a sharing of Christian faith, in ideal and practice, it prospered to the astonishment of unbelievers. These Christians were, as St. Luke phrased it in The Acts, of one heart and of one soul. Not out of them ever said that anything which he possessed belonged to him, or that it should be considered his own. They had "all things in common."

The blessing and the miracle of such living and sharing was that no one among them ever lacked for anything: Some of those converts of the early months of the Church were rich men. Once they knew Jesus and His teachings and had been baptized, they found within them the grace and resolution to one moneyed man had lacked before, some years before, Jesus had said to him: "Sell all you have and give to the poor; come, follow me." Now, eager converts sold their lands and their houses, their farms and vineyards, all their assets, with shrewd and thrifty bargaining like the good business men they were. Any they turned the profits over to the keeper of the purse, the successor of Judas of evil memory. Every mile and pound and shekel and drachma was laid down at the apostles' feet, to be used for the well-being of all. To every man distribution was made according to his need, and all were housed and fed and clad sufficiently. The Church which was to carry the blessing of Christ to the world flourished, "and with great power the apostles gave witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus; and great grace was upon them all."

A man called Ananias and his wife Sapphira were to make the first trouble among the believers.

Ananias lived in Jerusalem and was a man of substance. His wife had from birth been so exactly that she was called Sapphira, meaning "beautiful." This happily favored couple wanted to become Christians. In spite of danger, Ananias the landowner and his wife Sapphira told that they too wished to be baptized and wanted to put their fortune into the hands of the common treasurer. Their forthright declaration impressed the onlookers as great evidence of the change that came over people once they embraced the new teachings.

Peter told Ananias and Sapphira just the way to go about it. They should go home and sell all they owned, bring back the cash, and give it to the cause. Smiling happily, Ananias and Sapphira hurried away.

They sold their land, with no Christian witnesses to the transaction. Then Ananias alone went back to that sacred Upper Room of the Last Supper. In front of Peter, he stooped and laid down a bundle.

Peter looked down at the offering, one corner of the rolled cloth touching the toe of his sandal. By the power of the Holy Ghost which dwelt in him, he looked at the gift on the stone floor, and of the small face of Ananias, who without asking, knew the truth.

Ananias was cheating! He had decided to give to Christianity only a part of the price he and his wife had received. The other part they had secretly agreed to keep for themselves.

No one had forced them to surrender their wealth. Freely they had offered to follow the rules, then schemed to go back on their bargain and lie their way into Christianity. From God, who had forfeited on them every fruit of creation, they sought to withhold not only part of their coins but part of their souls.

In sonorous scary the great voice of Peter echoed in the Upper Room:

"Ananias!"

The deceiver began to tremble. "Yes, Peter!"

"Why has Satan filled your heart to lie to the Holy Ghost?"

A gasp came from all the watching Christians. Lie to the Holy Ghost? Of all sins, Jesus had hated hypocrisy most of all. Could Peter possibly be mistaken?

"And to keep back part of the price of the land?" boomed Peter, inexorable in his consuming indignation. "While it remained wasn't it your own? After it was sold, wasn't it still in your power? Why have you conceived this thing in your heart, Ananias? You have not lied to men—you have lied to God!"

Ananias, exposed in his sordid and unnecessary lie, turned pale as mountain milk. Greater trembling seized his tall frame. He swayed sideways and back and fell into a heap.

Ananias, lizz and chest, the hypocrite who had tried to hold out on God, was dead at the feet of the apostle, his gaping mouth and staring eyes close to his gift.

Solemn fear fell upon all who witnessed this ghastly fatality. Had God stricken Ananias dead with his lie still in his mouth? Was he chosen given him to do penance? Or in that last moment might he understood the enormity of his offense? Had he realized that no man can hold back from God who is the Author of all man owns? Had perhaps his heart swooned with remorse in the presence of the Holy Ghost, and stopped beating in sorrow?

They were still asking questions among themselves, as some of the younger men hastened forward, wound the body of Ananias in a sheet, and carried him out and buried him, having just looked for Sapphira, no doubt, and found her missing from her house. Possibly after being turned down once, the funeral procession in the street, for they know she, too, was coming to the Cenacle, leaving her house shut behind her.

Sapphira climbed the stone stairway to the Upper Room, looked around, and then asked death that had struck down Ananias there, only three hours before.

Peter instantly asked her;

"Tell me, Sapphira, whether you sold the land for so much— and he named the price Ananias had reported.

Yes," said Sapphira, full of duplicity. "For so much exactly."

Peter shook his head and ran a tanned hand through his beard.

"Why have you agreed together," he marveled, "to tempt the spirit of the Lord? Behold, the feet of those who have buried your husband are at the door— and they shall carry you out!"

In that same instant, Sapphira, too, was seized with a trembling. Her lovely face became wan and fearful. Without a word, she fell dead at Peter's feet.

Many who had witnessed that tragic scene began to ponder on a curious analogy. Their thoughts darted from Ananias and Sapphira to another man and wife who began life with even greater blessings and upwards of years before: To Adam, the man who owned the earth, and Eve, whose beauty God's hands had fashioned, Adam and Eve, proud and ungrateful, had also thought to trick the Creator, and they had lost paradise.

Ananias and Sapphira had lost their lives. Only Jesus Christ, the merciful, would know if the love they had for God in the new dispensation had lost heaven as well.

Senate Group Calls Hearing In White Case

By JOHN CHADWICK

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate investigators looked to the justice department today for answers on how much information the Truman administration had linking Harry Dexter White's co-workers with Red espionage.

The Senate internal security subcommittee called a public hearing (2 p.m. EST) to put into the record documentary evidence requested from Attorney - General Herbert Brownell.

Brownell rekindled the Communists - in - government controversy. Brownell charged in a speech Nov. 6 that, despite FBI reports pointing to White as a spy, former president Truman promoted White in 1946 from assistant secretary of the treasury to U.S. director of the International Monetary Fund.

Truman, in a country-wide radio-TV reply, accused Brownell of "cheap political trickery" and said he permitted the promotion of White, now dead, to keep him and others accused as spies under surveillance.

But FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover, testifying before the Senate subcommittee, said he did not agree in advance to such an arrangement and that it hampered the FBI's watch on White.

TRACE SUBVERSION

Sub-committee counsel Robert Morris said Sunday the committee is looking into alleged Communist infiltration of years ago because it wants to trace a pattern of government subversion which Communists may still be following.

He said the sub-committee has "several things" to ask Igor Gouzenko, onetime Russian embassy code clerk at Ottawa who in 1945 exposed the body of Russian spies in Canada with contacts in the United States.

The sub-committee has asked the Canadian government again, after being turned down once, for personal procession in the street, for permission to question Gouzenko. External Affairs Minister Pearson is working on a reply, expected to be ready today or Monday.

TO SEND STATEMENT

Sunday sub-committee chairman William benner (Rep. Ind.) disclosed he has asked State Secretary Dulles to forward to Canada an "authenticated copy of a signed statement" by Gouzenko in support of the renewed request.

The Canadian government's position has been that Gouzenko has nothing more to tell. But in the statement Gouzenko, living in Canada under police protection, said he might be able to give useful advice to Jenner's group.

At today's hearing the subcommittee planned to record data about V. Frank Coe, Harold Glasser, Victor Perlo, Solomon Adler and possibly others.

Coe, Glasser, Perlo and Adler are former employees of the treasury department's monetary research division. All were named by White. Coe and Glasser later succeeded White as director of the division.

A SPECIAL MESSAGE to CUSTOMERS of the B of M

Figures

SPEAK LOUDER THAN

Words

Words are hard put to tell the full story of Canadian achievement in 1953. During this past year, Canada took new strides forward in almost every field of endeavor. These strides toward the future were made possible through an investment — by Canadians in all walks of life — of time, talent . . . and money.

How important a part your money played in Canada's progress in 1953 can be seen from the following highlights taken from the B of M's Annual Report for this year. Printed here, these figures — as they did all through 1953 — speak louder than words.

DEPOSITS: At the end of the Bank's year, October 31st, 1953, over two million Canadians had $2,226,960,333 in deposits with the B of M — money which has been kept hard at work with Canadian enterprise of every description and size. Although much of this money belongs to institutions and business firms, well over half of these deposits represent the savings of everyday Canadians — savings that, day by day, are working for you . . . and for Canada.

LOANS: Your bank is playing an important role in our expanding economy by means of loans to Canadians of every calling — farmers, miners, fishermen, oil men, lumbermen, ranchers — to individual and business enterprises and to provincial and municipal governments. As of October 31st, B of M loans totalled $857,762,561 — the highest figure in the history of the Bank. In a thousand ways, these dollars played their part in maintaining full employment and in sustaining — or bettering — our standard of living.

INVESTMENTS: At the close of the year the B of M had $864,057,948 invested in high-grade government bonds and other public securities which have a ready market. This money is helping to finance government projects for the betterment of the country and the welfare of Canadians at large. Other securities held by the Bank — mainly short-term credits to industry — bring total investments to $982,490,826.

The message these figures express is a confident and encouraging one. Actually, it is your message...for it is made possible by your savings.

FROWN ON SLACKS

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — Four Russians, members of a "cultural" delegation now visiting Sweden, said Friday the thing they like most about the modern world is the wearing of slacks by women. They noted many women in slacks in Sweden and Germany but in France "women have more taste." Russian women do not generally wear slacks.

Lady-in-Waiting Taking 26 Gowns Made by Can. Firm

Fashion Flashes

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Some 26 gowns designed by Angele Delanghe, resident couturier at a west end store controlled by Canada's Garfield Weston (Fortnum and Mason) went into the wardrobe trunks of Lady Alice Egerton, the Queen's lady-in-waiting on her round-the-world tour.

Flame red and purple, sand gold, navy and cool floral prints were chosen by this elegant slender woman as often seen walking behind the Queen.

"Many points must be remembered in the choice and fitting of these gowns," Miss Delanghe said in an interview. Colors and styles must always be less noticeable than those worn by the Queen. It is also important that all outfits look as well behind as they do in front and for such a long tour they must be almost unwearable.

SIMPLE EVENING GOWN

All these points were kept in mind when Miss Delanghe designed a simple, flowing floral print organza evening gown with apple-green background. It has camisole neckline and even the shoulder straps are narrow. Inserts spaced across the skirt from waist to hem are cream-colored. Each petal is made from the dress material and hand-stitched so that even if the garment were crushed it still look well.

Lady Egerton picked more than one strapless gown from Miss Delanghe's fashion collection — but tradition demands, that straps be added. These range from narrow cording to two-inch widths.

Her brightest ball gown is a flame red in chantilly lace semi-crinoline with simple, clinging lines and wide hem. An intriguing point is the deep V-back matching suede velvet that fringes and weights the skirt two-thirds of the way round. The centre back skirt is all lace, making a perfect train.

Lady Egerton has packed three of her Coronation gowns, including a beaded purple crinoline made from 75 yards of fine ruched nylon tulle studded with brilliants.

INFORMALITY STRESSED

Most of her gowns, however, are simple. When the tour was planned, the Queen insisted that the accent on dress for all but the biggest state balls should be informal. Dinner jacket and evening suit will not be essential on most occasions—and for royal garden parties the rule is "wear what you please."

Lady Egerton finds, however, that formality in her dress is best. She has packed only one cotton style. Most of her gowns are in the light-weight French and Swiss materials favored by the Belgian-born couturier.

An embroidered Swiss lawn in black and white has been chosen for a cocktail dress with Eton jacket. A rich brown embroidered lawn with stripes of cream and shoulder-wide "V" neckline makes a garden party number, elegant in contrast to the pastel shades the Queen favors for such occasions.

Lady Egerton has chosen much navy including a pure wool coat with long sleeves, dress and skirt fullness swinging from shoulder-level pleats that start low on the hip. Two or three wool outfits have been included.

Skating and Tennis Club Enjoys Party

The Quinte Skating and Tennis Club held its annual party Wednesday evening in the banquet hall at the Masonic Temple.

From the large number playing bridge Mrs. H. Mott and Mrs. A. R. Reid won high field for prizes with Mr. R. E. Barry and Mr. A. R. Reid winning for the men.

Spot dance prizes were captured by Mrs. (Jean and Mason) west into the wardrobe trunks of Lady Alice Egerton, the Queen's lady-in-waiting on her round-the-world tour.

Dr. Law Outlines 'Purpose Of University Women's Clubs'

On Thursday evening, Mrs. D. L. MacKinnon, president of the University Women's Club of Belleville and District, was hostess to the club members at a reception, held at her home, 113 George street, in honor of Dr. Martha Law, of Toronto, president of the Canadian Federation of University Women.

At seven o'clock, 48 sat down to a delicious chicken dinner at the New Queens Hotel. At the head table were Dr. Martha Law, the present executive, and past presidents, Mrs. W. J. Doyle, Mrs. A. C. Locke, Mrs. R. A. Pringle, and Miss Eric Crout.

During the short business meeting $25 was voted for the Relief Fund of the International Federation of University Women. It was also decided that the Christmas party for members should be on the second Thursday in December. Mrs. Mac Arthur will be in charge of the program. Miss Milda Dandeneau, or Miss Mary Doyle, the membership committee, will be happy to hear from any new members wishing to attend.

Following the dinner, the party adjourned to the home of Mrs. R. A. Pringle, Front Road, for the pleasure of hearing Dr. Law.

A charming and able speaker, with the cause of the C.F.U.W. sincerely at heart, Dr. Law held the interest of her listeners from beginning to end. Since she had this summer attended the conference of the I.F.U.W. in London, England, and the conference of the C.F.U.W. in Winnipeg, and had just completed a tour of the University Women's clubs of western Canada, Dr. Law had many items of amusing interest and of serious import to relate. The "C.F.U.W.," she reported, "now has 80 member organizations, and is rapidly growing to be one of the largest women's organizations in Canada."

PURPOSE OF CLUBS

"The main purpose of the U.W. Clubs, should be the raising of scholarships to help high school women graduates on to university. At present $40,000 is raised every three years across Canada for this purpose.

The C.F.U.W. makes an annual grant of $200 to a travelling library to reach some remote part of Canada. This library will be now in the Prince Albert area.

The C.P.U.W. also pays the dues to the International Federation of University Women so that each member of a U.W.C. is also a member of the I.F.U.W. which includes members from 32 countries.

Dr. Law clearly explained the organization and the aims and hopes of the C.F.U.W. to give a deeper knowledge of this body and a wider horizon in the minds of the audience.

In conclusion, Dr. Law stated, "Every woman who has had the privilege of a university education should feel it her loyal duty to belong to a University Women's Club, to give leadership in her community, and to assist in all cultural pursuits."

After a lively question period Mrs. Douglas Burr, immediate past-president, graciously thanked Dr. Law for the inspiration and the pleasure of her visit to the Belleville Club, and wished her every success in her coming tour of visits to each of the University Women's Clubs in eastern Canada.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HOW CAN THIS WIFE SAVE HER THREATENED MARRIAGE?

DEAR BEATRICE FAIRFAX:

With which one, I sometimes wonder, does most of the responsibility lie? When a wife declared that her husband's infidelity has killed all her love for him?

On the surface, it would seem that total blame must fall upon the man who has brought heartbreak and disillusionment to the woman who trusted him. But, while I do not for one moment glose over the horror of a wife betrayed, I am not so sure that, if it leaves the marriage a total wreck, it is entirely due to the husband's unfaithfulness. On the contrary, I think that in most cases a large part of the responsibility for what happened rewards lies with the wife.

For one thing, she may magnify some relatively unimportant piece of behavior on her husband's part into an unwarranted assumption of actual physical infidelity. For another, she may let anger, resentment and bitterness indefinitely dictate her attitude toward him, thereby making the re-establishment of any normal relationship between them all but impossible. She has been wronged, she feels, and therefore she should never be allowed to forget it.

And for still another thing, while she understandably may be deserted or reproached or otherwise distressed when the crisis first broke over her, leaving her husband in no doubt of how she felt about his new love, there have also to repressed her emotions as to give them an outlet to adjust themselves.

These are the thoughts that run through my mind in considering the letter or one wife who tells me that when she found he "deceived and betrayed" her and so had lost her feeling for him.

"I married awfully young," she writes "and loved my husband passionately, and he always seemed wrapped up in me. We both worked hard trying to get ahead.

THE OTHER WOMAN

"Then, about two years ago, another woman came to me and told me she and my husband were in love with each other. It had come from him, I could have endured it better. He admitted to me that he had taken this woman out, but said he was not in love with her. While at that time, a divorce seemed the only way out, I thought that perhaps we should try all over but, to my sorrow, it hasn't worked. At times we seem close together again, but other times we seem so far apart.

"I've pretended all these months that everything is all right, and he tells me he couldn't stand it if he lost me, but I don't know how much longer I can hold out this way. I try hard to keep myself busy in order to forget, but even after two years I cry each day. I wish I could meet my husband at the door when he comes home from work and throw my arms around him as I used to do, but my feet are lead and my arms are like icicles."

Now, in the first place, of what exactly, did this husband's infidelity consist? Did he actually have an affair with the woman or merely take her out? All his wife says is that he admitted taking her out but said he was not in love with her. While I would not minimize the hurt she felt, is it possible that she has written exaggerated the importance of the incident? This, of course, I do not know.

But even supposing there was an affair—and again let no one assume I belittle such a thing—if she really loved her husband as much as she says she did when she married him and through the succeeding years, could one such episode really kill mature love and devotion? I do not believe it could. Wound it cruelly, yes; but if the love was a vital thing, it could recover.

What it seems to me has happened here is that the wife has repressed so much of her hurt and resentment that they have built up into a monstrous barrier through which she cannot pass to rejoin her husband in a normal relationship. What she needs is to tear down this barrier by being completely honest with him about the way she still feels and asking him to be understanding and patient while she is readjusting herself. There's no suggestion whatever in the letter that there has ever been a second similar episode, and when he tells her that he "couldn't stand it" if he lost her, he is doubtless absolutely sincere.

All in all, I feel these two have a very good chance of bringing their past happiness to life again if the wife will resist and to her husband in honesty and yearning for help in doing her part. I can think of nothing that could be more effective in making him want to do his.

Beauty

By HELEN JAMIESON

WALK—FOR BEAUTY'S SAKE.

Don't you love this season of the year? Does the crisp air invite you to put on your sweater boots, get out and walk? Echo answers: "No"! Walking is something that just isn't being done any more.

If you are the boss of the domestic work and have to take the family cherubs out for a daily airing, make the most of it for yourself. If you are a career girl, run around the block a few times at the luncheon hour, or walk part of the way home in the evening. It will be good for both your figure and your complexion. Vitality is an essential quality of beauty, and you won't have it without a certain amount of outdoor life.

While walking, be sure to breathe deeply. Draw fresh air by force right in, and, as you step briskly along, inhale deeply through the nostrils; exhale through the lips. Time your breathing to your steps. So many forget to an inhalation, so many forget to the exhalation. You could think of shelling out your hard-earned cash for cosmetics, but you never think of the cosmetic value of fresh air—and it costs you nothing!

Walking is especially good for the girl with the paid conviction. She should also indulge in outdoor sports because pallor may be a manifestation of a sedentary, slip upsetlife.

It's surprising how many types of poor walkers there are. There's

A Strong Team in The Kitchen

By Mary Moore

Old Noah was sitting quietly on the train listening unabashed to the conversation in the seat ahead of her.

"I can do the everyday things, but Sherwin—that's my husband—thinks of the extras."

"Don't be makin' the thaladith! I alwayth make the thaladith for Nath. The thargin the doctor's know how to make thaladth any more thinbe I've taken over."

What I concluded was that a harmless little train flirtation was going on with the topics of conversation being the husband or the girl, and the wife of the limping young man.

It took all my self-control not to stand up and lean over to get a better look. But I tried to look like a large, settled fat saver-ondropping.

I have been thinking of asking you how much you encourage—by subtle or obvious means—your husband to help with the cooking?

In my opinion the home life of a family is only successful to the degree that all of the members share in all of the work.

If a man knows how to iron a shirt, (at least both a thalad) or broil a steak then he appreciates your meals and cooks more, for he knows the effort you put into making them perfect, and that you are hoping for a precious bit of praise from him.

Never turn down offers of help the waddler — usually a heavyweight — and let the trundler shoulders, arms and even the head muscles and tones the legs forward. There's the jerky walker with toes turned out, who bends the knees. The swing of the legs should be from the hips. And there's the shoulder-slinger, turning from side to side. A twin sister of the hip-swinger, usually an exhibitionist with a good figure, and, of course, there's the pounder. Her feet pound the pavement heavily. This habit produces a forward movements, that are most unattractive.

Don't be one of these. Don't saunter, either. Walk! It's the brisk step that counts!

from your husbands. Even if he is in your way, or takes too long or is apt to turn out a failure, encourage his every idea. Even get out of the kitchen if he likes to do his cooking without being watched.

If you never get even the tiniest nibble of an offer of help ask for help when you are beating some heavy batter like the fruit cake. Your muscles are aching. You do need a strong right arm. I, and I loved her so very, very much. However, I don't want to be impolite to anyone who speaks about her, and I certainly don't want to seem ungrateful for kind words of sympathy. But what could I say that would be simple and "enough," for most people I would meet, and for coworkers? —Leah.

All you need answer to these kind words of sympathy is the really appreciative "Thank you" that you feel. But do say your "Thank you" with a friendly sincerity. And, for more grace, add the name, "Thank you, Florence." Or, also simple and easy-to-say, "Thank you, Miss Clark. You are very kind, and I appreciate it." People with even a bit of sensitivity will sense that it is not easy for you to speak further of your beloved mother and of her so-recent death.

THE GIRL'S PARENTS SHOW GOOD MANNERS, GOOD SENSE

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

I'll be sixteen years old in three months, and my parents now allow me to go to the movies or to small parties with a group of school friends on Friday or Saturday evenings. But either my mother or father waits up until I return, and when I invite the boy to come in for a coke or sandwich-and-coffee, they stay to talk until the boy leaves. Do you think this is necessary or proper, as they insist it is?—Anita M.

Yes, ma'am, this is the proper and right thing for them to do. And although you obviously are not grateful, and probably won't be persuaded to be grateful to them for their loving devotion and protection, you should be, dear girl. And you may find out that your beau, even though such

"THANK YOU," GRACIOUSLY SAID, TO ACKNOWLEDGE WORDS OF SYMPATHY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My mother died recently, and I am completely tongue-tied and at a loss what to reply to people who express their sympathy to me. I find it terribly difficult to speak about her or her going-away, to anyone, for we were such wonderful friends, she and I, and I loved her so very, very much. However, I don't want to be impolite to anyone who speaks about her, and I certainly don't want to seem ungrateful for kind words of sympathy. Just what could I say that would be simple and "enough," for most people I would meet, and for co-workers?—Leah.

And you may find out that your beau, even though such a young man, may very well be proud of knowing a girl who has such mannerly and careful parents.

IT'S THE MAN WHO SHOULD GIVE DIRECTIONS TO THE DRIVER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Last evening my date to go to dinner and the movies was a young man I had met at a resort last summer. This was our first date in the city. Coming home in a taxi I gave the directions to the taxi driver, since it was the address of my home. My date was certainly sarcastic about this, saying that it is the man who gives the directions to the driver, that the girl should never do this. Who was right?—Anne S.

Your date was right in his manners point of view . . . in that it is the man, not the woman, who gives a direction to the driver of a taxicab. But of course he was not right in making such a point of it, certainly not in being sarcastic, or in embarrassing you. He may have felt impatient with you and your impulse to "take over" the privilege-of-direction . . . but he shouldn't even have mentioned it.

WOMAN, GIRL SHOULD WEAR A HAT AT DAYTIME CHURCH WEDDING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it necessary for a woman guest at a daytime wedding in a church—morning or afternoon—to wear a hat?—Elizabeth.

Yes . . . to be correctly dressed, and also demonstrate a proper respect for the church in which the wedding is taking place, a woman should wear a hat at a daytime wedding. And this applies also to a girl, even a very young girl. (At an evening wedding, too, most churches require some sort of "head-covering.")

United Church W. A. Sponsors Most Successful Bazaar, Tea

SHANNONVILLE—The bright sunny weather of Wednesday afternoon added much to the success of the annual bazaar and tea under the auspices of the Woman's Association of Shannonville United Church. This event was held in the Sunday School hall, with its decorations of Christmas streamers, tinsel decorated miniature Christmas trees and colored lights, which contributed towards the spirit of the Yuletide season.

A GRACIOUS WELCOME

Mrs. L. W. Scott and Mrs. Kenneth Vivian graciously welcomed the many guests attending and Mrs. Scott officially opened the bazaar.

The tea table, which extended partly across the end of the hall, was attractively covered by a beautiful hand-made linen and lace tablecloth, centred by a bowl of azalea blossoms, flanked by tapers in silver holders. Mrs. Allan MacDonald and Mrs. Lillian Curl presided over the silver tea services.

The smartet tables, assembled in the centre of the room, were covered by snowy white cloths and centred by crystal vases of yellow chrysanthemums.

Those who served the dainty sandwiches, pickles, cookies, cake, fruit salad and tea included Mrs. George Osborne, Mrs. son. The contests were well Gene Stratton, Mrs. Malcolm Little, Mrs. Raymond Clarke, Mrs. Jim Harrington and Miss Jean Ellis.

The home cooking table, which was a most appetizing picture of delicious looking cakes, pies, tarts, buns, many varieties of cookies and other goodies was managed by Mrs. Elmer Vivian, Mrs. Frank Dorstator and Mrs. Arthur Houston, who did a flourishing business.

The country store conveners were: Mrs. W. D. Roberston and Mrs. Robert McFarlane, assisted by Mrs. McCullough, a visitor from Regina, Sask. Here to be found were, pie pumpkins, Spanish onions, potatoes, turnips, other vegetables and potted plants with Africna violets predominating.

There were jars of home canned pickles, relishes, jams, jellies, tomatoes, pumpkin, something for everyone present from which to choose.

Mrs. Claude Clarke and Mrs. Everett Stratton presided over table of an exceptionally nice variety of aprons, which were of many colors, styles and sizes. There were ready buyers for them as they are always in great demand.

The candy table, convened by Miss Sarah Stickney assisted by Mrs. R. Wescott, with its delicious home-made maple cream, chocolate fudge, peppermint patties and other confections was most tempting to those with a sweet tooth.

Mrs. Harry Sine, Mrs. Earl Vivian and Mrs. Saul McFarlane presided over the fancy work and novelty booth with its large display of handicraft. It included a Dresden plate quilt, made by the ladies of the society; a broadcloth quilt top in the fan pattern which was pieced and donated by Mrs. Allan MacDonald. There were also lovely embroidered pillow cases, novel potholders, towels, pin cushions, linen handkerchiefs with crocheted edges, crocheted doilies, fancy knit socks and mittens, and many other articles. Parents Greet PoW Who First Refused Freedom

By HERB ALTSCHULL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Cpl. Edward Dickenson, the prisoner-of-war who changed his mind, came home Saturday to a fervent reunion with his mother and father.

Dickenson's mother, Bessie, raised both hands into the air and shouted: "My son, my son, bless the Lord!"

It was the first time Dickenson had seen his mother in more than three years, and for a moment a score of reporters and photographers stood mutely by.

Then photo bulbs snapped and questions flew but the Dickenson, mother, father, son and sister, kept on embracing and weeping.

"I thought he was dead," cried Mrs. Dickenson. "But the Lord has given me back my son."

Ed's father, 73-year-old Van Buren Dickenson, kissed the 23-year-old soldier on the cheek.

"God bless you," said the elderly farmer from Cracker's Neck, Va.

The family had about 10 minutes together at Andrews air force base. Then Ed was placed in a bus and sent off to the army's Walter Reed medical centre for a physical checkup—"just like any other PoW," said an army officer.

"It feels wonderful to be home," Ed said.

WILL RE-ENLIST

Then, in response to a question: "Yes, I'm definitely going to re-enlist. I haven't spent any time in the army. I've been in prison practically the whole time."

"Oh, I hope he doesn't go back in," said his mother. "All we want is to have him back with us on the farm."

It was the first trip to Washington for the Dickenson family, who hadn't been away from their home in the southwestern Virginia mountains in 25 years.

They'll stay in Washington for a few days sight-seeing and they hope to take their son home with them. He's due for a 30-day leave.

Dickenson was one of 23 U.S. soldiers who refused repatriation after the Korean truce was signed. He later changed his mind and asked neutral Indian guards to turn him back to the United Nations side.

MURDER STORY A LIE

MONTREAL (CP)—Quebec police said Friday a man charged with bank robbery had tried unsuccessfully to convince them that he was responsible for the murder of a man whose dismembered body was found in an east-end lane Oct. 28. His story was so convincing it took four detectives and a lie detector nearly 24 hours to disprove it. The man eventually admitted he preferred death to a long prison sentence.

MERRY XMAS BY TV

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian troops in Korea this year will be able to send personal Christmas greetings, by television. The army announced Friday that several teams of cameramen from the National Film Board and the CBC will tour units of the 25th Canadian infantry brigade. Their interviews on film with the soldiers will be carried over the CBC television net work.

Biography of a Pontiac

The Story that Proves...

Illustrated—Laurentian 4-Door Sedan

Pontiac Economy...Dependability
Mile after Mile, Year after Year

Yes, Pontiac gives you more carefree miles of driving at lower cost than any other comparable automobile. Mile after mile, year after year it keeps telling a story of singing power, forthright dependability, lavish driver comfort, and extreme ease of operation.

In city traffic, or on the highway, it handles like a thoroughbred—quick to respond to your lightest touch on the accelerator or the slightest turn of the wheel. In fact, you must drive a Pontiac yourself to realize this famous car's amazing performance.

Take, for instance, Pontiac's feel of the road. It gives an exultant confidence on tight corners, heavy roads, or winter weather. Power Steering (optional at extra cost) adds an even greater knowledge of complete control security.

The Standard or optional Automatic Transmissions actually push you back in your seat during smooth but whip-quick get-aways, or when you need instant passing speed.

As for fuel economy, Pontiac is a wonder! You'll notice right away that a tank of gas lasts an exceptionally long time.

But fuel economy is just one chapter of Pontiac's life story. Through technological advances and pride of craftsmanship, Pontiac engineers build an unusual dependability into every one of the 29 models. You'll drive for miles and years longer with surprisingly few service bills to pay.

Either the Standard Pontiac Six or Straight Eight Engine delivers surging and efficient power—instantly when needed for fast pick-up, and unceasingly smooth for economical cruising.

But let Pontiac tell its own story of economy and dependability! Drive a Pontiac yourself today. Your Pontiac dealer will be pleased to arrange a demonstration drive for you.

Italy Unconditionally Agrees To Proposal Made by Big 3 For Conference on Trieste

ROME (AP)—The Italian foreign ministry said today Italy has agreed unconditionally to the Big Three proposal for a five-power conference on the future of Trieste.

Previously foreign diplomatic sources had indicated Italy's assent to the conference proposal has been conditional, but a foreign ministry spokesman said today:

"Italy's position has been taken into consideration by the Allies and the Allies' suggestion for a five-power conference was accepted.

In Belgrade, the official Yugoslav news agency, Tanjug said Sunday the conditional acceptance attributed earlier to Italy appeared to be along lines Belgrade previously by Rome. Tanjug said any proposal for a conference is taking for granted that part of the territory would be returned to Italy and was "completely unacceptable" to President Tito's government.

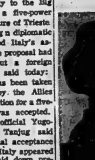
The Italian government said Britain, the United States and France Nov. 13 guaranteed Italy and Yugoslavia must set them on Trieste and Italy on Nov. 20 accepted the Western suggestions "in bloc."

Details of the Western proposals have not been made public.

Edmonton Airport Covers 750 Acres In Heart of City

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton municipal airport has grown from a field which handled a few flights a day in 1929 to a $13,500,000 investment with a staff of 1,400.

Covering 750 acres in the heart of the city, the airport serves airplanes operating on international services between the United States, Europe and the Orient and also provides facilities for Canadian services.



The first flights of a local nature were carried out in 1919 on the same site the airport now occupies. In 1927 the airport was licensed by the federal government, making it the first municipal airport in Canada.

Early facilities consisted of a small wooden frame building housing two planes, three employees and a number of unpaved approaches. Today the airport is a base for 146 planes and three helicopters. This year a record total of 200,000 aircraft arrivals and departures is expected.

During the Second World War the airport became a vital base in the defence of the Alaskan coast for the United States Air Force. Both the Canadian and U.S. governments spent millions of dollars on improvements during the war. The airport was returned to the city in 1945.

The airport has furthered the progress of Edmonton's growth. In 30 to 40 years, opening up Alberta's mineral wealth by exploration and survey.

RUSSIANS RELEASE BRITISH PRISONER

Private James Kelly, 32, of the Royal Army Medical corps, has been released in Berlin and flown after serving seven of his 10-year sentence for alleged spying. He was handed over to the British military authorities in Berlin and was being flown, on a charge of absence without leave, while investigations are made.—Central Press Canadian.

Two Immigrants Killed Sunday In Plane Crash

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Two immigrants, residents of Canada for a short time, were killed when their light Chipmunk plane crashed into a field near here Sunday.

Dead are Henry Scholtens, 28, and Paul Helmer Petroldi, 24.

Police said the engine of the craft piloted by Scholtens, who came to Canada two years ago from the Netherlands, apparently failed after the two had been flying more than hour.

Petroldi, a native of Germany died in hospital soon after he was pulled from the wreckage by constables attending. Scholtens was dead when police arrived.

The pair, in company with Ingrid Molten, 23, of Sarnia, drove here in an old truck owned by Petroldi.

Scholtens was licensed as a pilot in Holland and Canada and was a member of the Windsor Flying Club, owners of the craft the pair came here to rent.

Miss Molten, also a native of Germany, remained at the club while her companions went for the flight.

Allied Intelligence Men Engaged in Savage Conflict

By RICHARD K. O'MALLEY

FRANKFURT (AP) — Allied intelligence men are deep in a constant espionage war which knows no international boundaries and is fought for the most part in secret.

It is a war against the Red Russians spew out spies regardless of losses in the attempt to pierce the security of the West.

The Russian atom spy ring in Canada started it all last recently. Rudolph Roessler, master Russian spy, was tracked to Switzerland. Norway's security battle flared into the open this week with the arrest of five persons.

In the background, a network of intelligence specialists in Western Europe quietly pushes the fight.

STRANGE SETTINGS

It is a campaign fought on such strange fields as a grimy coffee house in Munich, a sleazy bar alley in Frankfurt or a DP camp in Hesse. For West Germany is the core of Soviet espionage activity.

Professional spies, cynical and double agents and the betrayed make up the forces of the East. Trained agents, skilful policemen and counter espionage services fight for the West.

Russia relies heavily on the "shotgun" method of picking spies. It draws heavily from its satellites, using bribes or threats to enlist recruits. They have eyes—to see and ears to hear and that's what the Russians want.

A spy trial in Munich early in the Cold War showed the Russian spy chief in Germany was a woman, one was listed as a "class five" or top agent. The rest were amateurs who will be given three full days, three afternoons and 21 evenings to learn their trade, she will have seven full days, five mornings, 11 afternoons and 18 evenings.

British Food Mission Is Closing Down

OTTAWA (CP)—The British food mission, established in 1946 to take care of the many food agreements between Canada and the United Kingdom, is closing down.

With its closing, Sir Andrew Jones, energetic director who has guided the mission since the outset, is leaving Canada to return to Britain where he plans to retire to his country estate.

Sir Andrew said closing of the mission is the result of the gradual process of turning from bulk buying in a return to private trading which has been taking place during the last two years.

The change, he says, is one of method, not necessarily of quantity of purchase.

Socialist Stages Filibuster In House of Commons

LONDON (Reuters) — Socialist Aneurin Bevan staged a filibuster in the House of Commons Friday, delaying adjournment of a debate on a government bill.

He spoke for two hours, 17 minutes, then resumed reading by back bencher in living memory and the first serious filibuster attempted in the Commons since the lively days of the 18th Home Rule bill a half century ago.

Lawyer Lever rose speaking against a bill providing for a government loan to the British motion picture industry.

He "talked out" the debate on the bill's second reading by a device to use up scheduled end of the debate. The entire debate on the second reading now will have to be repeated at a later date.

Lever got some opposition from fellow Labor members who wanted to speak, and from the Speaker, who reminded him that a parliamentary rule against "tedious repetition."

But he carried on gamely, and Bevan, point by point, pressed his attack.

Once Baby of Economy, Manufacturing Industry Now $17 Billion Giant~

By HAROLD MORRISON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

The face of the Canadian economy is undergoing steady transformation. Helping to make that change is Canada's expanding manufacturing industry.

Once the baby of the Canadian economy, the manufacturing industry has grown into a $17,000,000,000 giant. And it is still growing.

As it grows, Canada becomes less dependent on imports and finds employment for more of her highly-trained technicians. The state of her manufacturing is the key to the relative well-being of any highly industrialized modern state.

Completing an annual survey, the Bureau of statistics estimates that production in Canada's manufacturing industry expanded by more than $500,000,000 in 1952, reaching a new high of $16,915,000,000.

That represents a six-fold growth in 35-years, from $2,820,000,000 in 1917,, in those 35 years, the number of manufacturing plants have increased to 27,000 from 21,-900.

RECORD EMPLOYMENT

With the increase came a doubling fo employment. The army of workers in 1917 was all-time high of 1,275,000 in 1952 from 608,000 in 1917. Wages and salaries rose by a five-fold jump to a high of $3-,000,000,000 from $497,800,000.

The giant needs food and he's a big eater. The cost of materials purchased by these plants rose by a record of $9,104,000,000, six times higher than the $1,528,000,000 purchased 35 years ago.

The fuel and light bill to run these plants has jumped to $395,-000,000 from $36,38,000.

The business of producing food and drink is the biggest in Canada, though plants making wood, paper, iron and steel as well as other metal products and transport vehicle equipment are high on the list.

Willys got its name from John North Willys, a one-time salesman who made a fortune in the Overland Motor Car Co. and revived it, but he left no members of his family in its councils.

STRONG SURVIVED

The history of the auto industry is one of drive, competition and survival of the strong. Many of the more than 2,500 companies founded over the last half-century lost their identity in mergers and bankruptcies. Goethsmobile, however, just folded up as expenses got too many dollars.

As early as 1827 there were such cars as Pope-Hartford, Stutz and Winton. Later came names like Bachelles, Rogers and Hanford, Schacht, Jordan, Goethsmobile, Santos Dumont, Cutting, Southern Cross and many others.

Each year brought a new crop. Each year also saw many of them disappear. The industry did bring great wealth to some of the pioneering families, but it jeopardized thousands of others.

Of all the stories associated with the auto industry's development, none is more fantastic than that of the late Walter C. Durant. Twice controlling stockholder and chief General Motors official, Durant sometimes was called a modern Midas. He won and lost several $100,000,000 fortunes, chiefly in Wall street operations. When he died six years ago he was broke and all but forgotten.

INVENTS BLIND AID

MORDEN, Eng. (Reuters)—Inventor Alfred Barham, 65, Sunday finished his last invention—a battery-powered light which fits like a walking stick, and, at the press of a button, makes the word "blind" stand out clearly. Barham will be the first to use it. Doctors told him he is rapidly going blind.

Royal Winter Fair Concludes Its Best Show

TORONTO (CP) — The Royal Agricultural Winter Fair is over and officials say it was probably the best in its history.

A colorful ceremony climaxing the show Saturday night of what officially ended the eight-day fair which drew livestock and farm product exhibits from many parts of the country, attracted international competitors to its horse show, and provided city and rural dwellers with a wide choice of entertainment.

Agricultural Minister Gardiner, speaking during the brief closing ceremony, said Canadians owe much of their ability as producers of top farm products to skills brought from other countries. Even the folk dancing at the centre of the show ring had been brought from the countries in which Canadians had their roots.

A butter sculpture of Mr. Gardiner was displayed by Ontario's 100,000 milk and cream producers as one of the attractions.

CADETS TAKE PART

Air Cadets carrying the flags of countries participating in the international jumping events marched into the show ring for the ceremonies. Among the 12 riders of the ring, on a special platform, winning squares of dance teams arrived to a lively tune. Lined up were the horses of the international jumping competitors in the various horse competitions and the troop of RCMP that performed their musical ride.

England won the international team trophy for the first time since the establishment of the competition in 1935. Team members were Lt.-Col. Harry Llewelyn, captain; Miss Pat Smythe and Capt. A. Moore.

The English team, with eight faults, had a slight advantage over the United States. Tied in third place were Canada and Ireland with 12 faults each.

BEEF PRICES UP

When top steers of the fair were auctioned Saturday, the Queen's Guinea winner, an aberdeen angus named Prince Eric, the 17-year-old Ross Graham of Palmerston, Ont., got $2.25 a pound. That was 25 cents more than last year. The grand champion steer of the show, Ross Graham's aberdeen Killearn Conquest, brought $2.50 a pound, up 50 cents from 10 cents. Noad is from Claresholm, Alta.

Crystal Lady, a high-stepping harness pony, swept up the $1,500 Queen's Plate for the second year in a row, but it was the Lady's swan song.

One of the greatest hackney ponies of all time the 14-year-old is to be pastured.

Her owner, Mrs. Elgin Armstrong of Toronto, announced said she's turned down a bid of $10,000 for the mare. Her horse has cleaned up close to $850,000 in prize money.

Police Believe Man Shot Self

SUDBURY (CP) — Provincial police said Sunday that school teacher Frederick Ross, 39, formerly of Guelph, whose body was found in his car here, had recently Crerar township Saturday, Nov. 15, of self-inflicted rifle taken from the farmhouse where he was boarding. They said they could assign no reason.

McCarthy was graduated with honors in political science from College last May. In September, he started his first job as a rural teacher.

He disappeared Thursday. Since then, police and searchers including his older brothers, Eric and Harold Ross, Guelph, joined in the bush country 35 miles east of here.

Born and educated in Guelph, McCarthy was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John McCarthy of Guelph.

Buys Interest

TORONTO (CP)—Purchase of a controlling interest in the Peller Brewing Company of Hamilton was announced Sunday by George M. Black, jr., president of Canadian Breweries Limited.

Mr. Black said the Hamilton brewery will continue operations, and plans for enlargement are under consideration. Andrew Peller, founder of the company, will remain president of the company.

Canadian Breweries now controls or has an interest in six breweries in eastern Canada and the United States.

Thimayya Planning to Ask United Nations to Decide What To Do With Prisoners

By A. I. GOLDBERG

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—A diplomatic informant in the United Nations disclosed today that Lt.-Gen. K. Ss Thimayya is preparing to ask the UN General Assembly to step into the Korean prisoner repatriation stalemate.

The source said that the Indian chief of the neutral nations repatriation commission in Korea has completed a report giving all sides of the repatriation deadlock. The report is expected here late this week.

One report is going to Secretary-General Dg Hammerskjold who will circulate it to all UN members, opening up the question for another heated debate.

MAKES NO JUDGMENT

The informant said it is understood Thimayya's report will make no judgment on the deadlock, which in its latest phase has halted prisoner explanations for a week. And he said it would put the whole question in the hands of the assembly for decision.

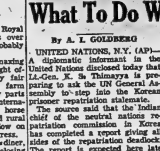
The Communists failed in convincing 97 per cent of the Chinese and North Korean prisoners they have interviewed that they should return to Red territory. They halted the explanations on a technicality.

About 20,000 of the 22,000 prisoners captured by UN forces are still held remain to be questioned.

ALL REPRESENTED

Thimayya's report, it was said, will carry statements by the Polish and Czechoslovak representatives on the repatriation commission, who support the Communists; by the Indian chief who opposes; and a review by Thimayya himself.

There was no advance indication what, if anything, Thimayya's report would say about the conflicting views of India's prime minister Nehru and U.S. state secretary Dulles on the future of the prisoners.



Nehru has said that unless the Korean political conference gets under way within 90 days of the armistice commands must again negotiate the disposition of the prisoners who still refuse to go back to Communist territory Jan. 22, the end of the 90-day period for explanations and conference provided by the armistice agreement.

Dulless contends prisoners still held on that date should be released as civilians to go where they wish.

WALL COLLAPSES

HELENA, Ark.—(AP)—The wall of a building housing a dry cleaning picture theatre here Sunday night, filling some 15 rows of seats with debris and rubble. No deaths were unoccupied and only a few persons injured. The collapsed building, which was condemned as unsafe and scheduled for demolition, was the two-storey adjoining building. Also a section of another store, was demolished. A separate roof covers the theatre. Cause of the destruction was unknown.

Marriage Between British Girls, U.S. Soldiers Failure

LONDON (Reuters) — The pro-Labor newspaper The People said Sunday that an appalling number of the marriages between United States servicemen and British girls in uniform during the Second World War have failed.

"The sole value of posterity and in case a similar 'invasion' happens again, let it be put on record that marriages between British girls and foreign soldiers is a failure," the paper says.

"Even if we make all allowances for the minority of these romances that have been a fairy-tale success, the grim truth is that of the 70,000 British girls who married servicemen and foreign girls—mostly British—since the war, no fewer than 774 have failed."

Gleaming Luxury Liner Ready To Take Queen on Royal Tour

By ROBERT JONES

LIVERPOOL (AP)—The 15,902-ton S.S. Gothic is ready to sail Saturday after months of hammering and welding to make the gleaming luxury liner fit for a Queen on a world tour.

And the Gothic's skipper, 61-year-old Capt. David Aitchison, has his fingers crossed, hoping everything goes well.

For the Gothic, pride of the Canadian Pacific, will be chosen for the Queen and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, Thursday at Kingston, Jamaica, one day after the Royal couple arrives by air from Montreal to start their journey to Australia and New Zealand.

The trim, modern Gothic cargo liner which normally carries around 80 passengers in her luxurious cabins will sail through the Panama canal to the western Pacific ocean. Then the Queen and her husband and the host of aides and secretaries in their suite will make their home aboard the ship.

It's the third time the Gothic has been picked to take royalty on a long voyage. The first was in 1948—the voyage was cancelled when King George VI had an operation on his leg. In February 1949 the Gothic carried the royal party from Montreal to Jamaica, Kenya, for the Queen—then Princess Elizabeth—to begin the world tour to Australia in her father's place. The ship was chosen by the London death of King George.

THREE-MONTH CONVERSION

It took three months to convert the five-year-old Gothic into a Royal ship for the 1949 tour. Most of the Royal apartments have remained virtually untouched, locked and bolted ever since.

In 1949, workmen grafted an extra seven feet on the Gothic's funnel—just to make sure no smoke would blow in royalty's face. They tore out bulkheads and built extensions on to the promenade deck to make airy verandah cabins sit for the King and Queen.

and converted two passenger suites into Royal night cabins.

The Queen's bedroom which will number around 85 will have to occupy cabins used by ordinary passengers on normal voyages. Elizabeth will be cabin suites built into the children's playroom. Their lounge will be the ship's main verandah cafe.

When the Queen steps aboard the ship Thursday she will be conducted to her suite on the ship's starboard side. By air and on the ship, Commonwealth passengers always are given starboard quarters.

The color scheme throughout the ship is pink and green—pink for the Royal suites and blue for the night cabin, green for her day cabin, looking out on the shelter deck.

COOL IN TROPICS

Air conditioning will keep the temperature at 70 degrees even as she sleeps at night or works at her desk. She has a study equipped with wall brackets shaped as sheaves of corn.

A specially-painted ship-to-shore telephone stands on her desk with a scrambler attachment to make gibberish of her speech until it reaches the other end.

For security efficiency is a 13-buttoned tablet next to the telephone. All she has to do is press her finger on the right button, to summon equerries, secretaries, ladies in waiting and stewardesses.

Her day cabin, where she and the duke will work in off-duty moments, is furnished with a writing desk, two armchairs and an electric fire. Loudspeakers are built into the ceiling provide soft music at the touch of a button.

Leading out of the cabin is a small pantry with a refrigerator to supply a snack whenever the Royal couple feel hungry.

The duke's day cabin—also with a green color scheme—is furnished like the Queen's. At work he will sit at a massive mahogany desk made to make airy wonders for her Royal yacht 100 years ago.

For First Time Since War's End Whisky Is Off Ration List

By ANNE KRAMER

LONDON (AP) — Whisky-parched Britons will be able to ring in the New Year in style. For the first time since the war's end, whisky will be off the ration lists.

For, eight years most of Scotland's whisky output has been exported to earn dollars. Supplies for home consumption were reduced to a mere trickle.

Now, with production boosted, the government is abandoning the program which gave liquor merchants a yearly quota based on a small percentage of their pre-war sales.

A familiar figure, debonair and monocled and clad in well-cut tweeds, is returning to national magazines to invite readers to a "whisky and soda."

And every time a Scot sees the ad his blood pressure will shoot up at the stupidity of the English—spoiling his national drink with a fizzy soda substance which he claims destroys its potency, changes its taste and "transforms a mellow beatitude into a gaseous frivolity."

WATER ONLY

Scots stoutly maintain that whisky is not to be used lightly as an ingredient in "a fashionless clamjamfrey o' a cocktail."

The scot will allow a little plain water or even an ice cube, but he prefers to drink it neat and wash it down with a gulp of water.

The Scots are partial to malt whisky which they call "usage bbeatha." That's Gaelic for water of life.

Grain whisky, made from cereals in a patent still, runs a close second to malt but before it was accepted in Britain there was a long drawn-out battle. Conservative distillers said it wasn't genuine whisky. It took a royal commission in 1909 to establish its right to the name.

For the Scot malt whisky remains the aristocrat. Savoring the distinctive flavor it acquires when the malted barley is spread on perforated plates to dry over a slow peat fire, he'll orate on the distinction between malt and grain while debating the relative merits of a speyside or an islay. (Speyside whisky is made of highland malts produced chiefly in the speyside or glenlivet district. Islay whisky has a particularly strong flavor due to the "peated" Malt.)

Farmers Urge Government Lower Tariffs

OTTAWA (CP) — The Interprovincial Farm Union Council Saturday urged the government to accelerate trade concessions and lower tariffs.

In a brief to Trade Minister Howe, the council — representing the Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta farmers' unions—said Canada faces a major problem in regaining lost markets and retaining and expanding existing ones.

The brief noted that the government recently eased some tariffs and made some trade concessions. It urged "a rapid acceleration and further extension of this program."

OTHER STEPS URGED

Among its other recommendations, the council urged:

1. Government study of barter trade and acceptance of sterling in payment for agricultural products. The farmers' unions "look forward to Canada taking a lead in negotiating for the convertibility of sterling and easing of currency restrictions."

2. A system of cash advances, preferably administered by the Canadian wheat board, on farm-stored grains. The present tie-up of grain on farms and in country elevators left farmers without enough cash to meet operating expenses, store accounts and to pay their day-to-day living expenses.

Cash advances should be $1.00 a bushel for wheat up to a maximum of 15 bushels a seeded acre, 60 cents a bushel for barley to a maximum of 20 bushels a seeded acre, and 40 cents a bushel for oats up to 25 bushels a seeded acre.

3. A "substantial" gift through the United Nations of Canadian farm produce, particularly grain, to needy areas not financially able to purchase foodstuffs.

4. A parliamentary inquiry "into the exhorbitant spread between the price paid to livestock producers and the prices charged consumers." The brief said an increasing number of farmers favor establishment of a producer marketing board for livestock.

Boom-Boom Geoffrion Proving Canadiens One-Goal Wonder; Leafs, Wings Tied for Second

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Bernie Geoffrion, Montreal Canadiens one-goal wonder, had an upset stomach Sunday night, so coach Dick Irvin let him sit out the third period in Boston.

His work last week was deserving of a rest.

Thursday, Boom Boom scored the only goal of the game to give the National Hockey League leaders a 1-0 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs. Saturday night, the 23-year-old right winger did it again; he scored the goal that gave the Habs a 1-0 win over Detroit Red Wings.

Despite the loss of the ailing Bernie, the Habs broke a year-old jinx Sunday night. They squeezed out a 3-2 decision with the Bruins, the first game the Canadiens haven't lost on Boston ice since Dec. 21, 1952. The week-end win and tie gave them a three-point lead in the league, Boston, with only one week-end game, remained in fourth place, six points behind Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs who share second spot.

The Leafs, beaten only once in 11 games, came up with a pair of wins during the week-end—a 1-0 effort over the fifth-place New York Rangers Saturday night and a 5-1 victory over the cellar-dwelling Chicago Black Hawks Sunday night.

The Rangers suffered their second loss in as many nights, a 3-2 defeat from the Wings.

NINTH GOAL

Geoffrion's goal Saturday night was his ninth of the season and 14,491 fans gave the Habs' star an ovation. The applause was also shared by Gerry McNeil, who registered his second straight shutout and his fourth of the season.

Sunday night, Flemming Mackell slapped in a goal at 11:04 of the first period, ending a string of 155 minutes and 56 seconds of scoreless hockey for McNeil. Twenty seconds before, Ken Mosdell had sent the Habs ahead. Ed Sandford gave the Bruins the lead in the second period but midway in the third Calum Mackay slammed home the tying goal.

Defenceman Jim Morrison Saturday night scored the winning goal for the Leafs. The 22-year-old sophomore drilled a sizzler past Johnny Bower late in the third period of a dull game.

LEAF HERO

Two goals within 29 seconds made Sid Smith the hero of the night as the Leafs got out of a jam to defeat the Hawks in Chicago Sunday. Smith's victim was 28-year-old rookie Jean Marois, brought up from Quebec Aces to replace Al Rollins, laid low with chicken pox and the ill effects of extraction of three teeth.

Howie Meeker, summoned from his coaching duties with Stratford Indians of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series to fill a gap in the Leaf line, scored once as did Tod Sloan and Rugy Migay. Bill Gadsby scored for the Hawks.

Detroit's victory over the Rangers Sunday was credited to Bill Dineen, who broke a 2-2 deadlock in the third period. The Rangers were leading 2-0 on goals by Paul Ronty and rookie Camille Henry before Johnny Wilson went into action. The left-winger scored once in the second and again early in the third, both when Ranger players were in the penalty box.

The league is idle until Wednesday when Boston meets New York.

Dutchies Defeat Cataracts 5-3 Mercs Nip Dogs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The top six teams in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series are in a race for positional standings which can, and usually do, change from night to night by single victory.

No teams, except Sarnia Sailors and Niagara Falls Cataracts, have really had a chance to acquaint themselves with any one position. The Sailors and Cataracts occupy the bottom two slots but even they have recently shown signs of life.

The Cataracts just couldn't cope with the power of the first-place Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen Saturday as they dropped a 5-3 decision to the defending Allan Cup Champions in Kitchener.

Owen Sound upset the second-place Windsor Bulldogs 5-1 in Owen Sound and Hamilton kept up to the Bulldogs by edging the Sailors 4-3 in Sarnia.

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series Saturday Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds took a 6-2, home-ice victory over North Bay Trappers and Pembroke Lumber Kings defeated Sudbury Wolves 5-1 in Pembroke and nearly caused a riot.

The Trappers lost their second week-end game when Abey were defeated 5-3 by the Indians in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sunday.

Jack McKenzie, Ken Laufman, Gerry Theberge, Art Hurst and Harry Pavlita shared the scoring for the Dutchmen against Niagara Falls. Nick Dubick, Red Olsen and Ted Fafeaux countered for the Cataracts.

Lakeshore Flyers Down Fort William For Intermediate Gridiron Crown

MONTREAL (CP) — Lakeshore Flyers Saturday became the first Montreal team in 25 years to win the Percy Robinson Memorial Trophy, symbolic of the Canadian intermediate football championship, as they walloped Fort William Redskins 22-8 in a sudden-death game.

The Flyers unveiled a powerful ground attack and an almost airtight pass defence as they held the Redskins to one point until the third quarter while racking up 22 themselves.

Wilf O'Hagan, a small and speedy halfback, ran behind some excellent blocking to get two touchdowns for Lakeshore while Joe Stracina, Charlie Baillie, and Kevin O'Neill came through with the other points.

Fort William earned two points on rouges and Ed Harris scored their only major, Harold (Snowball) Harri converting.

SWEATER SQUABBLE

Before the game, the teams squabbled about the colors of their jerseys as both clubs wear red. Lakeshore insisted the Redskins change their jerseys and offered to supply yellow ones belonging to another local intermediate team.

The Redskins agreed to make the switch but when the yellow shirts arrived—fresh from the dry-cleaners—they were too shrunken to be worn by even the smallest members of the Fort William club. up in red jerseys.

Flyers took the kick-off and marched 82 yards down-field on ground plays, capping the march when Baillie scored a major on a five-yard line plunge. O'Neill converted to give Lakeshore another point. Fort William then got into the scoring column when Flyers' Harry Shayne was roughed attempting to block McKee's 46-yard punt.

George Bossy recovered a second-quarter Fort William fumble that set the stage for O'Hagan's two-yard touchdown plunge. O'Neill converted.

Flyers then took possession on the Fort William 35-yard line and went to the 21 on end sweeps and off-tackle smashes. Stracina took the ball and scooted around the end to put Lakeshore ahead 16-1 and O'Neill's toe added the extra point.

O'Hagan went five yards off-tackle for an unconverted major in the third quarter. The Redskins recovered a Lakeshore fumble on the Flyers' 26, and sent Ed Harris through centre from the one-yard line for a touchdown, which Harri converting. McKee then kicked 47 yards into the Lakeshore end zone and his teammates rouged Kenny Dixon to make the score 22-8 for Lakeshore.

Stracina punted from the 35-yard stripe in the last frame, the ball going over Fort William's deadline for a single.

ANOTHER ONE!

The Orillia Pontiacs, who have yet to perform before a home-town crowd, gave ample evidence here Saturday night that they do not intend to be stepping stones for any team in this smaller "S" group. Four times they have tried to perform before the boys back home and four times some gimmick has gone wrong with the ice-making machinery. They were all set to play the October 14 game against the Memos Friday night, but something happened at the last minute and Secretary Drury Denyes was not notified until five o'clock that the game was again postponed.

But the boys wearing the Indian head came up with as nice a piece of defensive strategy seen here in a long while when they handed our side an 8-3 setback to chalk up their first points in the win column. At times it looked as though the Pools had three or more goalkeepers out there with Mc'ers Robert Shropshire filling out the hero's role to a nicety. Howbeit that rubber stayed out of the net at times when the Memos were all over, around and about the Pontiac goal posed a puzzler for the fans.

Bruno Favero, the point of contention between the Funtings and the Owen Sound Mercurys of the senior "A" loop, was back in his familiar uniform and showed up well on the job. The Mercs wanted this boy in the worst way, but the OHA said "no soap" and Bruno went back with the old gang. Playing coach Vic Grigg used a defensive defence sending his attacking lines roaring out whenever the opportunity presented itself. And it paid off but good.

Meanwhile the Oshawa Truckmen steamroller continues its winning ways. Saturday night they defeated the champion Kingston Goodmen in a high lumy tilt to increase their win mark to seven as against one defeat. The standing published elsewhere shows the Truckmen out in front with 14 points, Goodyears in second with eight, Belleville Maple Leafs through with five, Belleville four and Orillia three. There should be a merry old battle for that playoff spot.

Don Murray, Kingston, leads the group patingsters with ten goals and eight assists. Murray, incidentally, and teammate George MacGregor held the group game-goals record with four each. Nick Nicholson, of Kingston, tops the "assisters" with nine. The Dunnes Irvine and Verdun Gorye are well up with the leaders with Ed and Erwin having 13 and 12, respectively, and big Vern trailing along with eleven. Duke Doran, the third member of the "D" line has six.

GOOD SHOW!

Maynes and Marmora, take a bow!

When Elmer Sandercock, member for Hastings West, tooled the big car into what looked like seventeen used-car lots piled into one, Marmora, Friday night, Mrs. Sandercock uttered a very pertinent remark.

"This is the good lady said, "one of the biggest nights in the history of this village."

That about wrapped up the story as far as Reeve Richie Wells' upsurging community goes. It was his and their night to "howl." They did.

Albert Maynes, Bill Shannon, and the rest of the boys, who spearheaded the drive for funds to finance the artificial ice equipment had their chests out a mile. And rightly so. A packed arena (it's too bad they didn't install a few more seats so that the overflow could be accommodated) greeted the official "opening" of the new plant. And that it was a success goes without saying.

From the newly-installed press and radio booth which a foresighted committee had seen fit to include in the arena's new equipment, saw a cross-section of Hastings County that had gathered to pay righteous tribute to a grand community effort.

It could be that there is a lack of baby sitters in the district, for there was noted a few hockey mums of proud mothers, and gal this, we also noted white-haired ladies and gentlemen, scions of old pioneer families, who were there to see what's a modern "gimmick", if you call artificial ice by such a name.

The show itself was reported in Saturday's edition. It was good, variable and the gleaming ice surface held throughout. And we were a little surprised at that, because of the spring weather outside and the crowded arena. (That's a well-intended plug for the plant engineers. And they well deserve it.)

George Brooken, who will mastermind the moppets, wore a broad smile. Wednesday of this week sees the youngsters of Marmora, Stirling, Havelock, Norwood, Flinton, Coe Hill go into pre-season action on the new ice surface. There will be a bantam game as well as a midget tussle with three juvenile tilts also included. The youngsters start play at six o'clock with Havelock's bantlies taking on Madoc, following Marmora's midgets against Norwood. In the juvenile three-cornered Coe Hill movie Havelock, Stirling clashes with Marmora and Flinton takes on Norwood.

Sasky Hilltops Overpower Windsor To Win Junior Grid Championship

SASKATOON (CP) — The Canadian junior football title was brought to the West for the first time in 25 years Saturday when Saskatoon Hilltops overpowered favored Windsor AKO 24-6 in a sudden-death game for the title.

More than 7,000 fans, largest crowd ever to watch a football game here, saw Don Adam, 19-year-old quarterback, let loose with a steady aerial attack and a solid ground offensive against the defending champions.

Although calling the lighter team Adam's smooth work paved the way for the West's second junior title since 1929 when Regina Rugby won it. Described as the best junior signal-caller and passer, Adam scored one of Saskatoon's six touchdowns, threw passes for two others and kicked three converts.

Hilltops held the lead throughout, being ahead 12-0 at the half-mark. The new champs held a 24-6 lead at the third quarter and added a converted touchdowns in the final frame.

The loss was Windsor's first in two years. They won the eastern crown with a 26-11 victory over Verdun, Que., Montreal.

CONGRATULATE COACH

Bedlam broke out in crowded Griffiths' Stadium at the end of the game as spectators crashed barricades to congratulate Saskatoon coach Bob Are and his Toppers.

Saskatoon majors, in addition to Adam's, were scored by Bill Trout, Johnny Sands, Johnny Jasper, Ole Olstad and Chic Jacobi. A single point was added by Andy Voykin when his attempted field-goal went wide.

Half Bob Fletcher, an outstanding player for Windsor, scored Windsor's only major in the third quarter. It came after Mike Robert intercepted a forward pass by Adam on Saskatoon's 35-yard line. A fake third-down kick put the ball on the 21 where Zeno Karas stole a plum out from quarter Don McEwan and threw to Fletcher behind the goal line.

Saskatoon gained 201 yards rushing against 198 for Windsor and 317 yards passing against 91 for the visitors. The Dominion titlists completed 12 of 20 attempted passes compared with six of 14 for Windsor.

Bengals Oust Alouettes 22-11 As Bombers Down Beaches To Settle East-West Finals

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — Explosive power behind a punishing line swept Hamilton Tiger-Cats to a 22-11 victory over Montreal Alouettes Sunday, and into the Grey Cup final.

It was a bitter, bruising struggle in which Ti-Cats struck for touchdowns late in the fourth quarter against a grim but fast-weakening Montreal defence.

Hamilton's power had to overcome a 9-0 lead the Als set up early in the second quarter through Chuck Hunsinger's converted touchdown and Ray Poole's field goal. The Als counted,aslo a safety touch after that.

Tip Logan accounted for 12 of Hamilton's points, a touchdown, a field goal, two converts and credit for a safety touch. Ed Songin and Lou Kesserow scored Hamilton's fourth-quarter touchdowns.

The Cats went into the lead for the first time after 37 minutes of play when Songin manned over the line. It was the fifth successive crash the Cats had dangled into the Montreal line from 12-yards out.

In the last heart-pounding moments and emotions of crowd and players almost blew the game into utter confusion.

Alouettes' last desperate offensive stalled and they were forced to kick. Ray Truant gathered in the ball and was downed on the Montreal 35. On the next play Bernie Custis streaked around left end and headed full-bilt for the goal line.

PETE KARPUK PLAY

Suddenly John O'Quinn, the redheaded southpaw who had just left the game from his end position, leaped from the Montreal bench without his helmet, sprinted over the sideline and nailed Custis.

There was bedlam after Custis went down, six yards from the line. Fans milled about with players and officials in a general scuffle. When things were straightened out, referee Hap Shouldice penalized Alouettes half the distance to their goal line.

In interpreting the interference rules, Shouldice decided an eligible Montreal player might possibly have caught Custis before he got over the line. Instead si awarding a touchdown, Shouldice invoked the half-the-distance penalty and placed the ball three yards out.

As it turned out, the decision made little difference. Kusserow plowed over on second down and Hamilton was in the Grey Cup final for the first time since 1935. That year they lost to Winnipeg Blue Bombers. Next Saturday in Toronto they take on the 1853 Bombers.

Alouettes made a great bid for the victory they needed to prolong the playoff to three games. They moved in fresh early, a reversal of their play in Hamilton Wednesday, when they took a 37-12 lacing.

They had Tex Coulter, their all-star tackle, back in the line-up for the first time since he suffered a broken ankle Oct. 16. The big fellow did the feeding and was a blocker of strength when he went into the line on defence, but neither he nor his mates could hold out 60 minutes against the relentless Hamilton pounding.

The Cats blocked better, and quarterback Ed Songin's passes was rushed as he spied out his pass receivers. Meanwhile Custis, Logan and Vic Ragazzo, The Als Sam Etcheverry had neither the freedom nor the time Songin had.

Player Dispute Arises in Ont. Junior Ranks

To break the monotony of a season filled with just hockey games, another player dispute has arisen in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Involving the seventh - place Guelph Biltmores, who could use some player strength, and Toronto Marlboros who are in a two-way tie for third, the dispute is centred around defenceman Al MacNeil, now with Toronto Marlboros.

The Biltmores say MacNeil belongs to them because of a deal the Guelph team made with the Dukes near the end of last season. The deal involved a number of Toronto junior B players who were supposed to go to the Biltmores at the start of this season in exchange for the use of Guelph forward Billy Eastwood by the Marlboros in the stretch drive of last year's schedule. Marlboros loaned McCreary last year when they still had a chance to enter the Memorial Cup playoffs.

Most of the Toronto players who were supposed to Guelph joined the Biltmores this year but MacNeil said he wouldn't go. Roy Mason, Guelph manager, said the player wouldn't go because he was held by Staff Sergeant Hyde, army manager, to refuse to report. Mason said he couldn't get permission to talk to MacNeil.

WEDNESDAY MEETING

As a result the Guelph manager appealed to Clarence Campbell, president of the Ontario Hockey League and Campbell Sunday night announced that he would meet with officials of both clubs to clarify Mackell's status.

Campbell told Mason the NHL did not like a player, whose options are taken up by a professional club, playing for another sponsored club. But he asked for the history of the case and called the meeting for Wednesday in Toronto.

Meanwhile, the Biltmores lost another argument to the Dukes when they dropped a 6-3 decision to the Marlboros in one game of Toronto's doubleheader Sunday.

Toronto St. Michael's College Majors edged out Hamilton Tigers 4-3 in the second game to maintain their third-place tie with the Marlboros.

Both Toronto teams lost their games Saturday night. Galt Black Hawks squeezed out a 4-3 home-ice victory over the Marlboros and St. Michael's were posted 7-2 by the Guelph Biltmore Madeleins in Guelph.

St. Catharines Tee Pees decelared Barrie Flyers 3-2 in St. Catharines and Kitchener - Waterloo Greenshirts earned a 3-2 victory over the Tigers in an extra period in Hamilton during other Saturday games.

Orillia Pontiacs Break Into Win Column With 8-3 Victory Over Memos

Stubborn Defensive Tactics Pay Off for Win-Hungry Club For First Triumph of Season

By GEORGE H. CARVER
Sports Editor

All's well now in Orillia! On Saturday night the big, hard-hitting Pontiacs senior "B" club finally broke into the win column, defeating the Bowmanville Memos 8-3 in a game that saw goaltending wizardry at its best.

In front of a heavily-packed defence the Pontiacs reared into a 4-0 first period lead, matched the Memos' two goals in the second and outpaced the Doran crew 2-1 in the third heat.

The long was the fifth for the Memos, who clung to their fourth-place spot in the group standing one point in front of the cellar-dwelling Pontiacs.

TOOK NO CHANCES

Playing Coach Vic Grigg of the Pontiacs took no chances with the Memos front line sharpshooters. He used a solid defence throughout the game sending his snipers on the attack every time a scoring opportunity presented itself. Bob Shropshire in the Pontiac nets had a charmed life threw out enough rubber to insulate a battleship and at times had a pair of teammates flanking him, likewise doing a good job of net-minding. At times it was uncanny how that rubber was kicked out or evaded the goal.

On the other hand the Memos have played better hockey. Their attacks were not up to par and strangely enough they had an edge in territorial play. The Duncan twins and Duke Doran, with Gene Wardhaugh and MacDonald Hteral-ly swarmed around the Pontiac goal at times, but the best they could do was hit the mesh for a trio of markers.

Eleven penalties were handed out by Referees LeCompte and Jim Crombie with seven going to the Pontiacs. The rugged packed defence of the Pontiacs hurled back the offensive threats of the Memos on all occasions but one when the visitors were short-handed.

The Pontiacs first line of Bowen, MacDonald and Richardson was the best on the ice accounting for eight scoring points. MacDonald came up with two goals and an assist with Richardson getting four helpers. McLeod also had a pair with Bowen, Vasey, Favero and Des Roches accounting for the rest.

The Duncan twins and Duke Doran were flying all night and came up with the Memos awards. Erwin Duncan scored twice with brother Ed getting the other. Each assisted on the other goals,

RULED LEGAL

One of the Belleville goals was ruled to have been outside the net by the goal judge, but Referee Crombie who was on top of the play stated the puck had gone in and ruled it as such over a mild argument on the part of the Pontiacs.

MacDonald drew a penalty at the eight minute mark and the Pontiacs took quick advantage of the situation, Bowen blazed in the first goal ten seconds after the officers and Pontiacs MacDonald ripped home Bowser's pass a minute later.

Grigg got the gate but the stubborn defensive style of the Pontiacs held the Memos off the scoring sheet. Des Roches fired the third Orillia goal from a standing footy and McLeod banged home Mc-Crone's pass to give the Pontiacs a 4-0 period lead.

The Memos seemed to be on their way in the second period with Ed Duncan scoring after a minute of play. The Memos took the offensive but they could do little or nothing against the Pontiacs fore and back checking until 14.35 when Erwin Duncan reduced the margin to 4-2.

Favero and Des Roches went off but the swarming Memos still couldn't fathom that defence. The Pontiacs reared back with five minutes to go and rattled in goals from Bowen and Favero to regain their four-goal edge.

Erwin Duncan notched the last Memos goal early in the third period with Vasey getting it back after five minutes on the sheet penalty play. Pontiacs' MacDonald got the eighth marker with two thirds of the period gone.

Blue Bombers Swamped With Ticket Requests

WINNIPEG (CP)—The scramble for Grey Cup tickets again is on, but Winnipeg Blue Bombers who will represent the West in the classic at Toronto next Saturday, believe they have come up with a near-foolproof set-up.

Distribution will be made on a "one-ticket - for - one - transportation" plan, with preference given first to those who are both season ticket holders and club members, and secondly to just season ticket holders.

Officials announced that they had received applications for about 4,500 tickets—1,200 more than Winnipeg's allotment of 3,300. All applications will be numbered on receipt, and tickets will be given out in numerical order until all are gone—with "proof of transportation" necessary.

Purchasers will receive a receipt for their tickets at Winnipeg, then produce the receipt and attach their signature to get their tickets at Bombers headquarters in Toronto. All tickets not claimed by the 10 a.m. Saturday deadline will be sold.

There will be no refund on tickets paid for at Winnipeg. As an added guard against persons purchasing railway or air transportation with a view to obtaining refund on it after receiving the ticket, the Winnipeg club will put its stamp on the transportation ticket when purchased at the railway and airways. The club will be notified if any refunds are made on transportation.

Mustangs' Last-Second Touchdown Wins Intercollegiate Grid Crown

By JIM EASTABLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—University of Western Ontario Mustangs went into the records today as college football's 1953 champions because they rallied in the last 40 seconds of the season a pass defence no other team could beat all year.

The Mustangs won their third Senior Intercollegiate Football title Saturday with a 30-yard touchdown pass in the dying seconds to defeat University of Toronto 20-18 in the sudden-death final.

They stunned the Blues and 10,-000-odd fans at Varsity Stadium with an all-or-nothing pass from quarter Don Getty to half Murray Henderson that turned almost certain defeat into a dramatic victory.

Getty, who quarterbacked the defending champions to victory in second place behind the Blues during the regular six-game schedule, pitched his receipt and hatch the signature to get their tickets at Bombers headquarters in Toronto. All tickets not claimed by the 10 a.m. Saturday deadline will be sold.

There will be no refund on tickets paid for at Winnipeg. As an added guard against persons purchasing railway or air transportation with a view to obtaining refund on it after receiving the ticket, the Winnipeg club will put its stamp on the transportation ticket when purchased at the railway and airways. The club will be notified if any refunds are made on transportation.

JUST MADE LINE

A split second before he was smothered by three tacklers, Getty flipped a high, wobbly ball that Henderson took on the Varsity 15-yard line and tumbled over the goal line with a tackler grabbing at his sweater.

Three plays later the Mustangs with promises of fans as they trotted from the field. It was coach Johnny Metras' seventh title since he took over the Mustangs in 1940.

Metras said after the game:

"Our pass was wild tremendous. I didn't think it was going to hit Henderson because he appeared to be pretty well covered. We were up against a strong team. I was pretty worried until Henderson went over."

BLUES BLUE

The Blues, called to win this one on the strength of their 12-0 victory over the Mustangs here Nov. 7, said little as they trudged to their dressing room. Coach Bob Masterson, who was going for his second league title in three years, left immediately after the game.

It was quite a finish for Metras, who was forced to build up his club after graduations left it weak along the line and in the backfield. However, five of his Mustangs who were voted to the Canadian Press all-star team this season played big roles in the victory, particularly big Gino Fracas, a 200-pound half who went for big gains on end runs.

The Mustangs, who made nine first downs compared to Varsity's 16, scored on majors by Henderson and Getty at Wilson Prowse, Fracas converted one touchdown, Jock Thompson kicked a single in the second quarter.

Half Phil Muntz, one of the league's best halfbacks who made big ground gains for the Blues, scored the Varsity touchdown in the first quarter. Steve Bachuk converted that and added a single in the third quarter. All-star flying wing Al Haig kicked a fourth-quarter single that put the Blues ahead 18-17.

Minor Hockey

The bantam hockey league entered it's second week at the arena on Saturday morning with the Red Wings and the Bruins battling to a 2-1 deadlock in the first game of the morning. Bill Symons netted the Red Wings goal on a pass from Ken Weeks but Doug Moreau counteyed with a goal for the Bruins and that's the way it ended.

A last minute goal by Bob Dafoe gave the Rangers a 4-3 decision over the Black Hawks in the 3:40 fixture which proved to be about the best game played so far this season. Dick Burns banged in the first goal on a rebound from Frank Chicoles blue line shot to send the Rangers into the lead. Gord Vaughan tied the game for the losers but two fast markers by Terry Keller made it 3-1 in favor of the Rangers. Gerry Lewis, just after getting out of the penalty box and Gerry Doyle once more tied the score on a couple of nice goals before Bob Dafoe put the game away for the Broadway Blues.

Sparked by John Brennan the Maple Leafs won their second game of the young season 3-1 over the Canadians. Brennan notched the second and third goals for the Leafs after Tom Potter had put the Canadians out front and Earle MacDonald tied the score. MacDonald also got an assist as did Boulter and Garrison.

Bisons Bop Bears To Retain Lead; Hornets Nip Reds

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Week-end action in the American Hockey League left the stampeding Buffalo Bisons well ahead of the competition.

Sunday night, the Bisons fought hard for a 4-3 victory over the second-place Hershey Bears, after drawing 5-5 with the Pittsburgh Hornets Saturday, in the only other Sunday night game Providence Reds downed the Hornets 4-2.

At Buffalo, with about three minutes left to play, Gordie Pennell scored on a breakaway. Other Buffalo scorers were Joe Lund, Don Marshall and Ken Hayden. Hershey snipers were Arnie Kullman, Skip Teal and George Sullivan.

The improving Providence Reds moved away from a 1-1 deadlock after one period of play and outscored Pittsburgh 3-1 in the last two stanzas.

Pete Kapusta, Paul Larivee and Chuck Scherza scored for the Reds, Al Baccari and Pete Backer tallied for the losers.

NATIONAL GAME

More people play tennis than any other game in Australia, with play held all year round.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—Some days a man can't make a dime, as Ned Potter, resident expert for the new magazine "Tennis World," will be glad to attest.

On the day Ned's annual ranking of the world's amateurs hit the stands they also played the semi-finals of the Australia championships in far - away Sydney. Things came badly unstuck.

Potter ranked the first five: (1) Tony Trabert, United States; (2) Ken Rosewall, Australia; (3) Vic Seixas, U.S.; (4) Jaroslav Drobny, Egypt; (5) Lewis Hoad, Australia.

So Hoad beat the bejabbers out of boneymooning Trabert, giving Tony only three games in the first two sets. Rosewall did likewise to Seixas. Then Hoad knocked off Rosewall, Drobny was idle, fortunately.

The Davis Cup looks farther away from the U.S. than ever at the moment.

LOVES THE GAME

Roy Campanella, the beby Brooklyn catcher who just has won the most valuable player award in the National League for the second time within three years, always says as though he were enjoying the game more than any other man on the field.

When they asked him how he managed to retain his youthful spirit and zest he grew behind the mask Campy said: "I love to play. When I get up each morning I look forward to that day's game. I hope to play as long as I live."

The only man we know who might love baseball with as great a passion as the Negro backstop is Larry Goetz, the National League umpire.

What are the physical characteristics of an average big league baseball team? Well, the Cincinnati Redlegs have done some deep figuring and discovered that the average member of their training squad next spring will weigh 187 pounds and stand exactly six feet. His age will be a mean 27. You know now, too, how publicity directors spend their winters.

MAGLIOLI LEADS RACE

PANAMA, Mexico (AP)—Italy's Humberto Maglioli picked up eight places in the big sports glass of the Pan-America road race as he flashed across the finish-line first here on the initial leg of Sunday's 437-mile run between Durango and Chihuahua.

Argentina's Juan Manuel Fangio and Italy's Piero Taruffi, both driving Lancia's, followed in that order.

Maglioli, whose Ferrari had been forced out by motor trouble Saturday, had taken over Mario Ricci's Ferrari to remain in the race.

Maglioli's unofficial time for the 251 miles is two hours and 15 minutes, nine minutes ahead of Fangio.

Mustangs Given Fine Ovation

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A heroes' homecoming blocked traffic in downtown London Saturday as hundreds of shouting, pushing citizens and team supporters invaded the Canadian National Railways station to offer their congratulations to Jim Stevens and his Western Mustangs for capturing the Toronto Argonauts senior intercollegiate title.

London defeated Toronto 12-8.

AT THE McCARTHY—King Donovan and Richard Carlson in an effort to locate source of radio-active element in new film "The Magnetic Monster", at the McCarthy Theatre today and Tuesday. 2nd. feature is "War Paint" in color with Robert Stack and Joan Taylor.

AT THE CAPITOL—Silvana Pampanini, Italy's most famous glamor girl (centre), as the Empress Poppea surrounded by her ladies in waiting in "O.K. Nero". Two of the "ladies" with the seeing eye breast plates are Carlo Campanini (left) and Walter Chiari, the latter-Lewis team of Italy, who play the part of two American sailors masquerading as slave girls. Campanini seems to manifest an unlady-like interest in the charms of the dancing girl, Alba Arnova, actually an Argentine dancer in real life who went to Italy to further her career. The I.F.E. released American language picture of gals, gobs and gaiety opens tonight at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program Edgar Wallace's "The Ringer" will keep you in suspense to the last minute.

AT THE BELLE—Ava Gardner and Gregory Peck meet for the first time in a Parisian bistro in Twentieth Century-Fox's Technicolor production "The Snows of Kilimanjaro", co-starring Susan Hayward and Hildegarde Neff. The film is showing tonight for the last times at the Belle Theatre.

No Gloating By Bombers Over Beaches

WINNIPEG (CP)—It was quietly that usual in the Winnipeg Blue Bomber dressing room Saturday after the western champions defeated Toronto Balmy Beach 24-4 in the sudden-death Grey Cup semi-final.

The figure who usually dominates the scene was missing. Coach George Trafton caught an early plane to Montreal to scout the second playoff game between Hamilton Tigers and Montreal Alouettes. Although the game featured the valiant effort of the lighter Balmy Beach club, some Bombers saw action for the first time this season.

The favorite gag was to offer congratulations to stars who saw little or no action. Dean Bandiera sat on the bench throughout the game, Tackle Dick Huffman saw little action and defensive end Normie Hill sat in the upstairs spotter's box.

Huffman approached Hill in the dressing room and said:

"Congratulations Hill. You finally got through a game without making a mistake." Hill is a senior intern at Winnipeg General hospital.

NO INJURIES

Bombers came out with hardly a scratch. Gerry James suffered a cut on the face during a rundback for about the worst wound of the game.

In the Beaches' dressing room, coach Chuck Klein told his players that they needn't be ashamed.

"If we'd had more weight, the score would have been different," Beach president Sam Stechley predicted a number of Beach players—including import tackle Colten Fisher, a Canadian next year, and end Ken Foster—would have a good chance to make Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four next year. Beaches are an Argonaut farm team.

PLAN FOUR-MINUTE MILE

Marcotte Problem To Be Settled Out of Court

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association is back into the squabble over goalie Jacques Marcotte of Quebec and will give a once-and-for-all decision Jan. 7.

This was the net result of a Sunday meeting of representatives of the CAHA, the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association, the Quebec Junior Amateur Hockey Association and the two teams at loggerheads over the 18-year-old goalie—Quebec Frontenacs and Quebec Citadelles.

All court proceedings will be dropped, and it is up to the Frontenac club whether it will continue to use Marcotte until the Dec. 7 meeting.

Subject to approval of the CAHA executive, CAHA officers will hear evidence at the scheduled meeting and, by the agreement of all parties, decisions then reached will be final and binding.

The young goalie is claimed by Citadelles, his former owners. Early this season, his application to become a free agent was granted by the QAHA—provincial governing branch of the CAHA—and his signing with Frontenacs was approved.

Citadelles appealed to the CAHA which awarded the player to that team. The QAHA continued to maintain it had acted constitutionally and was the sole authority to deal with an intra-branch matter of player release.

Friends, Neighbors Present Couple With Fine Gifts

JOHNSTOWN

JOHNSTOWN — Friends and relatives attended a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Morton, of the second of Sidney on Monday evening in honor of their daughter, Marie, who was married lately to Mr. Robert Armstrong, of the township of Thurlow.

If presents and attendance of people mean friends, then Marie and Robert's needs, for the gifts were numerous and lovely and the large house was full of guests.

Mrs. R. J. Hutley (nee Parks) was mistress of ceremonies, and brought the meeting to order with a solo by Mr. Frank Wilson, of Carrying Place, "I'm Just a Plain Country Boy," followed by an encore, "Slap Her Down Again, Pa". Vocal reading was given by Mrs. Don Sandercock, "Has Anybody Seen Kelly?" An instrumental trio was given by Mrs. W. Hanley and the girls, playing the violin and guitars; a mouth organ solo followed by Mr. Frank Wilson, and the Hanley girls again favored with a duet to their own accompaniment. Mr. Frank Wilson sang "The Blind Ploughman," which all enjoyed.

Mrs. Parks gave a reading, "The Alphabet of Wedded Bliss for Newlyweds" after which Mrs. R. J. Hutley read the address to Marie and her husband, and they were given the pleasant task of opening the gifts which were piled on a table beautifully decorated with streamers and bells.

Mr. Armstrong thanked everyone for the many lovely things they had received, and said "he didn't think they would have to buy a thing 'as all had been so generous to them'." Mrs. Armstrong also thanked the people, and gave a standing invitation to call on them when next in Ottawa, where their new home is.

Mrs. George McLean spent Friday with her sister, Mrs. Asa Smith, of Frankford.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Meyers attended the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Wright, of Stirling, on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ferguson spent the Sunday with their son and evening at her sister's, Mrs. W. Hanley, Lake View Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Mallory motored to Toronto on Sunday to spend the day with Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Christian and Bill.

Mr. and Mrs. Mac Nobes, of Belleville, and Mr. and Mrs. Don Sharpe, of Brighton, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harry on their 43rd wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Maitland Harder had supper with her brother, Mr. Clarence Plumton and Mrs. Plumton at Belleville, on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Alva Meyers and Arnold spent Sunday at Campbellford with Mrs. C. Taft, Earl and Marjorie.

Several of the Johnstown ladies attended the banquet at the United Church in Frankford on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Curtis entertained Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Patrick, of Frankford, to supper and the evening on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Basil Brooks and Wayne motored to Oshawa over the week-end to visit his sister a family, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Acker.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Gordon of No. 2 power house, were guests on Tuesday for supper and echre of Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. Morris Sickle.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred McLean and Mr. W. Hall, of Deltor, are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. George McLean.

Mrs. Jack Ferguson called on her sister, Mrs. Harold McMurter, on Saturday at the Belleville General Hospital, where she is suffering from pneumonia.

Miss Donna Mallory was home from London over the week-end and brought a friend with her, Miss Dorothy Haggitt.

Canada's Trade Expansion Held Feature of 1952

By ARCH MACKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Canada's expanded export trade and her maintenance of imports were selected as "most striking" features of Commonwealth trade in a 1952 survey published today by the Commonwealth Economic Committee.

The committee, formed in 1925 to advise on marketing and other economic questions of the Commonwealth, said Canadian trade activity in 1952 contrasted with "contraction" in most other Commonwealth countries.

BALANCE DECLINED

The committee's report noted, however, from data supplied by the countries concerned, that the balance of trade in favor of the United States and the United Kingdom, with a total trade of about £3,000,000,000 ($8,400,000,000) for last year.

Canada took $369,000,000 worth of imports from the United Kingdom last year which was less than the colonies, India, Pakistan or South Africa took.

She exported to the U. K. about $746,000,000, exceeded only by the colonies and higher than United States exports by a small margin.

Her expanded trade last year was attributed to sales of grains —wheat and coarse—and increased shipments of non-ferrous metals. Forest products declined.

DRIVER SURVIVES CRASH

GALT (CP)—A freight train hit an automobile at a level crossing at Cambridge early Friday night. Police chopped through the top of the wrecked car and saved every half of the steering wheel to free the driver, A. B. Scott, 83-year-old secretary-treasurer of Cambridge public utilities commission, who suffered abrasions and shock.

BUSY COMPOSER

Franz Schubert, one of the most prolific composers of all time, wrote more than 600 songs.

LOCAL STATIC

CARDIFF, Wales (CP)—A case of television interference here was traced to the 60-inch pendulum of a spring-action grandfather clock. The trouble was removed by simply grounding the metal works and rings of the clock.

MORE RELICS

FOLKESTONE, England (CP)—Workmen preparing foundations for a new grandstand at a football field discovered a Roman burial site. They dug up ancient bones, a burial urn, a round platter and drinking vessel.

Multiple Traffic Accidents Raise Toll of Deaths

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Three multiple traffic fatalities in the Montreal area, one near Chatham, Ont., and a plane crash that killed two immigrants at Windsor, Ont., helped bring the week-end toll of violent deaths in eastern Canada to 36.

A Canadian Press compilation today showed 15 fatalities listed in Ontario, 10 in Quebec and one in Nova Scotia. Traffic mishaps took 26 lives.

TRUCK HITS PILLAR

The smash of a truck against a Montreal viaduct pillar killed Gilles Rivest, 28, Sylvio Doyon, 26, and Gerard Martineau, 30, and injured Robert Doyon, 21.

Separate accidents in Montreal district killed Alcide Renaud, 37, and Kristopher Hanson, 45, whose loaded truck crashed into two fog-stranded cars, and Charles Vacon, 50, and Alma Gilberte Paul, whose car went out of control on a curve.

Also in the Montreal district, Charles Hamel, 30, was fatally injured when struck by a car.

Leopold Lessart, 35, and his wife, 31, died of coal gas asphyxiation in their Montreal North home. Two others are in hospital after being overcome.

A truck-car collision near Windsor, N. S., killed Kenneth Robertson, 16.

TWO DIE NEAR CHATHAM

Near Chatham, Ont., Leamington residents Andrew Crozier, 62, and Lorne Wigle, 24, died when their car plunged into a ditch.

Victims of other Ontario traffic mishaps were Joseph Strapczan, 59, 63, in a car which hit a bus near Toronto; William G. Stewart, 26, whose car rammed a Toronto street car; John Trafford, 19-year-old Toronto cyclist hit by a car carrying a visiting country; Betty Elliott, 21, of Niagara-on-the-lake, occupant of a car which overturned in a ditch; Pietro D'Andrea, 24, who jumped from a moving truck to avoid being hit; and Heikki Yiagalo whose car plunged into a ditch near Arthur and Don Whitney, 21, of Orillia, thrown from a car he was taking to a garage to repair.

Killed in the plane crash near Windsor were Henry Schelteus, 28, and Paul Helmut Petnold, 24, both of Sarnia. Schelteus' father lives in Rotterdam and is president of the Shell Oil Company in Holland.

STUDENT BURNED IN CAR

Charles Paynter, 23, Ottawa collegiate athlete, was found burned to death in his parked car in Toronto. Ronald Wilson, 2, died in a fire believed started by his four-year-old brother who had a habit of playing with matches.

William Meredith, 23, of Toronto, died after a shooting accident at Cherry Beach, Ont., during a hunting trip. A drinking party in Toronto during which four guests were said to have consumed four 13-ounce bottles of whisky was blamed for the death of Albert Doucette, 19.

Aneurin Bevan Takes Dim View Of Meeting

NEW VALE, Wales (AP)—Aneurin Bevan took a dim view Sunday of the forthcoming meeting of Prime Minister Churchill, President Eisenhower and French Premier Laniel in Bermuda.

"We do not want Sir Winston in his fragile state of health to go along to Bermuda to meet President Eisenhower in his present harassed condition of mind to discuss these very grave matters with the French representative who do not know at any moment whether he is going to be called home," said Bevan, leader of the Labor party's left wing.

In a speech in about 300 political supporters here he said the Labor party should insist on a debate in the House of Commons on important foreign issues before the Bermuda meeting.

Last of Pulpwood Races to Paper Mills Before Freeze-Up

Last of Canada's annual harvest of 10,000,000 cords of pulpwood is being hurried down rivers, streams and chutes to reach the mills before the freeze-up. Persistent lumbermen's forces form a backgound for this view of the Ottawa river, laden with pulp, that began its journey in the timber-rich areas stretching hundreds of miles from the capital. The chute, right, takes the log around a power dam just north of Ottawa. When the freeze-up comes, the chugging of the tugs ceases, the shouts of the lumbermen are stilled, but farther north, in the forests across the Dominion, men start out to begin the cycle all over again. — Photo by Malak, Ottawa.—Central Press Canadian.

PICTON

$30,000 Organ Is Dedicated At United Church

PICTON — With impressive ceremony, a Wicks three-manual organ was dedicated yesterday morning at Picton United Church. It is a memorial to those of this congregation who gave their lives in World Wars I and II, and those who served King and Country. Costing $30,000 the memorial is a gift of members of the church. Assisting the minister, Rev. F. J. Whiteley in the service was Dr. H. A. Kent, former senior Protestant chaplain, and principal emeritus of Queen's theological college, Kingston, who delivered the sermon.

26 ON HONOR ROLL.

The honor roll includes the names of 26 who gave their lives.

Following the unveiling and dedication the doxology was played by A. A. Benvie, organist and choir master and the choir sang the anthem: "The Souls of the Righteous" and later rendered "I Vow to Thee, My Country."

At the evening service, Dr. Kent again delivered a challenging sermon. The anthem by the choir was Handel's "Now On Land and Sea". Miss Florence Barber, whose father sang at the dedication of the former organ in 1910, was soloist, rendering "Consider and Hear Me".

Mr. Benvie gave a 15-minute recital. Tonight, Monday, Claire Coci of New York City is giving a recital on the new organ and music lovers are coming from Watertown, Kingston, Belleville, Pembroke and many other points.

HOPE GIVEN UP

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States army announced Friday that about 4,000 men now listed as missing in action in Korea will be declared "presumed dead" in January if there is no new information about them by then. As of now, the army lists the number of its missing in Korea as about 8,200.

Police Arrest 1,000 Teen-agers In Crack Down

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Nearly 1,000 "teen-agers" were arrested here during the week-end as police cracked down on youthful gangs which have been terrorizing the city in recent weeks.

Commissioner Thomas J. Gibbons said he ordered the drive after numerous complaints of beatings, holdups and robberies by gangs of adolescent terrorists. Even as special squads of police struck at poolrooms, taprooms, street corners and all-night restaurants where the gangs congregate, a 45-year-old woman was reported held prisoner by four youths. Police said she was criminally assaulted.

The 90 policemen confiscated a quantity of guns and switchblade knives, recently made illegal by a city ordnance.

Most of the youngsters were released in custody of their parents, who were warned to keep them from assembling in gangs.

Geo. K. Shiels, Dies on Sunday War Supply Head

TORONTO (CP)—George Kingsley Shiels, 58, general manager of the Canadian Manufacturers Association and Second World War deputy minister of munitions and supply, died Sunday night.

The man who rose from private to captain during the First World War was probably best known to Canadians for his work as one of the key directors of the civilian war effort during the Second World War.

The department he handled under Munitions Minister (now Trade Minister) Howe was described as "the biggest business in the world," buying not only for the Canadian war machine but handling the orders of Allies as well.

NEW BRUNSWICK NATIVE

Born in Gagetown, N. B., he left school at 14 to start work as a bookkeeper. After the First World War, he worked in the Massilmes for several years, then went to Regina where he was assistant general manager of Robert Simpson Western Limited. From 1946 until he became CMA general manager last July 1, he was executive vice-president and director of N. M. Davis Corporation, Ltd., Toronto.

Surviving are his widow and two sons, George and Terence, all of Toronto.

The funeral service will be at 2 p. m. Wednesday at Christ church, Yonge and Heath streets, with interment in York Cemetery.

Easy-to-find clue to a man's character!

Among many a man's private papers are certain documents that can tell you things about him which you might not otherwise learn for some time.

These documents are his life insurance policies. And they indicate, for instance, that the man who owns them probably is thrifty, foresighted and realistic.

Here too is quite reliable evidence that he is a good provider — one who is genuinely concerned about his family's future welfare. And this, in turn, suggests that he is considerate of others.

Chances are he is also a dependable worker. For his ownership of life insurance demonstrates readiness to assume responsibility — an attitude that helps a man in any job.

Moreover, if he is also using life insurance to build income for his later years, you can bet he's the self-reliant type. You won't find him depending on relatives or charity to do what he can do for himself!

All in all, he's probably like most life insurance policyholders in every community — a really solid citizen!

AT YOUR SERVICE!

A trained life underwriter, representing one of the more than 50 Canadian, British and United States life insurance companies in Canada, will gladly help you plan now for your family's security and your own needs in later years. Rely on him!

Dulles Not Aware Of Any Attacks On Lester Pearson

Defends Committee Requests For Questioning of Gouzenko

WASHINGTON (Reuters)—State Secretary Dulles said today that he was not aware of any attacks on Canadian External Affair Minister L. B. Pearson by any responsible person or group whatsoever.

Dulles praised highly Pearson's anti-Communist record.

Dulles specifically was asked to comment at his weekly press conference on a statement by a Canadian member of Parliament that mud was being thrown across the border and that the first target was Pearson.

Dulles at the same time defended the propriety of the action of a Senate committee in asking the Canadian government through the state department that Igor Gouzenko be made available for questioning by them. Gouzenko is a former code clerk in the Soviet embassy in Ottawa who defected with evidence of Soviet espionage and is at present a ward of the Canadian government.

The Canadian government has rejected one request by the committee to this effect and has a second request under consideration.

Dulles expressed his confidence that the Canadian government would make its decision as a wholly independent sovereign power. He pointed out that the Canadian government has its own rights and will defend those rights just as the United States government would.

He added that he was also confident that the Canadian government would be motivated by a sense of friendship just as the United States government would.

He expressed sympathy with the desire of the committee to interview Gouzenko. The question was whether, in the light of new facts revealed, Gouzenko had information which might be useful in meeting the continuing menace of communism.

Dulles was asked whether the state department had received report that the controversy over the Harry Dexter White case was damaging United States prestige abroad.

Dulles replied that so far the summaries of foreign press reaction had shown that the White case did not become the kind of thing which foreigners would like to see happen in their own countries and that they recognized that each country was different and that this was an American affair.

Gifts of Free Butter Irk Communists

BERLIN (AP) — Thousands of aged East Berliners crossed into the Allied sector for a second day today to get free butter as Communists complained of a "new low provocation by American warmongers."

The Communist party newspaper, Neues Deutschland, called the distribution of Marshall-donated butter a "crime against old people."

The letter is being offered to Germans over 60 through the Mayor Reuter Welfare Organization and the International Red Committee.

Neues Deutschland said: "These American warmongers . . . want to incite hatred among people . . . needy against the government of the East German democratic republic and to harness these old people before their war carriages."

On Monday 17,200 pounds of butter were handed out.

The distribution is the second phase of a large-scale program to give a pound of butter to each of the aged in all sectors of the divided city.

THE WEATHER
TORONTO (CP)—Synopsis: A disturbance moving across western Ontario today will be followed by essentially mixed wind freezing rain to regions north of Lake Superior today. Elsewhere across the province considerable cloudiness will continue today with the chance of a few very light showers. In the wake of the disturbance, colder air will again spread over all regions of the province today, giving occasional snowflurries to the lee of the lakes.

Hunter Shot By Squirrel So Story Goes

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Ever hear of a squirrel shooting back at a hunter?

Hunter Eugene Riddell, 17, reported Monday that he shot a squirrel out of a tree last Friday but only wounded it.

He said he placed his rifle against a tree and started to pick up the game. He thought was a dead squirrel. But the squirrel jumped up and bounded off the rifle stock.

A 22-calibre bullet was fired into Riddell's shoulder.

Georges Hebert To Be Hanged For Killing Son

By BERTRAND THIBAULT
Canadian Press Staff Writer
QUEBEC (CP)—Georges Hebert was sentenced Monday night to be hanged for the brutal axe murder of his nine-year-old son, Rene. He will die on the night of Feb. 18 in Montreal's Bordeaux Jail.

The 46-year-old cement worker showed no emotion as the foreman of the jury spoke the verdict and Mr. Justice Charles Lacroix donned black gloves and tri-cornered hat to pronounce the death sentence.

It was the climax of one of the most sensational trials in Quebec history. The judge, jury and spectators were put in suspense by a tragic testimony.

Hebert's four children were slaughtered with an ax April 21 but he was tried only for the death of the eldest.

NO STATEMENT

With eyes downcast and a slight shaking of the head, Hebert replied simply "no" when asked if he had anything to say.

The jury was absolutely known if the defence would appeal.

The crown prosecutor, Lucien Beauchesne, described Hebert as "a monster."

The grounds for error in drawing pity for Hebert was his own testimony that on the night the children were killed he "fell asleep crying because "I was discouraged to find out I had spent my money to buy fuel oil."

He woke to find the ax beside his bed and "I realized that my children were all dead and that I was alone in the house."

"I got up and made the rounds of the beds and I said my beads."

Britain Complains Of Incidents In Canal Zone

LONDON (AP) — Britain has complained to Egypt that the number of anti-British incidents in the Suez canal zone is mounting, the foreign office said today.

A spokesman, citing a report issued by British army authorities in the disputed zone, said a press conference 44 incidents took place in the two weeks ending Nov. 21. Attacks on British personnel and thefts from military depots formed the major number of these, he said.

Hobby of Seeking Buried Treasures Pays Off for Man to Tune of $625,000

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—A chest which contained several thousand Spanish gold doubloons and silver pieces of eight dating from 1715.

He reported the current value of doubloons at $19 to $120 and the silver pieces at $35 to $60.

In addition to the coins, Sneed said, the cache included a pure silver cup and a silver scissors-like instrument.

Sneed believes a Spanish ship may have dumped the chest in the river when it was challenged by pirates.

More Than One Way To Fight Redism—Pearson

Pleads for Mutual Trust in New York

By NEIL SUFRIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—L. B. Pearson, Canada's external affairs minister, declared Monday night it is important for the free countries to recognize that there is more than one way to fight communism.

In an address before the Economic Club here Mr. and United States Pearson said the democracies must be "alert and realistic" but warned that we should "refuse to get panicky or be stampeded into the wrong way of doing things."

Pleading for mutual trust, he said:

"Surely it is possible for Allies to live in a cold-silent existences of sincerity and good faith in dealing with questions of security and subversion.

"Over occasional failure in any of our countries can do much harm to all of us. We know that from bitter experience. But I venture to say he cannot do nearly as much harm to our security as suspicion and lack of mutual trust can do to the co-operation unity of the free world on which our security ultimately must rest."

RELATIONS STRAINED

Pearson's speech before an organization which seeks to unite people of the English-speaking world through their language came when relations between Canada and the United States were strained.

Canada is considering a second request for Igor Gouzenko, the code clerk at the Soviet embassy in Ottawa who defected with evidence of Soviet espionage, to be permitted to talk to U.S. congressional investigators.

Queen and Duke Visit Cockpit Of Their Plane

HAMILTON, Bermuda (CP) Queen Elizabeth spent a half hour in the cockpit of the Canadian Pacific cruiser that carried her and her husband across the last leg of the flight of a globe-circling royal tour. The plane arrived here at 8:55 a.m. EST.

The Queen entered the cockpit after Capt. Frank Gandy, RNR, following a refueling stop, Gander, Nfld. The monarch spent longer periods in the cockpit but did not take over the controls.

Prince Philip, co-pilot of the royal plane, said the flight was done in the best way. The plane travelled at about 18,000 feet.

2,860 Hunters Kill 762 Deer In Lindsay District

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — It takes more than three hunters to get a deer in the Lindsay district.

Figures released by the Ontario department of lands and forests today showed one deer killed by every 3.8 hunters. Deer checking stations in the area reported 2,860 hunters killed 762 deer, seven bears and three elk.

Four per cent. or 125 of the hunters were United States citizens. Male animals constituted 55 per cent of the bag.

U.S. Calls on Russia to Junk 1953-Model of 'Peace Plan'

By STANLEY JOHNSON
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United States called on the United Nations today to junk each and every part of Russia's 1953 model "peace plan."

The chief U.S. delegate, Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., told the 60-member political committee that the resolutions now on the books deal adequately with the subject. The only thing we still require is for the Soviet Union to quit discussing them."

The Kremlin, through its chief delegate, Andrei Y. Vishinsky, has asked the UN to ban the atomic and hydrogen bombs unconditionally; cut the armed forces of the big powers by a flat one-third; establish foreign bases in other countries; and condemn Western anti-Communist propaganda as warmongering.

These demands have been defeated, in one form or another, repeatedly in the assembly and its committees. The Russians have revived them each year.

Instead, the UN has adopted Western proposals for international control of nuclear weapons under strict safeguards as the determination of a disarmament program which would include cuts in the armed forces of the big powers. The assembly has refused to get into the bases question and has condemned war - mongering propaganda impartially without regard to its origin.

Lodge said Russian charges that the U.S. was responsible for current world tension were "obviously written by professional Communist ex-grinders" and reminded him of the old proverb that the devil could quote scripture.

"It is well to look at the record regarding this subject," Lodge declared.

He then detailed efforts of the U.S. and its allies to reach agreement with Russia on the reunification of Germany, and said the West had finally "reluctantly concluded that the Soviet Union did not want to enter into negotiations which might have positive results." Nevertheless, Lodge said, the West still leaves the door open.

Alston of Montreal Royals Will Head Brooklyn Dodgers

BROOKLYN (AP) — Walter (Wally) Alston, manager of the Montreal Royals of the International League, today was appointed manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Alston, 42, succeeds Chuck Dressen, who was fired by Brooklyn Oct. 14 by resigning shortly after he had piloted the Dodgers to second National League pennant in a row. Dressen, who quit after the Brooklyn club rejected his demand for a two or three-year contract, is managing general owner of the Oakland Pacific League club.

The new Dodgers manager, a native of Hamilton, Ohio, played only one year league playing his career. That was at first base for St. Louis Cardinals in 1936.

His 1953 Montreal team finished second to Rochester, but Alston was won the playoffs, then defeated the Kansas City Blues, four games to one, in the little world series.

The new contract was for one year, with a club option.

Walter Emmons Alston, who won a pennant as manager of St. Paul in the American Association, went to Montreal in 1945. He had been in the Brooklyn farm system for eight and a half years.

He will also give first-hand advice to Sir Winston Churchill, President Eisenhower and Rene Laniel, the French premier, on the build-up of the Western world's European defences against communism.

Parents Blamed More Than Town By Magistrate

CHATHAM (CP) — Magistrate Ivan S. Crawford blamed parents rather than the town of Wallaceburg for a juvenile delinquency problem in Tupperville Oct. 3 which resulted in 31 Wallaceburg district teen-agers appearing in court to face charges.

The parents bench appeared in court Monday on charges ranging from theft of gasoline to causing wilful damage.

Eight youths were placed on suspended sentence and put in the custody of Kent County's adult probation officer, Mrs. Gertrude Wander, when they pleaded guilty of charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

All charges were laid following a party at Tupperville in which teen-agers caused more than $250 damage to the home of Mrs. Rose Foshee.

Mrs. Foshee was awakened Dec. 3, having pleaded not guilty to charges arising from the party.

Fire followed the initial blast in the dump, located at Braco de Prata military depot on the outskirts of the city.

Scores of ambulances shuttled the injured to hospitals.

CROLL ASKS IKE TO REPUDIATE U.S. ATTACKS

Gouzenko Case Chief Issue in Commons

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada and the United States continued their tug-of-war today for Igor Gouzenko.

The Canadian government rejected for the first American request that the U.S. Senate internal security sub-committee be permitted to question Gouzenko.

The U.S. state department filed a second request. Indications are that the Canadian reply also has been dispatched to Washington. Prof. Maurice Minnes of Toronto said Monday a statement on the case will not be made in the Commons until the reply has been delivered to the U.S. state department. That may be today or Wednesday.

Canada refused the first U.S. request on grounds that Gouzenko, former clerk in the Soviet embassy here, has no information to add to his disclosures in 1946 which led to discovery of Soviet espionage rings in Canada. The government has told the U.S. it considers that every scrap of information divulged by Gouzenko in 1946 was passed to U.S. authorities.

Gouzenko himself was quoted by the RCMP Oct. 24 as saying he had no new information. But he told newspaper reporters he might have valuable advice for the U.S. investigators.

Canada did most of the talking on the case Monday, some hard words for the U.S.

POLITICAL BLACKMAIL

David Croll, Liberal member of Parliament for Toronto Spadina, said in the Commons House speech debate that "vicious calls" for Gouzenko's testimony were "political blackmail" on Canada to have Gouzenko testify before the security sub-committee.

President Cites Homely Code To Illustrate Point

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower, starting a Thanksgiving holiday today, says no one can assassinate a man who has a friend behind without suffering the penalty of death. He cited a homely code to impress.

The point was the code of the old west where he grew up and it is a code Americans still cherish, the President said at Gettysburg, where in accepting the Rival Fifth Antietamm Engineering annual democratic legacy award, the silver medallion.

In a brief informal address, the president noted he was reared "in the west" in Kansas.

"Now that town had a code, and I raised as a boy to prize that code.

"It was: Mess anyone face to face with whom you drink bread, you could not sneak up on him from behind or do any damage to him without suffering the penalty of an immediate duel. If you were not ready to face and took the same risks he did, you could get away with almost anything, but to shoot in the back bullet was in the front."

The President said our individuals in mind in talking about such penalties, he named no names.

Island Welcomes Queen And Duke In Royal Style

In Bermuda 17 Hours After Leaving London

HAMILTON, Bermuda (CP) — The Royal Stratocruiser carrying Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh on the first leg of their round-the - world Commonwealth tour landed here at 9:55 a. m. Bermuda time, 10:55 a.m. Canadian to a deafening cheer from crowds of spectators at the airport.

The plane was four minutes ahead of schedule as it made its second landing of the tour. Earlier this morning it stopped for refueling at Gander, Nfld.

The Royal couple arrived in scrubbed, be-flagged Bermuda just short of 17 hours after leaving London.

The governor and local dignitaries greeted the Queen and the duke as they stepped smiling from the plane. After inspecting a guard of honor, the royal couple set out on a motor tour of the island.

QUEEN IN UNIFORM

The Queen wore an aquamarine silk gown and matching blue hat. The Duke was in naval uniform.

Temperature was in the low 70s. A light breeze was blowing.

Thousands of school children cheered uproariously as the Queen and her party left the airport for the motor tour began 15 minutes after landing.

Shortly after the take-off from Newfoundland, stewards served the Queen and the Duke their first of bacon, eggs and coffee in the Queen's private sleeping compartment. It was their second meal in the air. They dined on fish, roast pheasant and champagne after leaving London last night.

FAMILY KEPT ADVISED

In London, BOAC plotters charted the plane's progress, and when it landed at Gander, airport authorities telephoned the news to Clarence House, home of Princess Queen Mother and Princess Margaret.

The Queen spotted two old friends at the airport in Bermuda and beckoned to them. Assistant commissioner, F. E. Anthony, the RCMP chief during the 1939 Canadian Royal tour, and Cpl. Tom Hunt, also a veteran of the tour contingent, ran up the steps and got a brief handshake.

"It's so nice to be in Canada again, even if only for a short time," the Queen told newspapermen but wore a form-fitting beige suit with a blue collar and string of pearls. The Duke wore a dark blue business suit.

The two scarlet-clad Mounties gave the Queen Canada's impressive Commonwealth salute a minute refueling stop-over before the flight was resumed. The Queen and the first formal stop of the 50,000-mile tour of 14 Commonwealth countries.

SLEEPY CROWD

A section of the crowd of more than 5,000 persons that had gathered early in the hope of catching a glimpse of the Royal couple subjected to a cheer "for the Queen" and singing "for she's a jolly good fellow." Later it was circulated that the Queen and Duke, after clearing the airport, continued to shout: "It's time to get up." But even she gave up.

The Queen and Duke gave individual "ah" when the servicemen who worked over the plane pulled away the ramp.

Together the Queen appeared, followed by the Duke. They had shared the crowd and kissed all their beds, dressed hurriedly and made the appearance just before take-off.

The Queen looked immaculate and smart. She is half was out of place although she was a bit tired. She carried a white purse in her hand.

Cats and Dogs Equal Children In United States

NEW YORK (AP)—Families in the United States have about as many cats and dogs as they do children, says National Family Opinion, Inc., a research organization. There are more dogs and cats—48,300,000 of them — than there are American households—41,000,000. This means that there are 1.1 dogs and/or cats in the average home.

Cats outnumber dogs by 28,700,000 to 22,600,000. But it's just that more people have fewer dogs, while less people have more cats.

Wolf Too Smart For Hunters Experts State

TORONTO — The wolf is still the smartest animal in the bush. Though he may, at times, emerge on the edge of civilization and make his presence known by killing sheep, he remains a difficult target for the hunter. Wolf hunts fail to halt their depredations. Sometimes for every wolf shot, half a dozen get away, according to conservation officers of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests.

Experts on wolf tactics are inspector J. S. (Sandy) Mills, of the Lake Simcoe District, and conservation Officer Forest Richardson, of Perth. Richardson handles a government pack of running hounds.

Investigating reports of wolves in Simcoe County last year, Mills invited Richardson to bring along the dogs. An area frequented by wolves had been mapped. A litter born in the spring was known to have been reduced without difficulty. The wolves' foraging range had been established as from Pine River, Barrie, to 300 acres. Forest plantation made perfect cover, extending over three miles of brush country to a 100-acre swamp where another large reforested section offered excellent cover.

Forty Simcoe district hunters were invited to participate in the hunt, along with conservation officers. In three days of hunting three wolves were killed and another was presumed to have died of wounds.

The first night the hunters a few things, about wolves, among them: The brush wolf sets on his own range and invariably follows a trail from one hunting area to another. He's by nature established by habit.

Howling. Insisted on coming through the lines at their habitual rendezvous points. Although a dozen hunters had been placed on stands.

STAY IN SAME AREA.

Unlike a fox, which, when chased by a dog, runs the entire outside circle or leaves the area entirely, the wolf will run a small, quick area of 30 acres for an hour or more before breaking into the open to repeat the performance in the surrounding country a mile or more away. They then return to the stands and headed back for the starting area.

Shotguns with BB or Triple A shot were found to be best suited to wolves. Rifle, however, got the majority of kills, using either No. 2 Nitro Express shot. He [illegible] the wolf considerably ahead of hounds travels at about 40 miles an hour and that only when a hunter who can swing and estimate his lead can get in a killing shot.

Some years ago, the Algoma Wolf Club of Sault Ste. Marie imported specially bred hounds to deal with wolves in that area. Several members of the club built snowmobiles which were driven by aircraft engines for travel over the ice. Their method of operation was to run the wolves down on an island, have the wolves [illegible] from the ice, and then go after them with the snowmobiles which, in some cases, were capable of travelling at 60 miles an hour.

More recently, American sportsmen have hunted wolves with aircraft, landing on animals on lakes, then landing the ski-fitted planes and hacking out the animals.

Though the wolf has been hunted for years by hunters, farmers, trappers, conservation officers and game clubs everywhere in the country, the wary animals survive. Conservationists have travelled thousands of miles across the length and breadth of Ontario without ever having seen a live wolf, despite the fact that there would be seen circling camp fires or met alone at night.

Reports to the contrary, and the reports have been coming many times, there is no known proof that a wolf ever attacked a human being. Officials that is why Lands and Forests officials regard the wolf as about the smartest animal in the bush!

New Tenders Will Be Called For Old Hall

New tenders for the sale of the old firehall on Front street will be called by city council.

Since bids publishing was offered for sale some time ago two offers for the purchase of the old building have been received, one for $3,000 and the other for $7,000. However, the amount of the final offer of $5,000 had "got out" before the second offer had been received and in fairness to everyone Alderman Montrym, chairman of the city property committee suggested it would be better for all if new tenders were called.

The alderman pointed out that the old firehall building was gradually deteriorating and suggested it would be good business for the city to accept the highest "reasonable" offer when new tenders were called.

District Rotary Governor Pays Visit to Club

Ray Jessup, district governor complimented members of the Rotary club in the Bridge Quinte area when referring to the crippled children's work and the fact the club has aided 1,352 crippled children.

He discussed the four avenues of service available to members of Rotary clubs stressing fellowship throughout. Mr. Jessup spoke of the fellowship gained at international assemblies he has attended.

The speaker enumerated the four avenues of service as being club service, vocational service, community service and international service. He pointed out that the keynote of club service was regular attendance.

Mr. Jessup also mentioned the club's publication, "The Rotarian", describing it as one of the finest publications of its kind. He urged members to read the magazine and pass it on to their children if they are of age so they can read it, said they would find nothing objectionable in the publication.

The district governor who is governor of this Rotary area was elected at the district convention last spring. He is a resident of Sudbury, Ontario.

Mr. Jessup was introduced by the president, Harold Hall, and the attendance of the club were expressed by O. H. Scott.

A vote of vote was presented to Archdeacon J. B. Creeggan.

Hallway Ceiling In City Hall To Be Lowered

The hallway ceiling on the second floor of the city hall will be lowered as part of the work being done to repair the damage caused by the recent fire which damaged the main hallway at city hall.

Alderman Wilbur Coonstyman as chairman of city property noted that lowering of the ceiling had been recommended by the insurance adjustor and that part of the cost of the work would be paid by the insurance company in lieu of work, which would be necessary if the ceiling were not lowered.

Cost of lowering the ceiling from its present 22 feet to 14 feet was estimated at $494.18 towards which the insurance company was willing to contribute $220. Council approved payment of $274.18 as the city's share.

All damages caused by the fire at the city hall will be repaired, the stairway to be finished in a modern style, and decorative painting will be done. Lowering of the plaster ceiling in the hallway will mean a saving in fuel costs, it was stated.

Council Approves Principle Of Future Annexation But Not Before All Costs Determined

The stamp of approval to the principle of a future annexation was given by city council Monday but before such plans are proceeded with a survey to determine all costs and responsibilities will be carried out.

The discussion on annexation proceedings took up considerable of the time at the council session and final approval to the recommendation was not given until the original motion was drafted to prevent the city going ahead until all costs were known.

For the purpose of planning the area to be considered for annexation has been defined as the Purdy Sideroad on the east, the easterly boundary of Lot No. 14 or the cemetery sideroad on the west and the new four-lane highway on the north.

Mayor Haig in presenting the recommendation, made it clear that the area defined was for planning purposes only and that the area eventually chosen for annexation would undoubtedly be smaller than that outlined.

WANTED ONE MORE LIMITED

His one who had brought in the recommendation two weeks ago calling for the city planning committee to bring in a general plan for annexation, Alderman Hollingsworth said at that time he had in mind something of a more limited nature. The city could easily get involved in heavy costs if it attempted annexation of too large an area at once.

He pointed out that when an area is annexed the taxpayer immediately becomes responsible for roads, schools, police and fire protection and sewage and other costs.

To this Mayor Haig replied there was no proposal to annex the entire area at this time. The area had been defined merely for the purpose of plans and survey. The annexation area for annexation would undoubtedly be a considerable. However, he doubted if the Municipal Board would approve of annexing too small an area.

He again pointed out that the recommendation called only for approval in principal to future annexation.

Alderman Thomas called for a report from all municipal bodies, including school board, public utilities, and all city council committees with budgets before any action was taken with respect to annexation.

"It is all very fine to talk about annexation but the question is can we afford it?" he stated. "Costs concerned with the annexation of a big area would be far greater than the additional revenue obtained. It does not matter what the area or what the extra land if we cannot afford it."

TIME FOR EXPANSION

Alderman Keegan, as chairman of planning, felt that the Belleville area was due for a big industrial expansion and for an orderly plan it was necessary that city gain control over the arteries leading into the city. "We cannot act smartly and gain control of these areas," he said.

With reference to the Mill Street, Lawrence seaway, industrial development in the are would boom. The alderman foresaw the possibility of an additional 10,000 people in Belleville area.

Alderman Temple agreed with Alderman Thomas that all costs concerned with annexation should be obtained before any action be taken and proposed an amendment to the recommendation calling for these to be secured.

CONTROL ESSENTIAL

Alderman Tice noted that control of land use in the areas immediately outside the corporation was essential. He supported Mayor Haig's statement that the area defined in the recommendation was merely a "guiding post" for plans as to what should be taken in.

Alderman Bradford called for approval of the original recommendation which he felt the committee had brought in in good faith. "We are not committing it," he said.

Alderman William Argue said he did not agree and said in his opinion if the recommendation was passed the city would be bound to proceed with the annexation. Ald. Temple was of the same opinion, also stating the city would be committed to the principle.

"If the original recommendation means the defined area is to be considered only for planning then it is okay," interjected Ald. Duffy.

Mayor Haig here re-drafted the original recommendation, making it clear that no action was to be taken until all costs were learned. Amendments to the original motion were withdrawn, then Mayor Haig's recommendation passed unanimously.

Welcome Home Extended To Cpl., Mrs. Hicks

Upwards of 40 relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mrs. R. Mathews, Camilton, on Sunday, to welcome home Cpl. John Owen Hicks, Mrs. Matthew's nephew, and to receive Mrs. Hicks.

Cpl. and Mrs. Hicks were married on the 11 of this year in London, following Cpl. Hicks' tour of duty at the Coronation.

Mrs. Hicks is the former Shirley Anne Jones of London.

Cpl. Hicks, 27, enlisted with the 1st Canadian Signal Regiment in 1948 and has served in Germany with the 27th Brigade since 1951. He returned to Canada on rotation leave on November 11th and will reside with his parents until the expiration of his leave in January, when he expects to be posted to Camp Borden.

Rev. Evered Smith, Christ Church, and Rev. J. E. Struthers, retired, proposed the toasts to Cpl. and Mrs. Hicks.

Guests brought several beautiful gifts to the reception.

The house was decorated with white 'mums and the table was decorated in blue and white with a centrepiece of white 'mums.

Those assisting in serving were Mrs. D. Soaft, Mrs. G. Istead, Miss M. Cannons, Mrs. C. Ellsworth, Mrs. J. Lindsay and Mrs. Charles Freemantle of Port Hope.

Will Add Members To Planning Com.

The city planning committee will be enlarged to include heads of all city departments, it was decided by council Monday.

Members of the planning committee felt that the heads of city departments could add much useful information through membership in an advisory capacity.

Outside members will also be added to the industrial committee, Alderman Argue noted, however, that control of the industrial committee would remain in council who would consider all recommendations.

Hearing on Annexation Application Will Be Asked if Objection Raised

Whether or not there is objection on the part of nearby residents will be all probability be a determining factor as to whether a small piece of property immediately east of the city owned by J. N. Vanover is annexed to the city.

Yesterday city council passed an amended recommendation calling for approval of Mr. Vanover's application to have the property brought into the city.

The original recommendation, which two weeks ago was referred back to the planning committee for further consideration, called for the municipal board to hold a hearing on the application with all costs to be paid by the applicant. The amended motion brought in yesterday asked the municipal board to hold a hearing on the application if any objection was filed in writing.

There was considerable discussion as to whether the municipal board should be requested to hold a hearing on the application for annexation. This discussion was spearheaded by Alderman Thomas, who wanted to know why there should be a hearing if there were no objections to the annexation.

Alderman Keegan said the matter had caused much controversy and to protect the rights of the "little man" the planning committee had thought the hearing was necessary.

"But it would be a foolish waste of money to hold a hearing if there was no objection," Alderman Thomas objected.

"That is your opinion, but it is not mine," retorted Alderman Keegan.

Alderman Countryman said he had opposed the original recommendation on the understanding that the city would make every endeavoring to get in under the liquor vote likely to be held in that section of the city. He wanted to know if a separate vote would be necessary in the small area proposed for annexation. City Clerk-Treasurer H. R. Bateman observed that in his opinion whether or not a separate vote was necessary would be a legal matter.

Mr., Mrs. W. Adams Celebrate 67th Wedding Anniversary

TRENTON (Special)—A Trenton couple married 67 years ago today celebrated their wedding anniversary quietly at home on Lorne avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Adams joined in holy matrimony at Wooler on November 24, 1886, received a letter of congratulations from Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent last Friday. Other congratulatory messages have been arriving from members of their family and many friends.

Walter and Jessie Adams moved from the farm in Murray township to Trenton in 1919. Mr. Adams opened a furniture business, which he operated for a number of years before retiring. He is the son of the late William Adams and Christine Pulford.

Mrs. Adams the daughter of the late Warren Scott and Samantha Comstock is the youngest and only living member of a family of 16 children. She was born in 1867. She is the granddaughter of Abel Scott a pioneer of Trenton mentioned in a story appearing in a Centennial issue.

The Adams' raised six children. George lives on the old Adams' homestead in Murray township; Charles and Alfred went afield, the former settling in Chicago and the latter a resident of Ottawa. Mrs. C. (Helen) Perry the only living daughter lives in Trenton. A daughter Lucy and a son Fletcher died some years ago.

SANTA CLAUS COMING
Santa Claus is coming to town Saturday, December 5. The Chamber of Commerce sponsors of the Community Santa Claus parade announced today that there were 4,000 bags of candy to distribute among the children after a procession including two bands and 16 floats pass along Dundas Street from College School grounds to the Catholic School grounds the regular route taken each year.
The floats in the parade will portray story book characters.

City Solicitor Gives Opinion On By-Law

The city anti-noise by-law does not cover the noise made by heavy transports roaring through the city, members of city council were told yesterday by Alderman Robt. Temple, chairman of the traffic committee.

Quoting city solicitor R. A. Pringle, Alderman Temple said that the present anti-noise by-law was apparently not effective in respect to transports unless it could be shown that the noise was caused deliberately, with the intention of annoying citizens.

There was nothing in the by-law saying anything about mufflers on transports.

He went on to say, however, that the Highway Traffic Act called for every motor vehicle to be equipped with an exhaust muffler. City police with a mechanic could stop transports entering the city to make a check to determine if the vehicles had proper mufflers.

No action could be taken against transport companies with respect to noise made by gears.

The alderman observed that the town of Gananoque was spearheading a movement calling on the Ontario Highways Department for more strict regulations regarding the noise made by transports.

Santa Claus Thrills Hundreds Of Children

City moppets and junior school children were both pleased and disappointed yesterday afternoon when they crowded by the hundreds into the downtown section of the city to see Santa Claus in what turned out to be a delayed appearance.

The hundreds of kiddies were pleased and thrilled by the appearance of Santa in his traditional red suit and white whiskers as he rode up and down Front Street atop a decorated float. Their disappointment was when the fact that Santa's supply of candy and toys had run out, a shot of supplying the mob of kiddies with free sweets.

Today and last night city firemen received many compliments on their initiative in giving the kiddies a look at Santa after local merchants decided to pass up the parade for this year.

Appearing in the parade was the decorated float on which Santa rode, two fire trucks and the fire chief's car.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance today said the show was entirely a fire department affair.

"We miscalculated on the number of children expected to turn out and the fire department didn't buy nearly enough suckers," he said.

Wild Turkeys Being Raised In Ontario

TORONTO — Thanksgiving across the border, with attendant thoughts of turkey, recalls the fact that, for the first time in half a century, wild turkeys are being raised in Ontario through the efforts of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests. The Department hopes that, some day, the giant and magnificent gobbler associated with Thanksgiving and Christmas and New Year's, too—again will be in sufficient numbers to be bagged by hunters as they were generations ago.

Reported some time ago from Pennsylvania, a number of toms and hens are reported thriving on a large estate near Sarnia in an experimental program being conducted by the Province. Many years ago, wild turkeys were quite common throughout almost all of southern Ontario. But, as civilization slowly encroached upon their habitat, they gradually decreased in numbers and by 1900, had vanished entirely from these parts.

The wild turkey is about four feet long with a wing spread of about five feet. His history indicates that it was taken from Mexico by Spain by the early "conquistadores" and spread throughout Europe in the 15th century.

WAS EASY TARGET.
On the North American continent, the wild turkey was an important part of the diet of the early settlers, was plentiful from the Atlantic seaboard to west of the Great Lakes and was rated unwary and an easy target. Steady hunting and the growth of settlements later confined the birds to such states as Texas, Arkansas, the Carolinas, Florida, Louisiana, and Pennsylvania.
One of the difficulties encountered by the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests is finding areas large enough to sustain the birds and where weather is favorable. In the Sarnia area, the small flock has been placed on an estate of more than 6,000 acres, half of which is forest. It appears that a turkey gobbler, in early times, liked to stake out an area of anywhere from 100 to 300 acres and he'll fight furiously to retain possession of his domain.
So far as is known, the turkeys will not live in northern areas where the snow is deep and cold extreme. This is unfortunate, as far as the department is concerned, since millions of acres of northern bush are available.
CAUTIOUS NOW.
If the time ever does come when Ontario has an open season on wild turkeys, hunters are likely to have their troubles with the birds, authorities think. It is said that when a hunter tries to draw a bead on a wild turkey, the bird will get behind a tree or boulder and, just as top speed, keeping the obstacle directly behind. By the time the hunter has fired waiting for the bird to "present" for "sliding," it is usually miles away. Few birds are flushed ground, as rapidly as the wild turkey, which seldom flies because weight prevents it.
It may take a while, experts say, but success of the Department's efforts in stocking Hungarian partridge, Ontario hunters have been so outstanding that many hunters believe that the day when the gobbler again is a familiar sight in Southern Ontario.
CLEAN UP.
Late summer depredations by bears in many parts of Ontario, notably in Algonquin Park and, to the west, around White River and the Lakehead, have brought a word of advice to summer camp owners from Ontario Department of Lands and Forests, staffs. Best way, they say, to avoid repetition of costly break-ins and wanton destruction by hungry bears next summer is simply this: Clean up at the dump.
The bears lost their summer poultry supply through the camps. The hunger resulted when campers left. Next year, they say, season closed up and were home. Bears broke into summer homes and camps. Then when there was did considerable damage in the process. They even roamed the streets and back yards at the Lakehead, and Algonquin Park Rangers point out further that persistent dry weather had destroyed a great deal of the annual natural food supply, thus depended on camp garbage, smoked ham things. Staff members at White River, reviewing the situation, suggest:
"A dirty camp, replete with garbage, will attract all manner of scavenger animals. Among them will be found one of North America's best camp diagnosed unto the black bear.
"A bear is a big animal and is quite capable of doing much damage. We all acknowledge that fact. Why, then, should men conduct themselves and their business in such a fashion that the results of their actions will attract bears to their camps? A heap of garbage or continued voluntary handouts are still-edged invitations to a family of bears. They'll gladly come around to accept the offerings. When these sources fail, what is more logical than for the bears to seek out the camp larder?
We are firmly convinced that damage caused by bears can be minimized and, in fact, almost eliminated, if garbage is disposed of regularly, either by burning the refuse in a pit with the addition of liberal quantities of lime. This will destroy the garbage or make it unpalatable, at least. By all means, don't feed the bears!"

RIGGER THAN GOUZENKO

It has become apparent that the request of the U. S. Senate internal security committee that Igor Gouzenko be permitted to testify before it has become a major issue, much greater than Gouzenko.

Walter Winchell, the Broadway commentator, said in his Sunday broadcast that the Canadian Government's refusal to permit Gouzenko to testify "may embarrass the famous Canadian holding it up."

Winchell then added: "Senator Jenner, sub-committee chairman, may be forced to make public sworn testimony involving Lester Pearson."

We must remember that this is merely a radio commentator, and not a United States official, who is speaking.

But if Winchell proves right, if Senator Jenner or any other official does "make public sworn testimony involving Lester Pearson," then we shall have a bare-faced attempt to blackmail the Canadian Government into a course of action which it deems unwise.

We shall also have a first-class example of the basic danger of "McCarthyism."

It may be assumed that this "sworn testimony" is damaging to Pearson. It is believed that it consists of a statement by Elizabeth Bentley, confessed courier for a wartime Soviet spy ring in which Mr. Pearson was "had once been an excellent source of information" while he was minister-counsellor in the Canadian embassy in Washington during the war. Victor Lasky, former New York newspaperman, says Miss Bentley made such a statement. Lasky adds: "Perhaps Mr. Pearson did not know he was being 'used'."

The testimony is believed to have been made at a secret session of the Senate internal security committee in August of 1951. Over two years have elapsed without it being made "official". Meanwhile, Senator Jenner releases this testimony two questions immediately required to be answered.

If he believes Miss Bentley's statement to be true, why did he not make it public before?

If he believes the statement to be false, why is he now "forced" to make it public?

It is impossible, in the nature of things, that a satisfactory answer can be given to both questions.

Canadian citizens will have little difficulty deciding what the correct answers are.

We do not think that Mr. Pearson's reputation will be damaged by this latest effort to smear him. We are concerned about his reputation. On the other hand, certain other persons may find their reputations damaged—if that is possible..

OCTOBER DANGEROUS MONTH

The worst October in our history.

Oh, no, you will exclaim, we had a grand October, delightful weather.

Unfortunately this weather encouraged a high level of motor travel, especially on week-ends. This heavy traffic was unquestionably a factor in many of the accidents which took a toll of 149 lives, making October, 1953, the blackest month in Ontario's motor vehicle history.

Yet the weather alone cannot be blamed for this high toll. We had good weather in summer, yet traffic during the summer, too, but the accident toll of the summer months was exceeded in October. Nor does this high toll in October appear to be purely coincidence. The previous high record for traffic fatalities came in October of last year, when 132 lives were lost.

A hint as to the nature of the circumstances which make October an extremely dangerous month on our highways can be gathered from a break-down of the nature of the fatal accidents. Passengers were the hardest hit, 83 being killed. Next in line were the drivers, numbering 47, were pedestrians. Another six were cyclists. Perhaps what makes October so much more dangerous than the summer months, when there is heavier, is the shorter period of daylight. Weather is still good enough to encourage travel, but the early onset of the evening is an extremely hazardous period. Too often, we fear, drivers see in the early fall of night only an additional reason to speed their journey home. Slow down at sundown is the reason which deserves more honor than stricter observance by all who use the highways in the fall.

And, of course, pedestrians and cyclists should do their share to avoid accidents by remembering that, if they are not carrying lights, they are extremely hard to see, particularly just at dusk.

QUESTIONABLE DECISION

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police upper echelons have decided to take the RCMP musical ride off the horse show circuit next year.

Reason given is that a stiff course in horsemanship is still a part of the Mountie's basic training and that such training is difficult when a score of mounts are on tour.

This would be a valid reason if the Mountie fledglings were really in need of "a stiff course in horsemanship." But are they? Is not this training just a polite bow in the direction of tradition? And, if this is so why not finish the bow with a suitable flourish and let the Mounties and their mounts strut their performance? The spectacular "ride" is an extremely popular feature wherever given and it is to be hoped the powers that be will reconsider their decision.

ACHIEVEMENT

'Tis strange few memories survive
What of what I did when I was five.
What of my childhood can I hold,
My father and my mother told.
This much I learned and lived to pass
I was too full of mischief then.

For Sundays I'd a velvet suit,
At fact I wish I could refute.
And mother kept my hair in curls,
A glory that belongs to girls,
But both my parents darkly hid
The first smart thing I said or did.

At five, my father, at the most,
Of me had little he could boast.
He held his story book to me.
I don't know now or just what age
I learned to read a printed page.
Of those days past, when I was small,
I've no achievements to recall.

But bursting now with pride am I,
That I've one good reason why.
This great achievement's all I need:
Our Terry, five years old, can read!

The other night upon my knee
He held his story book to me.

"Coach, it's a marvel how you steam the boys up for a big game!"

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

Nov. 24, 1923.

Mrs. W. B. Markle of Toronto is the guest of Miss Lazelle Brown.

Mrs. Ida Goodmurphy has returned home from Montreal where she spent the past two months with her daughter, Mrs. W. T. Bunbury.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Moynes entertained the members of Bellevue Street Church choir at their home on the Trent Road last evening.

Two hundred local men are now employed on relief jobs in the city.

Mr. R. R. Hannah, Charles Street, has just finished getting hunting for deer in the past fifty years; the season was the 30th.

Miss M. E. Griffin has returned home from Toronto where she spent several days on visit.

Miss E. O'Hearn, Reg. N., of this city is taking a special short course in connection with her profession at Toronto University.

20 YEARS AGO

Nov. 24, 1933.

Mr. Leonard Crook, a member of the staff of the Canadian Bank of Commerce here, has been transferred to a branch of the bank in Toronto. He will be much missed by many friends. A member of the Grand Trunk senior baseball team during the summer of 1933, he was also on guardian for the Belleville intermediate hockey team last winter and always played the game in every sense of the word. Prior to coming to Belleville he was goal keeper for the Aura Lee juniors in Toronto.

Mr. Robert Andrews of the city mail delivery staff, will be off duty for a few days owing to illness.

Mrs. George Kelly, John Street has returned home after a trip to Western Canada where she visited friends in Cornation, Alberta, Regina, Sask., and Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Mr. Douglas Gunn of Winnipeg, Manitoba, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Gunn, Frank Street.

40 YEARS AGO

Nov. 24, 1913.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Draycott of this city will observe the 50th. anniversary, which is called the golden wedding tomorrow. Many friends will be pleased to extend congratulations and express good wishes.

At the regular meeting of Mizpah Lodge No. 127 I.O.O.F., the following officers were elected: J.P.G., W. Pringle; N.G., G. Brower; V.G., Thomas Fairman; treasurer, A. Cooper; financial secretary, R. H. Ketcheson; recording secretary, J. E. Farley. Lodge physician, Dr. Platt.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Mayo went to Ottawa today.

Mr. James Knox, a resident of Belleville for thirty years, has left for Los Angeles, California, where he will spend the winter. He was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Georgia Knox. In the spring they will take up residence in Vancouver, B.C.

50 YEARS AGO

Nov. 24, 1903.

The Rev. William Tremblin died today at his home on Cedar Street in his 75th year.

E. W. Rathbun, prominent manufacturer died this morning at his home in Deseronto at the age of 61 years.

Mr. Patrick O'Brien of Toronto, a former resident of this city, is receiving a congratulatory letter.

Mr. J. C. Fowlds of Campbellford was in town today.

From file copy at this time in 1873: "It is gratifying to learn that the local board of health is endeavoring to have a hospital established here."

Who's spying on whom is another question. But the efficiency of operations in such an atmosphere of fear and worry must be a long way from pleasant.

In the meantime, and until our fellows can get a look behind over there, we think we'll be careful about padded shoulders on our suits. They might hide a bomb like that one Dick Tracy's Uncle Canhead just got out of. We'll be careful about large button pants and the wearing of ketwackes. You never can tell, and never, never will we leave our golashes where someone can sneak in a grenade. Just to be safe we'll not wear golashes at all.

As for wastebaskets, to be on the safe side, always toss a match in them as you sit down.

What if you burn the place down? Better than having hidden recording devices around.

Wastebasket Bogeymen

(Financial Post)

There used to be 46 different types of waste baskets in Washington Government offices. Now they've been reduced to seven. Why? Well, not because it's easier to hit your target on the basket with a cigaret butt, or roll of paper, however. Officials explain "are one of the high security risks in Government."

Which means Washington official in charge of wastebaskets. He adds: "The ordinary wastebasket can be used as a plant for a little recording set. We are trying to . . . have a wastebasket so simple that they cannot put a recording device in it."

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

AVOID FRONTAL ATTACKS

Diversionary movements are important in present-day military strategy. In fact they always have been.

But some people go through life by taking up arms (as Shakespeare said in "a badly mixed metaphor) against a sea of troubles. Or, to change the figure, they run headlong against a stone wall across life's pathway and butt their heads against it, with such results as would naturally follow.

Consider the idea of overwhelming the enemy by a lateral attack. Ponder the feasibility of dealing with your problems indirectly. If somebody has something against you, ask yourself whether or not the problem might be solved if you would change a bit, and believe me, certain of the situation. If your business is slipping a little, don't put too much stock in the fact that sales resistance is everywhere getting stiffer and that your competitors are experiencing the same thing you are. Start a lateral attack on sales resistance. Think up the possibility of new products to intrigue and interest the buyer.

If depressed in mind, force some pleasant, or perhaps amusing, thought to the forefront of your consciousness. If tempted with evil, start running. If obsessed with unwholesome thoughts, do not try to throw them out of the mind, but throw them out by filling the attention upon interests that are wholesome and absorbing.

Lateral, not frontal attacks.

Objects to Criticism Of Ice-Skating Show

Editor
Ontario Intelligencer.

I wish to take exception to the critic's report on the ice show at the Arena last week.

I was not there to see it, as I had a banquet to cater to that evening, so my opinion must be based: (a) Asking persons who were there. (b) Past experience, etc.

There have been many pronouncements of late, deploring and fold up in this province of ours and somebody took a financial rap because they wanted to see a bunch of kids who were ice minded and not capable of skating.

They have skated in natural ice arenas and artificial and in all kinds of weather because they like to figure skate. Small cities and small towns all over Canada and the big shows were always a welcome stop to these aggregations. Nobody made any money and these teenagers and some older did for "art's" sake, getting experience for which they liked doing.

The last time I was here, came all the way from Edmonton in a bus and the members have all the way from $10 to $100 that their child was pleasing; at least it was better than Arthur Godfrey's TV Ice Show, and I should know.

Makes Suggestions Regarding Rest Rooms

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

As there are no rest rooms for the public started yet, here is just another suggestion.

Why not build at the end of the police station where there is one now, a public rest room. As the market square is mostly used by everybody and where one generally expects to find a rest room. We have pay phones; why not have pay rest rooms? Money obtained that way would pay for, or help pay for the caretaker.

Hope something can be done before cold weather flies in.

Yours truly,
Dr. Brady

Editor's Note — Work on rest rooms located in the basement of the city hall is underway.

These people are all Canadians and hopeful of making the "big show." This is the ladder for them. Why not give them a break instead of a panning? All they lacked was a near-nude costume. And the ice.

Look at the Canadians that are the best of the best of all the ice shows, Barbara Ann Scott, Marilyn Take. The Caley sisters and hundreds of others. Let's encourage talent a break.

Yours in Beaver, The Chef, Sea-Way Grill.

THE WELL BALANCED DIET BUNK

Clinick racketeery with a lucrative article of vitamin pills coming two or three times a week for "shots" still at $2.50 a throw. Packages from $3 to $7.50 of vitamin B1 (thiamin) and vitamin B12 shots. Hydrochloric acid, a dose of vitamin B1 or of vitamin B12 had the same effect when taken by mouth as it has when administered in an injection by the office girl wearing a near-nurse costume. And the vitamin itself is worth a fraction of a cent to as much as two and three cents a dose. But that's the way the YAPs like it.

Dr. Brady

Some practitioners who have little practical knowledge of the nonsal daily vitamin requirements of children and adults still disparage reliance for advice with the offhand assurance that any one who has a varied, well balanced diet gets all the vitamins the body needs from fresh vegetables and fruit. R. H. A. Plimmer, noted British nutrition authority, doesn't think it is quite that easy. "There is no justification" asserts Dr. Plimmer, "for the statement that it is assumed that while bread eaters get enough vitamin B from the wheat germ (well balanced, varied) diet". The chief natural supply of this vitamin is in the outer layers of grains (1½ pints) of milk or the equivalent in children and adults and restore to the diet the staff of life — freshly ground whole wheat flour in place of refined white flour.

Correction of these deficiencies is simple: Let every person, young or old, eat one pint (1½ pints) of milk or the equivalent in children and adults and restore to the diet the staff of life — freshly ground whole wheat flour in place of refined white flour.

Merit Award

(Wall Street Journal)

In New York state, two men employed at a steel company thought up a chain-saw device for cutting and removing those unsightly and hazardous underwater pilings from the Niagara river a few miles about Niagara Falls, enabling the removal job to be done at a cost of $6,000 instead of $50,000. Gov. Dewey presented them with a $2,000 merit award, largest in the six-year history of the state's suggestion program.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In the fairly near future, it is likely that every man might be well be regarded in the same light as side drivers are now and speed on the new residential street will be held down sternly to ten miles an hour. Already the certain cross streets and down streets in the city are marked as expressway or speedways on which traffic can go as it pleases. These will be either elevated or built below the level of normal living and commercial streets.

Why traffic is permitted to travel at thirty and forty miles an hour on decent quiet residential and business streets is a mystery when you come to think of it. It can be the hurry of all these people to get to work that might just as long through residential areas? There is one explanation, however, that the motor car has us bewitched, that the novelty of having wheels under our feet is still with us. We are all playing at being big.

But it will be economics, not ethics or morality, that will finally settle the earth. The increase in the number of vehicles each year goes on irrevocably. We can't fol-bid the manufacturers to quit. We can't stop anyone else right buy a car or truck. Each year, therefore, the already full to bursting space, the highways will become more jammed.

Each year, by mere arithmetic progression, the number of accidents will increase, the toll of death and injury, the cost in damaged property and in time lost in travel. Insurance rates, already high, will rise higher and higher. Each year, therefore, the reaction will enter the progressively more violent stages of resentment, providing parking areas. The mercantile and business interests of the communities already worried, will begin to look around for the cheapest possible industry and the civic authorities will be forced to make provision to be the most bewitched of us all by the motor car.

Then the plain dollars that will put the clamp on the motor car. We might look back on the carefree days of our childhood, when we roller skated on the side-walks.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

LOVELY LOITERING

I love at times to loiter! Often I leave my office and no one knows where I am. I stroll about the city through the shopping district, standing before beautiful windows displaying gowns that tempt the feminine eye, fascinating it in the ways had an ambition to design women's gowns! It's the artist in him, I say.

For many years I was a collector of antiques, a rare hobby. Most any day I could be found in some shop or book shop. Often I have lolled up from my occupation for a book now and then and have fallen in a calling and that I ought to be on my way home — but what a joy it is to browse in most wholly lost among books. Many a book-lover knows that may be have had the same experience.

I go to my small print shop and watch the printers set type, and the roll of the presses fascinates me. I like the smell of printer's ink, and the fresh run of sheets of copy emerging from the presses. I speculate upon the salesmanship of rarer magazines and pamphlets that the printers turn out. I had an extra life to live I think I would enjoy being a publisher of books.

It wouldn't matter whether it would be profitable so long as I could get a reasonable living at it. The joy would compensate.

I like "window shopping." I can relish a window of tools and specialties for the man about to build. I wanted once to be a carpenter—a noble calling. There is spiritual wealth to be found in a builder, even though I don't smoke a pipe, I like to stand before the window of a smoke shop and decide upon the kind of a pipe I would smoke if I smoked.

It doesn't bother me to admire the things I see in windows, some that I can't afford and some that I can't buy. Keen thinking of people who are like me in this respect. Usually some one else is standing there with me, as I glance up! I wonder what his thoughts are? Usually they are, but lose—by lovely loitering!

The Greatest Faith Ever Known

By Fulton Oursler and April Oursler Armstrong

God—Or Men?

"Col Saund and speak in the Temple!" The messenger from Heaven's fine tone was audible only to the Apostles.

CHAPTER THREE.

The people of Jerusalem and nearby towns had discovered an extraordinary fact. Peter's sorrow had the power to heal their diseases.

From Bethany, the town of Lazarus; from Bethlehem, where Jesus had been born in a stable; and from a hundred other villages, town and hooplings with blankets and crude, homemade litters. Shutcher-beds lined the streets as Peter trudged down from the Cenacle. The shadow of the great, surging form of the fisherman had only to cross the face of the suffering ones, like a cloud over a lake, and fine health was restored.

These healings had a powerful effect upon public opinion in Jerusalem. When Peter and John and the ever growing crowd of their adherents repaired to the Temple area and preached, the throngs listened attentively. Popular clamor magnified their fame, under the windows of the Temple priests. Every day more and more believers flocked to hear and be baptized.

This growing procession appalled High Priest Caiphas. Even Annas, his father-in-law, fretted at the spectacle. For many days they hesitated to act, because, being more politicians than priests, they were afraid of the people's voice. But their own fears betrayed them.

They called their indignation meeting, with a majority of the Sanhedrin present. And after a great deal of fulmination about the impudent teachings of these low-class Galileans who stood on street corners talking to their converts, and after especially revolting Peter and John, the judges reached a decision.

The Sanhedrin resolved to annihilate Christianity, root and branch. Anyway the leaders must destroy the movement; that was the Sanhedrin theory.

That same afternoon, just as gloaming, all twelve apostles were arrested. Elegant guards from the Temple militia bustled them off to the foul cells of the common prison, the "house of the hound."

The twelve did not doubt that some genuinely pestence awaited them at the hands of the Sanhedrin judges. Yet they did not falter. In spite of chains and fetters, bolts and bars, they sang the old psalms together and recited the Lord's Prayer.

They were glad, but not greatly astonished, at what followed.

In the deepest darkness of night, the doors of their prison silently opened before them. There was no clanging of the iron bolts, nor creaking of the leather hinges; no noise of any kind as the door swung out and the clean, free air blew in upon them from the frosty night.

An angel stood on the threshold; a messenger from heaven, visible to all the twelve. His fine tone was audible only to their ears:

"Go, Stand and speak in the Temple to the people all the words of this Life!"

What a command! They had been preaching in the Temple Porch for many days so effectively, with so many converts, that here they were in the watchtower.

Yet now they were told to leave the prison, to enter the Temple itself in fresh defiance of the elders!

To even the gentlest of those ancients of the Sanhedrin that would seem outrageous insolence. What use the apostles to do? Later generations might ask that question, but never Peter and John, their companions in jail. God's angel had spoken.

"And," says St. Luke, "they having heard this, early in the morning entered into the Temple and taught."

Not in the porch. In the Temple! The recoil from the Sanhedrin was instantaneous.

Caiphas rose from his bed shortly after dawn, and strode from his house to call the judges together.

Not that Caiphas knew the real situation; not as yet. He had only heard rumors that crowds were gathering, that a fall delivery, rioting and bloodshed were imminent. So Caiphas and his cronies summoned the whole assembly and sent to the prison to have those twelve Christian fools brought before the mobs freed them.

But the Temple officer and his mincing men returned with a woebegone expression and no prisoners.

"Where are these Christians!" cried Caiphas in a rage.

Almost bruagely the frightened officer made his report.

"We found the prison truly abut with all safety and the keepers standing before the doors: but when we had opened, we found no man within."

There the elders had a mystery before breakfast.

"Behold," a messenger told them, seeing stimiele with impudence, "the men whom you put in prison are standing in the Temple and teaching the people."

The Captain and his Temple Guard were sent to fetch the fugitives. But they had special orders this time to be careful: no violence, mind!

Such was the pitch of popularity to which Peter and John had climbed in the few weeks since the Holy Ghost had come upon them! The elders, who had without connection ordered Jesus to His death, would now deal softly with the Galilean boatmen whom Jesus had left to nurture His Church.

So, without violence, Peter and John stood once again in the great hall of Stones and faced the Sanhedrin.

Caiphas glared at them and said:

"Commanding, we commanded you that you should not teach in this Name. Yet see what you are doing! You have filled all Jerusalem with your doctrine."

The prisoners made no answer. There was, indeed, none to make; the accusation was true.

"And you have a mind," Caiphas went on, his voice cracking with bitter resentment, "to blame us to the crowds that listen to your talk; to bring the blood of this man Jesus upon us."

Upon whom else, elders, scribes, Pharisees? The populace loved Him. Remember their joy, and the palms they flung before Him, when He last entered Jerusalem? The love those Jews bore Him terrified you—you are guilty of His blood! But the words remained unspoken.

"We ought to obey God," said Peter, "rather than men."

That utterance of Peter is the Christian answer to all the dictatorship of history, from Nero to Stalin, and whatever others may lie beyond the years. However man may call the state, the soul's duty is to obey God rather than men whenever the two obediences conflict in conscience.

The judges stared silently at Peter, pondering the words. Then that simple phrase. Presently, Peter, continued:

"The God of our fathers hath raised up Jesus, whom you put to death, hanging Him upon a tree. Him hath God exalted with His right hand to be Prince and Saviour, to give repentance to Israel, and remission of sins. And we are witnesses of these things and the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to all that obey Him."

Those quiet words of Peter slashed like a sword into the hearts of all who heard him.

"They were cut to the heart," said Luke. "And they thought to put them to death."

But among the Pharisees was a doctor of the Law, named Gamaliel, a just citizen of high rank in Temple aristocracy. When Rabbi Gamaliel spoke, the Sanhedrin listened to him, for his wisdom was renowned. Gamaliel stood foremost among the scholars of Jerusalem. One of Gamaliel's students, graduated several years before, was a young man called Saul of Tarsus, as yet unknown in the great world.

Rabbi Gamaliel-first asked that the twelve prisoners be led from the hall, and that the courtroom be cleared of all spectators.

Then Gamaliel addressed the Sanhedrin. He spoke as a man of common sense, full of potent memories of past movements and movements of the people. His argument stands today, as it did that afternoon, beyond the dialectics of reason:

"Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what you intend to do, as touching these men.

I say to you, refrain from these men, and let them alone; for if this council or this work be of men, it will come to nought; but if it be of God, you cannot overthrow it, lest perhaps you be found even to fight against God."

And the Sanhedrin consented. They did decide to release the Christians. But as balm to their egotistic pride, they ordered all twelve prisoners to be whipped with a doubled strap of cowhide, scourging their bared backs and breasts, for each thirty-nine blows in all, and thirteen of them in front.

The apostles did not flinch from their flogging. The pain and the blood did not make them cringe and plead for mercy. Each could remember that Jesus had clearly warned them all these things would surely happen. "The servant is not greater than the Master." If the judges were cruel to the Master, they would be no kinder to those who loved Him and served Him.

In their mind's ear the apostles heard again the words of the Lord: "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

All bloody and beaten, Peter and John and those others were hauled back before the Sanhedrin to hear a final admonition.

They were to stop preaching. They must never again tell the parables about Jesus, the crucified, who rose from the dead to save the souls of men, even the commonest men in the filthy gutters or Jerusalem or even the judges of the Sanhedrin.

Luke tells us the apostles' reply, nothing in words but vivid in action:

"And they indeed went from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were accounted worthy to suffer reproach for the Name of Jesus."

And daily in the Temple — and in the houses of their friends and of all those who wished to hear — "They ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ."

ENCUMBRANCES?

Certainly, the gentleman is carrying "burdens that impede action," but encumbrances have quite a different meaning to the executor of an estate.

Every business has its own language and its own procedure. An individual fa- l with estate administration for the first time will lose w- uable time in acquainting himself with the various steps that must be taken. Costly delays may result while your best friend is learning how to be executor of your estate.

Hastings County Farm Forum

On Monday night, November 16, three farmers met to talk about "The Cost of Dairy Substitutes." Brookdale at the home of Harry Lott; Foxboro at James Reynold's and Hazzard's at R. M. Broad's.

(1) Results of widespread limitation dairy products; (1) Agricultural economy would be thrown out of balance; (3) there would be another rush from farm to city; (3) farmers would turn to cash crops which would flood the market; (4) number of dairy cows would be decreased, causing a lack of soil fertility; (5) there is a danger if this trend were to continue our own country might be faced with a shortage of even fluid milk—then where would we get our supply of calcium and other necessary elements for perfect health?

Results to the urban consumer: (1) He might go hungry by lack of employment, if the dairy farmers' equipment and supplies were cut off many would be thrown out of work; (2) health would deteriorate.

(II) What can the farmer do? (1) See that our product is good; the best we can produce, top quality first and advertise more; (2) speak more of our good products, last limitation products, which get enough advertising; (3) have our farm business management—produce at less cost by improved pastures and grass silage; (4) change method of testing; butterfat testing doesn't tell the whole story; (5) refuse to use any dairy imitations; (6) stress the health value of milk.

(III) All three forums agreed we should have stricter provincial laws, and (1) Make it illegal to imbibit sales of any limitation dairy product and to control importation of vegetable oils. Foxboro says "Margarine should not be advertised as fresh churned daily; that is strictly a dairy term."

Brookdale didn't agree with the panel discussion; vegetable oils are not nutritional to take the milk products. Also they took exception to the statement that we grow soy beans for oil. Where grown they are used for food. Our Canada has right for growing these oils and the only way we can get them is import them.

Northern Electric Hockey League

Two games were played in the N.E. Inter-Department hockey league over the week end with the Idiots downing the Elbow Benders 6-3 and the Jerks crushing the Dragnets by the score of 9-3.

Dave Jones continues to lead the Idiots on the win trail with a pair of goals and three assists while Brant and Philp claimed two goals each. Philp and Cregan helped out one each. For the E.B.'s it was Murphy with one and two, Bone and Semark netting the others.

Wardhaugh hit the twine on three occasions to lead the Jerks to victory, Pete Jones and Gregory banged in a couple markers while Belsop and Lytch got the odd ones. Salter with two and Woodly were the Dragnets goal getters as Yorks had two assists.

Not All U-Boats But Only Ten Given to Reds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A defence department spokesman says Secretary Wilson didn't mean it literally when he said that, after the Second World War, "We were dumb enough to turn over the whole German submarine fleet to the Russians."

The spokesman said Monday, in commenting on a story in the Washington Star, that Wilson meant giving some submarines to Russia supplied the Reds with technical data vital to building their present formidable fleet.

The Star said Wilson's recent statement was disputed by government records which show that, of 233 U-boats, 22 were scuttled and 213 destroyed by the Allies, with the remainder going 10 each to the United States, Britain and Russia. It said Russia may have got hold of 15 or so more on its own.

VANISHED YOUTH

I walked with youth beside me
Through many a changing year,
No winter days were dreary
With youth beside to cheer;
Though through the road and weary,
He gently led the way,
A comrade bright and cheery
To gild the darkest day.

We feared no heavy burdens,
No jask was e'er too great,
We bravely faced the future
With heart for fate and mate;
But one lone day I missed him,
This comrade bright and gay,
I wondered, oh, I wondered
When he had slipped away.

Or was it that I left him
Far down the fading years?
The scene of that sad parting
How dimly it appears!
But somewhere I shall greet him,
For have we not been told
Of a land of endless Springtime
Where none will e'er grow old!

Mrs. E. Musclow Guest Speaker At W.C.T.U.

The November meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held at the "Y" with a good attendance.

A welcome was extended by the president, Mrs. Ella Bowerbank with "All Saints Day", a day of remembrance since the 6th century.

National Remembrance Day, November 11th, is the 35th memory day of remembrance for those who gave their lives in battle, in the hope of making possible a peaceful world.

Mrs. Ray Lockyer had charge of the devotional period. She quoted the hymn "Take Time to Be Holy" enlarging and explaining each verse. She also read an article from the Readers Digest, "An Unforgettable Character".

The guest speaker, Mrs. B. C. Musclow, gave a report of the recent girls camp held at Lake Consecon. She outlined the theme for a day, showing how camp life with fun, recreation, Bible and social study, makes an appeal to our youth and provides a very satisfying holiday.

Mrs. Musclow is very active in Young People's work and runs the evangelism.

Mr. F. R. Potts, chief psychologist for the Reform Institutions Department told a meeting of the legislature's Select Committee on Reform Institutions, "alcohol is a basic cause of the offences of nearly half the inmates in Ontario's reformatories; and that about 45 per cent of the 8,000 who go to reformatories and industrial farms each year could trace back their trouble to some extent to drink".

He outlined the efforts being made to cure inmates who were out-and-out alcoholics. They could volunteer for treatment at the alcoholics' clinic at Mimico Reformatory for the last month of their sentence or they could join Alcoholics Anonymous.

The Mimico clinic, Mr. Potts said, was the first of its kind in the world. Patients have lectures, take antabuse and generally undergo treatment similar to Shadowbrook Health Foundation.

Morley and Gearhart Thrill Hearers in Variety Concert

(By EUGENE LANG)

One of the most enjoyable and entertaining evenings of music to be heard in many a year was presented by the Belleville Community Concert Association Monday night in the person of Morley and Gearhart, duo-pianists, who made their local debut in the Collegiate Auditorium before a packed house of local and district musical devotees. This very talented and gifted young couple, Mr. and Mrs. in private life, have cut a path like a musical tornado wherever they have appeared, leaving audiences spellbound and aghast at their performances on the two concert grand Steinway Pianos that they have transported with them over the length and breadth of Canada and the United States.

The art of two piano playing requires a lot more than meets the eye and ear of an audience. To be successful in this field of music demands from each participant the highest degree of coordination in feeling towards the individual approach in regard phrasing, tempo —and rhythmic control, keyboard dynamics, and timing, and split second attacks—these, to mention only a few of the necessary attributes for successful projections from two independent minds and bodies. It takes thousands of hours of intense and arduous practice upon the part of both players to bring forth a finished and highly perfected result such as Morley and Gearhart have attained in their years of concertizing, here and abroad. Their interpretations are not only the feelings of two people blended in real life such as they are, but also wedded in musical life into a soul melding of surety, strength and sagacity in which they honestly abound.

PROGRAM CAREFULLY CHOSEN

Their program was carefully chosen and arranged to suit practically any kind of musical taste. Their opening number, an arrangement for two pianos of Bach's powerful and majestic chorale prelude "In Dir ist Freude" (In Thee is Joy) was that of stability and solidarity equally projected from both keyboards. Then followed Seven Variations by Saint-Saens upon a theme of Beethoven, the theme in this instance being the trio section from the Sonata in E Flat, Op. 31, No. 3 of the German master. As could be expected from the pen of a virtuoso-composer as Saint-Saens was, the two artists had ample opportunity to display their pianistic prowess, every aspect ranging from glittering arpeggios to breathtaking runs and trills, skips and full chord clusters. For a few moments of quiet repose the two artists then softly and tenderly played their own piano arrangement of the highly romanticized slow movement of the Second Piano Concerto in F Minor of Chopin. Even though titled Nocturne-Fantaisie on the program, this took a very few bars until one realized that it was the Chopin of the Concerto that was being so beautifully articulated in this sensitive arrangement.

REFRATED NUMBER

Eclipses of the sun are more frequent that that Belleville audiences are so "taken" by a piece at a Community Concert that their continued applause demands a repeat, but such was the case when Morley and Gearhart finished their short and vivacious rendition of the carefree and spicy Can Can from "Galte Parisienne" of Offenbach. That, in itself is a feather in the cap of Mr. and Mrs. Gearhart.

Ravel's impressionistic "Pieces en forme de Habanera" and Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue from his Concerto in F brought the first half of the concert to a close. The Gershwin opus just teems with brilliant and difficult passages that the artists tossed back and forth with seemingly effortless ease.

Four scheduled numbers were heard after intermission, each in itself, with the exception of one, carved out of another medium and most effectively transposed to that of two pianos. The Duettino Concertato of Mozart is in reality the last movement of that composer's Piano Concerto in F Major (K. 459), a work of infectious homophonic charm combined with skilful, non-pedantic craftsmanship. It need only be said that the Gearharts here applied the utmost of clarity and glittering precision in each work, a must in any musical piano selection. Rheinhold Gliere's boisterous Sailor's Dance from the "Red Poppy" was a virtuosic eye catcher in complete contrast to Arensky's pensive and lyrical Valse from his First Suite for two pianos, this last being an original work for two pianos.

GAY IN NEW GARB

Franz Liszt's renowned Second Hungarian Rhapsody, an old war horse of the first order was admirably dressed up in two piano attire and looked as gay as ever in its new found garb. Audiences naturally go wholeheartedly for this old favorite.

Tumultuous applause demanded four encores and these were graciously given. Two popular tunes of Jerome Kern and George Gershwin arranged by Mr. Gearhart for twenty fingers were individual stylings that bespoke taste and tact in their performance by these Siamese Twins of the keyboard. Another unusual offering was their own pot-pourri in modern vein on "Three Blind Mice." Such a stirring and lovely "You, Joy of Man's Desiring" in a two piano transcription brought the encores to a close. Informality is attained by both Mr. and Mrs. Gearhart talking turns with informative and witty commentary on the compositions that they perform. This seemed to gain the stamp of approval of the audience for its down-to-earth appeal.
